LEAVE DOUGLAS SATURDAY NIGHT

First and Fourth Regiment Men Singing "Home, Sweet Home."

RALSTON IS RELEASED

Discharges For Butterfield and Andrews Also Came—Only Five Non-Commissioned Officers Left In Troop D.

(By James J. McNamee.)

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 1.—For the first time in many long, hot weeks the men of the First and Fourth New Jersey regiments, without exception are singing as they go about their work today. They are singing any song that appeals to the individual mind, but every few minutes there can be heard rising strong and clear above the other melodies the tender notes of "Home, Sweet Home."

The boys are going home, and the work that is being done is the taking down of tents, the packing of equipment and the loading of the train that is to carry them back to New Jersey soil. They are as happy as a bunch of kids getting ready for the first Sunday school picnic of the year, and if General Funston decides to repeal the order that is sending them to Sea Girt, he had better telegraph his repeal. I would hate to foretell the fate of the man who read it to them.

Cars for the journey home are promised in the railway yards here Saturday morning, and the men expect to be under way before Saturday night. Troop D is not going with them and while its men rejoice at the good fortune of their comrades, they are a little blue today with thoughts of more weeks here. Discontent cannot live among the men who make up the troop, and after they see the train pull out Saturday they will go back to their work cheerfully.

Discharges are thinning the ranks of non-commissioned officers in the troop. Now there are but five left. First Sergeant Brown Rolston, Corporal Marson I. Butterfield and Sergeant Austin A. Andrews this morning received notice that their application for discharge had been granted. This makes eight non-commissioned officers of the troop released within a week. The men will probably leave for home on the First Regiment train, which goes tomorrow night. Others who received discharges today were Corporal George Romain, of Company C; Seageant Kenneth Stuart, of Troop C; Corporal Henry Fielfliesch, Company E, and Sergeant John Lamb, Company M.

LOCAL DELEGATES PLAN TO ATTEND HEBREW CONVENTION

Three Plainfield men will go to Newark next Monday and Tuesday to attend the fifth annual convention of the Associated Young Men's and Women's Hebrew Associations of New Jersey. The delegates will be Irving Kuntzman, Samuel Pethberg and Nathaniel Krauthamer, while the alternates will be Charles Kurtzman, Abraham Swartz and Arthur Richard.

The convention will open at 2:30 Monday and during the afternoon there will be numerous addresses by noted Jews. The second session on the following day will be really the business meeting. Among the matters to be discussed will be the inviting of the rabbis of the State to co-operate with the religious department of the association in adopting a regular program of religious study.

STOKES WILL BE A REPORTER.

Trenton, Sept. 1.—Former Governor Edward C. Stokes will be the correspondent of a New York newspaper during the Maine campaign, which will end with the election September 12. Mr. Stokes' reportorial efforts will be in the nature of special articles on the progress of the fight. He recently withdrew from the race for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

PARALYSIS VICTIM.

Fanwood's first paralysis victim to succumb to the disease was reported today when Sophia Fikora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Figora, of Terrill road, died of the plague. The child, who was in its fourth year, had been ill since Monday. After Dr. Ray Munger injected serum it seemed to slightly improve but the disease had advanced too far. Funeral services will be private.

SMALL FIRE.

The fire department was called out at 9:25 this morning to extinguish a blaze in an empty shed in the rear of Morris Kuntzman's grocery store on West Second street. The blaze was started by children playing with a fire, but a stream of water put it out with $100 damage.

DEATH OF INFANT.

J. Hobart Comer, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Comer, passed away at the home of his parents on Maple avenue, South Plainfield, this morning. Interment will be made tomorrow at Bridgeton.

EXPLOSION CAUSES PANIC AT SOMERVILLE

Blasting In Duke's Park Leads to Belief That Something Terrible Has Happened.

Residents of Somerville and Raritan were thrown into a state of panic about 8:30 o'clock this morning, when there was an explosion of unusual violence that seemed to shake that entire section. Men, women and children rushed into the street, all anxiously inquiring the cause of the explosion. One person, noticing a cloud of smoke near the Waldorf Hotel, thought that the building was on fire, and sent in an alarm calling out the fire department.

An investigation disclosed the fact that the explosion was caused by the blowing out of large stumps in Duke's Park, an unusal quantity of dynamite being used for the purpose. It was the cloud of smoke arising after the explosion that led to the belief that the Waldorf Hotel was on fire. No one was injured, neither was there any damage.

HOME RULE LEAGUE ARRANGES MEETINGS

This committee is composed of William Dela Roche Anderson, Mayor W. L. Smalley and Charles Roberts. The committee this morning announced that the following dates for meetings had been decided upon: September 8, Watchung township; September 9, Warren township; September 11, Somerville; September 12, Millstone; September 13, Franklin Park; September 29, Peapack-Gladstone. Speakers of prominence in the Republican party in New Jersey will be secured.

MRS. ROBERT WALPOLE DIES IN 83D YEAR

Aged Resident of Scotch Plains Succumbs to Lingering Illness.

Mrs. Anne Walpole, aged eighty-three years, wife of Robert Walpole, one of the most respected residents of Scotch Plains, died at her home there yesterday afternoon, after a lingering illness and infirmities of old age. She was born in Halifax, Yorkshire, England, coming to this country in 1883, and had lived at Scotch Plains for sixty years.

Before coming to this country, the deceased married Anthony Dobbin, and the couple removed to Scotch Plains, where they continued to live with the exception of a short time spent at Kearny. It was at the latter place that Mr. Dobbin died. Afterward Mrs. Dobbin returned to Scotch Plains and married Mr. Walpole, one of the oldest residents and a well-known veteran of the Civil War. He celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday anniversay on August 16 last, while Mrs. Walpole observed her birthday anniversary on August 20, at which time the events were marked by a family gathering and the aged couple were pleasantly remembered.

Mrs. Walpole's illness became serious two weeks ago, since which time she failed rapidly. She was one of the charter members of the Baptist church at Kearny, and took an active part in all departments, including the Ladies' Circle. For many years it was her custom to entertain the women of the church at a picnic at her Scotch Plains home. There survives two sons, Thomas and Anthony Dobbin, of Newark, and a daughter, Mrs. Harriet Brash, who lived at home. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, and interment will be at that place.

GARRISONS SURRENDER

Turn Forts Over to Committee In Charge of Government—Bulgaria Declares War On Roumania—Czar's Army On Danube.

London, Sept. 1.—King Constantine is reported on high authority to have abdicated the Greek throne. The report telegraphed from Saloniki adds that Crown Prince George has been appointed Regent. Another dispatch from Saloniki reports the surrender of the Greek garrisons of Saloniki, Vodene and Fort Little to a committee which has taken over the administration of a part of Greek Macedonia.

Russian Gain for England.

New York, Sept. 1.—A dispatch from London says it is almost certain that Russian Grain will be available in large quantities before the end of the season. The indication is that European and Asiatic Russia will secure a harvest of 90,000,000 quarters—720,000,000 bushels—which is well above the average of the last ten years.

Bulgaria Declares Against Roumania

London, Sept. 1.—Bulgaria has declared war on Roumania. This information was contained in a dispatch received from Saloniki today.

Russians Reach the Danube.

London, Sept. 1.—The Czar's troops are about ready today on the Danube line to strike at Bulgaria.

In conjunction with this blow Russian warships have been assembled at Constanza, the principal Roumanian port on the Black Sea.

Bulgaria fears a combined land and sea attack on Varna, which seems probable in the near future.

Fighting in general on the 400-mile front between the Roumanian armies and the retreating Austro-Hungarians, who have decided to surrender to the invaders all of Transylvania and retreat to a second defence line. This will give the Roumanians possession of about 15,000 square miles of territory, an area greater than that of Belgium. In crossing the Danube and occupying Rustschuk, the Roumainans get a railroad junction from which they may advance east to Varna or southwest to Sofia, the Bulgarian capital.

BAUER AND M'LEOD SEEK SUPPORT HERE

Edward Bauer, deputy county registrar, and Neil McLeod, of Elizabeth, who are candidates for the county clerkship on the Republican ticket, were in Plainfield yesterday calling on friends. Both appeared to be optimistic over the outlook and the friends of each feel sure that their favorite son will get the nomination and be elected.

Mr. Bauer's supporters point with considerable pride to the fact that so many lawyers throughout the country have signed his petition. The list includes about twenty attorneys in this city. Mr. Bauer's petition will be the last one to be filed for the Republican nomination, both McLeod and Colonel William B. Martin having submitted their lists to County Clerk A. P. Morris.

"HUMAN ENERGY" IS SUBJECT OF TALK

George A. Keene Addresses Members of I. C. S. Fraternity.

"Human Energy" was the subject of an interesting talk given by George A. Keene, before the members and friends of Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World, in the "Frat" rooms, Frost building, last night. Mr. Keene was introduced by Harry Swivel, president of the chapter. In part Mr. Keene said:

"Are you a sour face? If you are the only advice I can give you is don't, don't, don't. The 'sour face' is never a worth while success, or efficient in anything he undertakes. You owe it to your boss, employer, customers, friends, husbands, wives, sweethearts, or the work you have in hand to cultivate health, strength, smiling nerves, blood, muscles and countenance.

"The human body is a most wonderful machine, which possesses the power to convert fuel—air, food and drink into energy, calling on or expending that energy as necessary, building up new nerves, muscles, bones, arteries, veins, teeth, eyes, cartilages and individual cells in both brain and body, and eliminating the waste or worn out matter automatically.

"Your breathing is the most important of your life. If you breathe and rebreathe foul, sour, disease-breeding air, you charge the entire physique with these inefficiency and health destroying poisons. There are six hundred millions of air cells in the lungs and they require vast amounts of oxygen, ozone, vapor and four hundred and fifty gallons of nitrogen every twenty-four hours, in order to build a body of smiling, obstacle overcoming and success breeding cells in both body and brain.

"When you go to an eating house and partake of unbalanced, sour foodstuffs, your stomach, nerves, digestive orans and assimilative apparatus quickly lose their smile, and when they do they kick so hard that the face cannot give expression to a happy, efficient, success winning battle.

"You cannot fill your stomach, blood, body and rain with your sour, grouchy, inefficient, success destroying germs and expect to develop a high state of physical and mental preparedness against disease and failure.

"Your carriage of body and spine must be perfect from the tip of your nose to the tips of your toes. Every nerve, muscle, bone, cartilage and vital organ should be held up in its normal position to allow them to be strong and efficient. Your feet must be well set—toes pointing straight front, with the weight of the body carried on the balls of both feet, in order to prevent spinal curvature.

"If people would get rid of their 'sour faces' and cultivate a set of strong, virile, smiling nerves and faces their vital organs would become so changed with health and smile germs that they would radiate health, harmony and success continually."

The forming of an Anti-Sourface Class was discussed by the members to be under the direction of Mr. Keene, the originator of this work, who will instruct the club members how to overcome any unsmiling or uneducated nerves, muscles and vital organs. Outsiders are cordially invited to join.

Mr. Keene used a manikin to illustrate his lecture and at the close the boys responded to their yell.

WILL RESUMT DANCES.

The municipal dances will be resumed at the Washington School tomorrow night and continued every Saturday throughout the coming season, under the direction of the West End Community Centre, of which Joseph Edgar is chairman. Squire's orchestra wil furnish the music. The dancing will begin at 8:15. Those in charge have planned for several interesting features on the opening night, and the auditorium will be attractively decorated.

PORCH FURNITURE STOLEN.

The large number of thefts of porch furniture from residences throughout the city during the past few weeks have led the police to think there is a band operating and several clues are now being run down.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town, INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

COX REFUSES TO BE A CANDIDATE

Action of Third Ward Club Causes Him to Reconsider.

WITHDRAWS HIS NAME

Accepted On Solicitation of Mayor Calkins, But He Had Not Read Local Paper Then—Telegrams He Has Sent.

Councilman Robert M. Cox has reversed his decision regarding the race in the Third ward, and will not permit his name to go before the voters as a candidate for re-election. News of this latest decision was received in Plainfield this morning in a telegram addressed to John J. Carroll, president of the Third Ward Republican Club.

Between the time that he received a telegram from Mayor Calkins urging him to run and that when he filed the message of this morning Councilman Cox received a copy of a Plainfield paper. The Press circulates on the border among New Jersey soldiers, and probably in it he read an account of the Third Ward Republican Club meeting of a short time ago, at which the suggestion that he be indorsed precipitated a spirited discussion of the manner of selecting candidates, and was finally lost. The indifference of Third ward voters to his record in the Common Council and his probable candidacy for re-election carried more weight with Mr. Cox than the solicitation of Mayor Calkins.

It was known before he left Plainfield to go to the border that he did not want to run again, and his friends were afraid that not even the Mayor would be able to persuade him. Last week President Carroll wired Mr. Cox asking whether or not he would permit his name to go before the voters in the primaries. His reply was delayed, but it came yesterday morning. It follows:

"Telegram received. If Leighton Calkins is to run for Mayor and wants me in the Council I will be glad to run. Do not know when we will be sent home. COX."

That was before Mr. Cox had received news of the Third Ward Republican Club meeting, however. Today Mr. Carroll received the following telegram:

"It was my wish not to run this year. After the action taken at the Third Ward Republican Club meeting I would be glad to have my name withdrawn. COX."

The only candidate for the Republican nomination for Council from the Third ward is G. Herbert Condict, who is opposed to the granting of saloon licenses. It is said that the Republican city organization will put a man in the field against Mr. Condict.

In reply to a letter advising him of the action of the Third Ward Republican Club at its last meeting Secretary Charles Osborn received a communication from Leighton Calkins, mailed from Massachusetts, in which he says:

"I have yours of the 28th advising me of the unanimous indorsement of the Third Ward Republican Club. I appreciate this unsought expression of confidence, which I shall try to merit if re-elected. I have decided that I am under obligation to be a candidate, and have so announced. I remain yours faithfully.

"LEIGHTON CALKINS."

Mayor Calkins refers in his last sentence to the telegram he sent to Chairman John J. Carroll, of the City Republican Committee, last Tuesday agreeing to seek the Republican nomination for Mayor.

CHARLES BRIGHTON STRUCK BY AUTO, SLIGHTLY INJURED

ADAMSON BILL WILL GO BEFORE BOTH HOUSES TODAY; WILSON IS ASSURED IT WILL BECOME LAW

CONGRESS COMMITTEE AMENDS MEASURE TO MAKE EIGHT-HOUR DAY EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1, 1917.

TROUBLE AHEAD IN THE SENATE IS FEARED

Reed Smoot Is Man Union Leaders Expect to Launch Filibuster—Special Rule Sets Consideration For 4 o'Clock This Afternoon—President Will Go to Shadow Lawn For Notification Ceremonies Tomorrow.

Washington, September 1.—At 4 o'clock this afternoon the Adamson bill, which provides an eight hour day with pay for ten hours for all employes of railroads doing an interstate business, will be taken up in both the Senate and House. It will be passed immediately in the House, and while some opposition is expected in the Senate, leaders have promised President Wilson that it will be ready for his signature in time to avert the railroad strike called for Monday.

At noon both Houses adopted a special rule which will permit the bill to come up at 4 p. m.

This morning the House committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce ordered a favorable report on the bill. The committee, however, amended the bill so as to make it operative on January 1, 1917, instead of December 1, 1916, as originally drawn. The committee also excepted employes of electric railroads from its provision. It is said that the two amendments put an end to any serious opposition in the House.

Shortly after President Wilson left the Capitol this morning, Senator Simmons announced that finishing touches had been put on the Senate bill. Republican leaders asked that they be given the right to review it before its introduction and this necessitated delay. After they had read the bill, the Republican Senators went into conference with Senator Gallinger, minority leader.

The Adamson bills have been approved by the railway unions, which insist, however, they must be passed and signed by the President before Saturday night.

The President will spend considerable time today in the Capitol, urging the passage of the measure. Later he will go to Shadow Lawn his summer capital in New Jersey, for the notification ceremonies. The bills, if passed, will be rushed to him by special messenger and he will affix his signature to them tomorrow afternoon in time to avert the rail road tie-up.

Unions Fear Senator Smoot.

The House is secure; the Senate is still doubtful. Asked whom the feared in the Senate, "Old Man Garretson" responded for all.

"We fear men who don't want to understand our claims, who have nothing mentally in common with the working man."

When Garretson was asked to be more specific, he replied: "Well we might be talked to death by some Senators I have in mind just now."

The Senators Garretson had in mind are Smoot, Gallinger and Nelson. The brotherhoods fear Reed Smoot more than any man in either the House or the Senate. Smoot has the reputation of fearing no man—not even the head of the Mormon Church. It is his dogmatism that Garretson most fears.

"If he ever gets started, he's a man of great lung power," said Garretson. "I see a long delay and, for me, a conscience that at this time must be prompt or surrender the good name acquired in thrity years' devotion to the cause of labor."

Guardsmen Order Not Reduced.

The 15,000 National Guardsmen who have been ordered from the border to their State mobilization points will be held under Federal control for the time being, at least. The order for their return has not been rescinded. There is no change in their legal status.

Railroads to Contest Bill.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Presidents of three Western railroads said today that passage of the Adamson compromise Eight-Hour Bill probably would postpone a trainmen's strike, but it would not settle the matter, and they admitted that such legislation would be far from satisfactory to the railroads.

"The railroads would take no precipitate action if the bill were passed," said Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, who was spokesman for the railway managers with President Wilson, "but we certainly would not allow an illegal law to stand if we can help it."

CHARLES FRELIGH WILL ENTER BUS IN PARADE

Charles Freligh, of the Astor Theatre, has received word from the managers of the Mardi Gras at Coney Island that his proposal to enter a bus, representing Palinfield and the Loyal Order of Moose in the annual parade and carnival had been accepted. He has been given instructions to appear at 8 p. m. on the evening of September 11. Permission was also granted him to enter the bus in the events that follow during the week.

Mr. Freligh has completed arrangements whereby a local bus will be attractively decorated with bunting and the national colors. This bus, in company of two others which will be used only as a means of conveyance, will bear two signs, one boosting the Moose and the other boosting Plainfield. The slogan of the party will be "Boost Plainfield," and it is the intention of the local people to let Coney Island know whence they come. According to Mr. Freligh, there is still plenty of room for Plainfielders who wish to make the trip. The Mardi Gras is an annual event and is well worth witnessing. In addition to having a good time, those who go can do a little towards advertising Plainfield.

RELIEF AT HOME

What One Society Woman Does For Soldiers' Families.

$10,000 RAISED FOR NEEDY.

New Yorkers Organize to Prevent Hardships Among the Children and Wives of National Guardsmen While They Do Their Duty on the Border.

At the first meeting of the executive committee of the newly formed active service auxiliary of the national guard of New York, held in the Seventy-first regiment armory recently, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, wife of Colonel Vanderbilt, was elected chairman, Mrs. John F. O'Ryan, wife of Major General O'Ryan, vice chairman, Nicholas Biddle treasurer and R. K. Forsyth executive secretary.

Under the plan of organization adopted there will be branch organizations at every armory in the state, with local committees made up of wives of officers.

Mrs. Vanderbilt said she would see that $10,000 is raised for the immediate needs of the families of guardsmen who have gone to the border or are living in armories.

She was authorized by the committee to send out a call for a general conference of two representatives from every relief organization carrying on a similar work.

Fifty cases have been handled so far by the new organization. The majority of cases are of young wives with small children in need of food. Out of the fifty applicants only five were mothers whose sons had left them without means of support.

The picture shows Mrs. Vanderbilt distributing funds to needy families.

NEW WEDDING RING.

To Be Up to Date Your Ring Must Be Double.

For the autumn bride there is a new sort of wedding ring. To the casual eye it appears to be just the ordinary gold circlet, heavy yet narrow, as fashionable wedding rings are now. An adroit twist of the fingers, however, and, behold, the ring becomes two rings, the rounded edges at the outer side and a flat surface within. On this flat surface the bridegroom may have engraved a secret inscription of sentiment, which nobody but the bride—and himself, of course—will ever be able to read unless some one discovers the trick of opening the ring. The best wedding ring is of fourteen carat gold, heavy and solid and not too wide. Very wide wedding rings have gone out of fashion, and the modish band is narrow and well rounded at the outer side. A ring of eighteen carat gold has a beautiful color, but will not wear as well as the fourteen carat ring, and, of course, a ring that is never removed from the hand is apt to have hard usage, to come into contact with surfaces that would scratch or dent any metal not very hard in itself.

Fall Millinery.

The array of styles in all white hats, especially in satin, is astonishingly large. The present novelty, however, is the reappearance of medium and small shapes. Turbans are likewise represented. In these a new model with the brim arranged in five peaks is especially noteworthy. For early fall wear feather trimmings and ribbons share first honors. Pasted breast, bird, wing and quill effects are all represented. From present indications the early fall hats are to be subdued in color, with emphasis chiefly on black, a new chocolate shade of brown and the ever popular navy. Among the novelty shades are the new bordeaux red, a soft, dull gray and a deep purple.

Latest Topcoats.

Separate coats are still quite full. Belts begin on the inside of the coat and appear outside at unexpected places, usually fastening in the front. It will be the usual rather than the unusual thing to find the strap buckle fastening instead of buttons. But when buttons are employed there seems to be no limit to the numbers. Cheruit is using alpaca for toppers, and when lined with an effective silk it makes a most attractive coat. This is to be used for between seasons, however.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property, that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

WED BENEATH FLORAL BOWER

Miss Hazel Runyon Bride of Leslie E. Latham at Church Ceremony.

A RECEPTION FOLLOWS

Rev. Ernest R. Brown Officiates—Plainfieldites Among Attendants—Couple to Reside in Dunellen After Honeymoon.

Miss Hazel Louise Runyon, daughter of Mrs. Ernestine Berkheiser and Leslie Ernest Latham, son of Mayor and Mrs. E. S. Latham, both of Dunellen, were married at 8 o'clock last night at the Presbyterian church, Rev. Ernest R. Brown the pastor, officiating in the presence of nearly three hundred relatives and friends of the couple.

The bridal party entered the church while the Lohengrin Wedding March was being played by Robert E. Hampston, church organist. Preceding were the ushers, Henry Parks, of Plainfield; Edgar Starker, John Campbell and William T. Piddington, Jr., of Dunellen. They were followed by Miss Cornelia Berkheiser, sister of the bride, as flower girls; the maid of honor, Miss Hazel Beekman Cregar, of Bound Brook and the bride, accompanied by her grandfather, George F. Giles.

The party was met at the alter by the bridegroom and his best man, A. Tredwell Slauson, of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, the single ring ceremony being used.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin and princess lace with court train. She wore a silk tulle veil. Her only ornament was a necklace of pearl beads. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and rosebuds. The maid of honor wore a gown of charmeuse, Georgette crepe, prune velvet and metallic lace with a picture hat of chiffon and velvet. Miss Berkheiser was gowned in white and carried a shower bouquet. The bride's mother wore a gown of lavender charmeuse with silver lace.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at "The Linden," the home of the bridegroom's parents, being attended by about two hundred guests. The spacious lawn was illuminated with hundreds of electric lights and the porch with myriads of small colored lights. Following congratulations an elaborate supper was served.

The bride received a wealth of wedding gifts from relatives and friends, all being greatly admired by the guests. The bride's gift to her maid of honor was a cameo brooch and to the flower girl, a gold bracelet. The bridegroom's presents to his best man and ushers were pins and cuff buttons to match.

The decorations at the church were arranged by Charles L. Stanley, the Plainfield florist. They consisted of palms, ferns, Southern smilax and all the season's flowers all banked about the pupit and platform.

Later in the evening the couple left on a wedding trip. For the next month they will tour through the New England States and two weeks at Kennebago, Me., and from there will go to Canada. They will be at home on November 1, their new home being on Prospect avenue, between Walnut and Grove streets. Mr. and Mrs. Latham are popular among the younger set. Mr. Latham is connected with the firm of E. B. Latham & Co., of New York, electrical supplies, his father being senior member of the firm.

Mrs. James F. Teeling and daughter, Miss Blanche, are visiting friends at Dunfield. From there they will go to Marxsboro. They will be away three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Smith, of Front street, left today for a visit among friends at Reading, Allentown and Walnuttown, Pa. They will be gone a week.

AUGUST RAINFALL TOTALED 1.28 INCHES

Remarkable Decrease In Precipitation As Compared With Same Month of 1888.

An extremely light rainfall in August is a marked feature of Weather Prophet John Neagle's report for that month, as compared with the rainfall in August, 1888. In the latter month it was 10.53 inches, while last month it totaled only 1.28 inches. The greatest twenty-four-hour rainfall in 1888 was 5.72 inches, while the least twenty-four-hour rainfall in 1916 was 0.60 inches.

Mr. Neagle's statistical report follows:

Temperature — Mean maximum, 83.5; mean minimum, 62.6; mean or average, 73.0; normal, 72.1. Highest temperature, 94 degrees, on the 22d and 23d; lowest temperature, 48 degrees, on the 29th. Greatest daily range, 35, on the 25th; least daily range, 9, on the 11th.

Precipitation — Total precipitation, 1.28 inches; normal precipitation, 4.87 inches; greatest in 24 hours, 0.60 inches, on the 8th, which fell in one hour and eight minutes; number of rainy days, 9; number of days clear, 17; partly cloudy, 12; cloudy, 3; thunderstorms on 8th, 12th, 23d, 27th and 28th; fog on 16th and 17th. Wind was southwest.

ELIZABETH MEN IN SUPPORT OF COLGATE

200 Republicans Attend Meeting In His Honor and Urge His Nomination.

More than two hundred Republicans were present at a meeting arranged by Colonel Austen Colgate's Elizabeth supporters in the Republican head quarters, at 64 Broad street. Colgate lithographs bearing a likeness of the Essex legislator adorned the walls and literature presenting reasons why the colonel should be nominated were widely distributed.

Major Nelson P. Gaskell, of Trenton, former assistant attorney general of New Jersey, who had charge of the prosecution of the election fraud cases in Atlantic City six years ago, was one of the principal speakers, following immediately after Col. Colgate.

Col. Colgate laid stress on the fact that New Jersey is a great business organization, and its affairs should be administered by a business man. He also said that the road system of the State was sorely in need of improvement and that there is too much red tape connected with the office of the present road commissioner. He advocated the strengthening of the pure food laws, the advancement of child labor laws, the careful distribution of the State's revenues.

Major Gaskell, who drafted the original compensation act as well as the schedule of amendments introduced by Senator Colgate, in each of the last two sessions, asserted that Senator Edge, having put his hand to the plough, turned back. The speaker claimed that during a large part of the time when the original acts was in course of preparation by the commission, Senator Edge was in Europe and did not return until the final draft was ready for consideration. Giving Senator Edge full credit for the ability and energy which he displayed in the handling of the bill, upon the floor of the Senate, it still remains true, Mr. Gaskell declared, that, but for the support and votes of Senator Colgate and others, the bill could not have been passed.

ELIZABETH RE-VALUATION CAUSES MUCH DISSENTION

Dissatisfaction exists in Elizabeth administration circles, it became known today, with the work of the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes in fixing the assessed valuations on land and building improvements for the current fiscal year. It is said that the ratables will not show the anticipated advance, and fear is entertained that the increase will not yield large enough returns to cover the normal increase in municipal expenditures.

Complaint is made principally that the plan for equalizing the values on land has proven a failure. It is asserted that where the assessors have raised the valuations upon land they have reduced the assessments upon improvements in proportion, so that the total valuation shows little or no gain.

In order to remedy the matter a joint conference between Mayor Mravlag, Comptroller Collins, the finance committee of the City Council and the members of the Board of Assessment has been called for this week, but the time for holding it has been held up pending the recovery of Comptroller Collins from an attack of illness. The meeting will be held as soon as the Comptroller is able to attend.

Tokyo's Name.

Tokyo, Japan's capital, was not always known by that name. It was originally Yeddo (meaning estuary gate), but when the mikado took up his residence there in 1868 he rechristened the town Tokyo (meaning eastern capital), distinguishing it from Saikyo (meaning western capital), which town it practically superseded.

THOUSANDS WITNESS VANISHING SPEC.

All Hope of Aeronautical Rifle Practice at Sea Girt Is Abandoned.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 1.—Gazing into the haze to the south a little group of New Jersey naval reservists stood on the beach this morning and saw a fast vanishing speck in the sky disappear and take with it all hope of aeronautical rifle practice. The speck was a hydroplane containing Beryl C. Henrick, an aviator who had come here last night with Lieutenant J. Homer Stover in charge of the New Jersey aeronautical section, with the idea of trying out rifle shooting at a stationary target.

Hendrick showed little enthusiasm about the plan after he arrived and looked over the field, claiming that a boat could not fly at the low altitude required to shoot at the target with any safety. He finally consented to try the experiment with two men, Stover and one other. He said he would rise from the pond alone and go out to the ocean, where he would land again, and take in the riflemen. He started out, after sticking in the mud of the pond once, then landed on the ocean, off the rifle pits. He remained there a few moments, and then rose, turned his machine to the south, and that was the last seen of him. No effort will be made to complete the experiment this year.

Fully five thousand people waited for two hours on all sides of the big parade ground for the aeroplane, which was expected here for the practice yesterday afternoon. General Spencer had received word from Lieutenant Stover at 11:30 that Aviator Albert Heinrich, who had promised to come down from Garden City in the early morning, had engine trouble, and Stover promised that if another machine was to be had he would find it and bring it here in time. The crowd patiently waited until after 5, when they gradually dispersed.

Shortly before 6 word was received that the machine was on the way and would be here in less than a half hour, but every one but a few persistent youths, some newspaper men and the military men at the camp had departed, when a small boy shouted at 6:20 "There it comes." Every one had been watching the beach, and the machine came from inland. In five minutes, following graceful curves from a height of 7,000 feet, the airboat had circled down, and made a graceful landing alongside the reservation.

It had taken less than a half hour to fly from New York to Sea Girt. Stover had gone to the city and secured Beryl C. Kendrick, a Philadelphia clubman, who flew from Atlantic City to New York this morning. Kendrick agreed to come to Sea Girt, and had it not been for engine trouble which delayed them while floating on New York Bay for two hours, the exhibition would have been held yesterday afternoon as scheduled. Kendrick had attended a meeting of the New York Flying Boat Club, and Lieutenant Stover found him there.

The detail from the Naval Reserve which came down yesterday morning immediately put a guard about the boat, which was covered with canvas. Fully five hundred people gathered in five minutes to look the craft over.

U. S. TO HIT BACK AT ENGLAND FOR BLACKLIST

TO NAME HAY'S SUCCESSOR.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 1.—Arrangements have been completed for the holding of a special Democratic primary in the Seventh Virginia district tomorrow to nominate candidates to succeed Congressman Hay, who has resigned to accept appointment as a judge of the United States Court of Claims. State Senator Henry H. Downing, of Front Royal, will oppose Judge Thomas H. Harrison, of Winchester, for the new term beginning March 4; and State Senator Nat Early, of Greene, is a candidate against Judge Harrison for the unexpired term.

LONGEST GAME ANNIVERSARY

Boston, Mass., Sept. 1.—Boston baseball fans, whose enthusiasm at the present time is close to the boiling point, recalled today as the tenth anniversary of the longest game ever played in the major leagues. It was on this date in 1906 that the Red Sox and the Athletics battled twenty-four innings before the Athletics finally won the contest by a score of 4 to 1.

Washington, Sept. 1.—The United States government intends to make use of the power provided in the revenue and shipping bills to take retaliatory steps against Great Britain and other belligerent countries which place illegal restrictions on American trade with neutral countries. This was made clear today when Secretary of State Lansing said the provision inserted in each bill was submitted first to the State Department for approval.

CUBAN GIANTS MAY PLAY IN THIS CITY

Report Has It That Local Baseball Promoters Are Interested In Project.

According to reliable information, there is a movement on foot whereby the Cuban Giants, of New York and elsewhere, will perform in this city in a short time. The promoters of the idea are said to be local men, who are acting in co-operation with a Newark sportsman.

The Cuban Giants are considered the fastest Cuban team in this country, and a visit to this city would prove immensely popular. Just what team the Cubans will play when they arrive here is not known, but it is highly probable that the pick of the City League will compose the opposition.

The Cubans are at present busily engaged in playing baseball in and about New York and a short trip to this city would undoubtedly prove advantageous to them.

PUT MEAT UP--BLAME IT ON RAILROAD STRIKE

Wholesale meat dealers in Newark, taking advantage of the railroad embargo on shipments from the West, have advanced their price half a cent a pound.

Retailers declared the increase amounted to double that amount, and the wholesalers admitted charging sharper prices to "runners" and others not regular customers. Both the wholesalers and retailers predicted still higher prices for today.

N. Y. LIFTS BAN ON CHILDREN AT MOVIES

As another indication that his belief that the infantile paralysis epidemic is dying out, Health Commissioner Emerson has today recommended to Commissioner of Licenses Bell the modification of the order prohibiting children under sixteen from attending motion picture houses and other places of amusement. He will approve an order permitting children over twelve years to attend the theatres on and after Labor Day.

"In view of the progress we are making in the fight against the epidemic," said Dr. Bell, "it can be regarded as settled that the schools will open on the 25th. In order to be on the safe side, however, I have notified the Board of Education that a further postponement may be necessary, in which case an announcement will be made not later than September 11. It is the opinion of the Department of Health and the Medical Advisory Board that, unless something unforeseen occurs, no such announcement will be necessary."

TO HAVE NAVAL ACADEMY.

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 1.—The Republic of Cuba, which boasts a navy of twenty ships, is about to have an up to date naval academy for the training of her cadets in seamanship and sea fighting. The new naval academy, which is to be opened for the reception of its first class next week, is located at Mariel, a little seaport about twenty-five miles west of Havana, where the bay is large enough for such purposes and where other shipping is not sufficient to interfere. The celebrated Rubens Palace, built by the former New York lawyer who helped work out Cuba's legal tangles for the New York junta during revolutionary days, is to serve as the main edifice of the new school. Cuba desires to have several officers of the United States Navy among her instructors, and President Menocal has requested President Wilson to furnish them. She is anxious to have American naval officers for two branches, especially submarine and artillery. She does not boast a submarine yet in her fleet, but it is the present plan to purchase one or more of the undersea craft in the near future.

HEBREWS IN SESSION.

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 1.—Delegates representing fifty organizations scattered over five States gathered in Manchester today for the annual convention of the Associated Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations of New England. The convention is believed to be the largest gathering of Hebrew young people ever held in this country. Reports to be presented to the convention show that the activities of the organization during the past year have covered a wide field. During this period the association has inaugurated numerous religious schools for the instruction of Jewish children in Hebrew literature and Jewish history. It has established and maintained citizenship bureaus in many New England towns where Jewish immigrants and other aliens are taught the English language and American history and assisted in securing citizenship, and has organized and established an army and navy organization department, which is in close touch with the enlisted Jewish sailors and soldiers at the navy yards and military posts throughout New England.

OYSTERS ARE IN SEASON.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—"R" is again in the name of the month and the oyster season is open. According to all reports the succulent bivalves are expected to be good and plentiful this year. This should be a matter of rejoicing for the careful housewife, for oysters are the only food the price of which has not mounted skyward. Other necessities have been steadily soaring in cost during the last twenty-five years, and the war put another burden on the back of the consumer. But oysters are expected to be sold this winter for practically the same price as in the past. The food value of the oyster is exceptionally high. It is digestible, nutritious and wholesome almost as self sufficient as milk. Its value is much increased by cooking, the addition of the necessary starches and fats making it a perfectly balanced food.

SPECTACULAR FLYING AT MONMOUTH FAIR

Daylight Fireworks Another Big Feature of Exhibition at Red Bank.

Red Bank, N. J., Sept. 1.—With ideal weather and large crowds, the Monmouth Fair had a most auspicious opening yesterday. Harness racing and a horse show were the feature sport attractions, while the crowds were thrilled with the spectacular flying of Lawrence Brown, of New York, who looped the loop, flies upside-down and did other stunts in his aeroplane. A fine display of daylight fireworks and sensational performances on the large stage furnished other entertainment. A practical demonstration of fire fighting was also given by the Independent Engine Company's truck, which put out a burning building on the fair grounds.

The 2:14 pace featured the harness racing events. Ben Alie, the bay gelding driven by C. E. Pitman, of Trenton, equalled the fair track record by making the third heat in 2:10¼. The race, however, was won by Major A., owned by H. S. Crossman, of the Comsewogue Farm, Monroe, N. Y. Bobby Moreland, owned by the Boyland Bros., of East Orange, won the 2:20 trot in three straight heats, and Mr. Crossman's Robert Frisco captured the 2:19 pace, taking three out of five heats from Royal McKinney, driven by W. H. Leese, of the Brooklyn Riding Club.

In the horse show Walter Lewisohn showed the best farm team. Miss Ethel Field won the first cup and blue ribbon in the novice class with Stockgbridge, under 15.-, a black gelding. Miss Aundrey Riker won the egg and spoon race. Mrs. Pierre A. Proal, with Virgina Dare, brown mare, rode the best novice saddle horse over 15.1. George Morris, of Eatentown, exhibited the best stallion, Glen Cheerey. Howard S. Borden's Pinto, calico gelding, captured first prize in the polo pony class, and M. D. Bahberger, riding Skeeter, won the polo pony race. In the children's pony class in harness 13 hands and under, Miss Laura Harding's Humming Bird was first; Jesse L. Powers' Earl of Hirrisburg, second and Peter Hauck, Jr.'s Senator Jackson, third. Harry Rossback's The Squire, bay gelding, won in the jumpers' class; William Stonebridge's Middletown, second and M. D. Bamberger's Security, third.

Hard Life on Old Ships.

Naval men of today need not envy their predecessors of the middle of the eighteenth century when they think of the large prize money earned, for instance, by the capture of the Hermione. There were terrible odds to be set on the other side of the gamble. In seven years of that war, which ended in 1763, the number of seamen and marines who served was 184,893. Only 1,512 were killed in action or by accident, but as many as 133,708 died of disease or were reported missing. Why both disease and desertion were rife nobody needs to inquire who has read Smollett's ghastly descriptions of naval life in those days.—London Mail.

BEGIN FIGHT IN UNION FOR EDGE

Headquarters Opened In Elizabeth—No Bitterness In Campaign.

With the opening of Walter E. Edge's campaign headquarters at 208 Broad street, New . the battle for Union county has been fairly started. Colonel Austen Colgate has been active here for a week or more and the Edge workers are anxious to counteract any advantage which he may have gained through his early start. The Edge batteries are limbered up, the big guns are all in position and the active bombardment was started last night when Senator Pierce and Assemblyman Morgan spoke before the Sixth Ward Republican Club, Elizabeth.

One of the features of the Edge campaign will be a speaker's bureau, which will be maintained for the purpose of supplying speakers to any organization in the county. Requests for speakers should be sent to Charles L. Morgan, who can supply them on short notice.

The Edge organization in the county is an extensive one. His supporters are claiming the backing of three Assemblymen—William N. Runyon, Arthur Pierson and Charles L. Morgan—Senator Carlton B. Pierce, most of the Republican county officials and every Republican Mayor in the county.

The mails are being flooded now with Edge literature and the flow will be continued from now until the primaries. Assemblyman Charles L. Morgan, who is in charge of the Edge headquarters, is an active Edge worker and he says that while an active campaign will be conducted in the county against Colgate, nothing will be done to antagonize the Essex county man or to leave any scars after the primaries.

"I think that the Colgte workers hold the same opinion," he said yesterday in speaking of the matter, "and I am certain that there is nothing farther from our districts than to allow any bitterness or unpleasantness of any kind to creep into the campaign. We are all of the same political family and we are merely settling in a pleasant way which one of our two excellent citizens shall become our nominee at the election for Governor.

"I want to feel that if Colonel Colgate is nominated that I can turn in and support him as heartily as though Edge were the nominee and I hope that his supporters feel the same way."

Eugenie's Manner.

Of the visit to London of Napoleon III. and the Empress Eugenie, Disraeli wrote:

I was greatly disappointed with the empress. For me she had not a charm. She has Chinese eyes and a perpetual smile or simper which I detest. I understand that she is very natural—too natural for a sovereign—and that Napoleon looks sometimes as if he would be pleased with more reserve and dignity. She was always playing with the royal children, who doted on her, and was sometimes found sitting on the edge of a table. What do you think of that? The courtiers were horrified.—"Life of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield."

STRONG FOR FRELINGHUYSEN.

The Lakewood Times and Journal is unqualifiedly for Frelinghuysen for the Republican nomination for United States Senate. Its reasons are set forth in the following editorial:

"Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, who is a candidate for United States Senator, is making a vigorous but dignified campaign. We believe him entirely worthy of support.

"Mr. Frelinghuysen has the advantage of a distinguished and honored Jersey name. He is in the prime of life, and this, in our view, should be the prime factor in the selection of the United States Senator by New Jersey at this time. We should see to it that a man of integrity, high principles and large capabilites, who is of the proper age, be now sent to the Senate, with the purpose in view of keeping him there long enough to become influential and really potential in the affairs of the nation.

"No Senator can achieve a strong position in the Senate in a single term, and now that Jersey has the chance, she should elect such a man as Mr. Frelinghuysen, who would undoubtedly reflect great credit upon the State as its representative at Washington. Then he could be kept in the Senate.

"Mr. Frelinghuysen has made a strong and honorable record in the affairs of the State. He was a State Senator from his county for a period of six years. He is now President of the State Board of Education and of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society. He is a man of commanding presence—a forceful speaker. He is an advanced thinker—up with the times. He will be found standing beside Mr. Hughes if he becomes President.

"Mr. Frelinghuysen is also a business man of a very high order, and it would seem that on all grounds, his nomination at the primaries and election in November to the United States Senate would give the greatest assurance that New Jersey would be well represented and take her proper place in the Senate."

CALLING THE MILITIAMEN HOME.

Just what President Wilson had in mind when he called 15,000 militiamen home from the border for "strike duty" we probably will never know. But he must have been convinced that the danger of a strike was over and that the men would not be needed. The soldiers themselves are glad enough to get started home, and will not care to conjure up visions of bloody civil battle with railroad employes, but some of their friends cannot but shudder at the thought of what might take place in the Jersey City terminal, for instance, if a strike really goes into effect and the First New Jersey regiment is sent there to preserve order. Strikers and soldiers would be neighbors, perhaps brothers. This intimacy would in itself provoke trouble, for the militiamen would be loath to strictly enforce rules of conduct handed them by their superiors and lack of respect for the uniform and even contempt would be the inevitable. The staff correspondent of the Press reports from Douglas that the First and Fourth were selected for strike duty because they were made up of men living near the terminals to be guarded. This should have disqualified them. In the history of the National Guard of the United States instances of guardsmen being called on for strike duty at home are written in red, and the lesson should have been well learned long ago.

GOODBYE TO MR. LINN.

Frederick S. Linn ended a year of service as Boys' Work Director of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., and leaves this week to take up a higher work in the Philadelphia Association. Mr. Linn carries with him the sincere good wishes of all with whom he has come in contact here in his work or in his private life. If the influence of his life upon the people of Plainfield during the year he has been a resident could be publicly compared with that of others who have stopped here for the same length of time there would be more general sorrow at his going. Not only his "boys," but others that are older, have been inspired by his unostentatious Christianity and his manly life of charity and service. May his power to do good grow with his opportunites in the new field.

- Proctor's Theatre -

William A. Brady contributes his first production of the fall program at Proctor's Theatre today in the form of a five-part drama, entitled "A Woman's Way," with Carlyle Blackwell and Ethel Clayton. If every woman should see this feature and take a lesson from it there would not be so much said on the subject of "why men leave home." The picture tells us about a woman who had a way, and her way was the right way to keep a husband, even though a designing woman had him very much in her power, and was about to kidnap him. The average woman never looks to herself to find the blame. It is always her husband who is the one to be censored. It never occurs to most deserted wives that perhaps the fault might lie with them, and not with the other woman. This picture shows us a wife who got busy as soon as she saw that here husband was in danger of being kidnapped and began to use the same tactics to keep her husband that the other woman used in trying to lure him away. Carlyle Blackwell plays the husband, and Ethel Clayton the wife. Both of them give an excellent performance of a bright, young society couple who are mentally a match for each other. The elegance of the interior settings is one of the particularly noticeable parts of the feature. In addition today, Crane Wilbur, a screen star with a large following, appears in a pleasing offering, entitled "For Her Good Name," and Rube Miller, the talented fun maker, is seen in a unique comedy, entitled "Some Liars."

Tomorrow a double feature program will hold forth at Proctor's, and by request, Paramount will offer Maclyn Arbuckle in "The Reform Candidate," one of his greatest successes while Ralph Herz will star in a Metro production, entitled "The Purple Lady."

On Monday V. L. S. E. day will be celebrated, the program consisting of Robert Edeson in "Fathers of Men," and Kathlyn Williams in "The Valiants of Virginia." Another attraction on Monday will be the initial episode of "Beatrice Fairfax," the new series starring Grace Darling and Harry Fox.

An Ear Trumpet Gone.

Old Bill Sykes says that all of the equal suffrage talk he has heard lately reminds him of Abed Hamberg's lamp chimney. Obed had a lamp chimney that was twenty-eight years old, and for years he had used it for an ear trumpet. It was claimed by Obed that you couldn't break his lamp chimney, but one night he went to hear an ekel suffrage speaker down to the town hall and takin' along his glass chimney ear trumpet he got right down into the front seat.

He was holding the thing right clus to his ear and was nodding his head to everything she said till all at once she hollered: "Down with the tyrants," and the concussion broke the lamp chimney into forty-seven pieces. That settled Obed, and he is now agin' the whole business.

One Continuous Round of Thrills.

(Yuba City, Cal., Exchange.)

The man who got the contract for the feeding of the county prisoners here at 25 cents the meal has closed up shop and gave up his contract. There hasn't been a single prisoner in the county jail for more than half a year. County Clerk Alvin Weis has not issued a marriage licence for three months, and the city marshal has had only one official duty to perform in a year. He killed a sick dog. All the undertaking establishments have closed up and if the Yuba City people die they have to call in the Marysville undertakers. The postoffice still keeps open every day.

The Literary Career.

I tried to pull a frisky wheeze
About Gaby Deslys
And sell it to a magazine.
The editor was doggone mean—
The stuff was new, or new enough—
He sent it back marked "Ancient stuff."
I pulled a quip I thought was new About John Drew.
I got it back, this bunch of bunk, marked "Punk."
I tried another little yank,
On Eva Tank.
I got it back within a week.
The editor said: "Go take a peek
At Old Joe Miller's book of jokes
On public folks. And you will see the quips you've sent
And will regret the stamps you've spent."
I then got sore and traveled home
And wrote a pome.
I jumbled it all up so that None could tell where I was at.
It didn't mean a blesed thing
At all, by jing.
It had not rythm and no sense;
The editor said it was immense.
He bought the thing and paid my price;
Of fame I garnered quite a slice.
'Tis sad, but yet it is the craze.
This poobyhatch poetry nowadays.

Things to Think About.

A lot of people with nerve get by, while a lot of others with ability don't.

About the only valid excuse for wearing long, flowing whiskers is that it does away with the necessity of buying neckties.

There is such a thing as being too close to nature. There are times when some of it should be washed off.

Plainfield Theatre.

Russia, Turkey and Austria, now at bayonet points were, a few years ago, alive with laughter, gayety and song, and it was in this period, "just before the great war," that the comic and romantic events of "Katinka," which comes to the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow matinee and night, transpired. At that time it was possible for the little Katinka and her lover Ivan and their American friend Hopper to journey from Yalta, Russia, to Stamboul, Turkey, and thence to Vienna without exciting the suspicion of play goers, and making the author of the journey explain minutely how they could get through the various military lines. Now—but Otto Hauerbach, author of the play, isn't worried about the now. He fixed the time of the adventures of his pilgrims in brighter days.

Katinka, be it known, was a little Russian maiden, with a heart of her own, but with a hand not at her disposal. It was for the latter reason that she was forced into a disagreeable marriage with the elderly Boris, while her heart yearned for the handsome young Ivan. Ivan saw no reason to bow to fate because Katinka did. With the assistance of a wide-awake American friend, he did a little amateur detective work that led to the discovery that Boris already had one wife, who sought refuge in a Turkish harem to escape from her hated husband. Overjoyed at this discovery, they kidnapped Katinka while the wedding festivities were at their height, and the three set out for Turkey to discover the whereabouts of the first Mrs. Boris. Katinka, to aid their plans the better, was passed off as Mrs. Hopper. Matters were moving swimmingly in Old Stamboul when the real Mrs. Hopper put in an unexpected appearance.

Next Monday matinee and night marks the coming of "Blutch" Cooper's big extravaganza, "The Globe Trotters." The snap and go which is always in evidence in the sort of shows sent on tour by the management of the famous home of mirth and melody is especially evident in the forthcoming production. There are pretty dazzling girls in the chorus, elaborate costuming, real comedy, and choice vaudevi" of the stellar variety, which has en universally acclaimed to be the best seen here in the lighter forms of musical burlesque. The consistent comedy of Frank Hunter, king of black face artists; Eddie Swartz, George Hickman, Irving O'Hay, Bostonian Four, Elsie Lavedau, Virgina Ware, Flo Davenport, Julia Clifford, Isabella Sisters, all burlesquers and singers of pronounced note deliver their comedy lines with all the speed and action of a battery. The regal splendor of scenery and costumes that the company displays in this new edition of "The Globe Trotters," a mirthful melody full of fun and fascinating femininity is in two acts and twelve scenes, entitled "The Spenders."

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

"Sliding" Billy Watson and Lee Wrothe, two of burlesque's most popular comedians, heading the New Burlesque Carnival, will come to the Columbia Theatre the week beginning Monday afternoon, September 4 and present a performance that is said to be one of the most attractive of the present season's offerings. The entertainment is divided into two parts, in the first of which Mr. Watson will be seen in a new skit called "The Clock Maker," while the second is devoted to Mr. Wrothe, who will present the best of the scenes from his former successes, "Higgins at the Races," "Higgins at the Bar," and "Higgins at Fort Crook." The comedians will be supported by an organization that includes names familiar to all burlesque patrons, among them Owen Martin, Mabelle Morgan, Estelle Colbert, Helen Patsy Delany, Fred De Silva, Max Furham, Herman Gibson and Gus Roeber, and there is the customary chorus of pretty, vivacious girls. The Messrs. Watson and Wrothe have provided themselves with several new comedy scenes that are described as exceedingly humorous, and there is an arrangement of musical features and dances that is said to embrace many of the latest popular songs and all of the up-to-date fads. In addition, a long and diversified program of vaudeville specialties is announced. In keeping with the new order of things in this division of amusements it is said that the scenery, costumes and other details of the production are unusually extensive and beautiful, special efforts having been made to secure originality of design and perfect harmony in color-blending.

ANNETTE KELLERMANN DESCRIBES GAMES IN THE WATER HER PUPILS SHOULD PLAY

Here Are Several Delightful Diversions Especially For the Younger Members of Her Plainfield Daily Press Class. Obstacle and Floating Ball Races Detailed.

Article No. 28.

By ANNETTE KELLERMANN.

International Record-Holder and Star of the William Fox $1,000,000 Film "A Daughter of the Gods."

I think I have received very close to three thousand letters in the last two weeks in which the writers said: "Dear Miss Kellermann: Won't you tell us about some water games that can be played by members of your classes? I would especially like to know some games that are fine for the children."

So today I will tell you about the many funny racing games you can play at the seaside in rivers or pools.

First I will tell you about

The Obstacle Race.

First place a few logs in the water, try to keep them where the water is shallow. Place the logs about five feet apart, in an indirect line. If you can secure a few inner tubes of automobiles, so much the better. Now all start from the shore and running quickly to the water's edge, plunge in, and swim around, and over the various obstacles. The first one to reach the starting point wins.

Tugging the Rope.

This is a hilarious game and can be played by two or more. Obtain a stout rope and at each end tie a piece of wood, so as to keep the rope well apart, and afloat, within easy reach. Choose your partners and each side take a strong hold of the respective ends of the rope and the tugging match starts. The best side of course, wins.

Floating Ball Race.

This game is played in the same manner as the old egg and spoon race, only you must use a hollow rubber ball on a laddle instead of the customary egg and spoon. Now those of you who have followed my course diligently will be able to win with ease, for the main part of this game is this, that you must tread water all the time.

Do not make the distance too far, for you will find it very difficult to maintain the ball on the laddle and at the same time propel yourself through the water.

Ball Game.

A great deal of fun can be had with a water polo ball. I will not explain the rules of water polo, for you can easily obtain a book on this favorite water game at any book store, but I will tell you how to have a good time with the ball itself.

Obtain a large infield ball and all enter the water and throw and catch the ball.

This little game will add greatly to your proficiency as a swimmer. I want you all to try these games so as to gain confidence in the water, for you will soon be put to the test when I start my diving lessons and when I do want you all to become Kellermanns in the art of diving.

Tomorrow—How to build the perfect natatorium. What swimming pools should be and treatment and construction of the bathing facilities—all these are described by Miss Kellermann in the Plainfield Daily Press tomorrow.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Little Mermaid Dances For a Prince.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

Jacks.

Until She Could See the Clouds Sailing Below.

JACK and Evelyn finished bread and jam for supper, and then daddy told them about a little mermaid who went to a prince's palace while his slaves were amusing him:

"When the slave girls began to dance gracefully to beautiful music the little mermaid, lifting her beautiful white arms, raised herself on tiptoe and glided out on the floor with a grace none of the other dancers had. She had been used to swimming, you see, and had a beautiful glide.

"Every minute the dance brought out the beauty of her motion, and her sad eyes appealed to the hearts of those looking on more than did the songs of the slave girls. Everybody was delighted with her dance, especially the prince. He watched her with pleasure and called her his little foundling, and she danced on and on to please him, although every step she took was like stepping on knives.

"The prince said she should always be near him. That night she was allowed to sleep outside his door on a velvet cushion.

"He had boy's clothes made for her, so that she might ride about with him. They used to ride through fragrant woods where green branches brushed her shoulders and little birds sang among the green leaves. She climbed up the highest mountains with the prince, and, although her little feet bled so that others noticed it, she only laughed and followed him until she could see the clouds sailing below them like a flock of birds taking flight to distant lands.

"At home in the prince's palace when night came and others were asleep she used to go out and sit on the marble steps that led down to the sea. It cooled her burning feet to stand in the cold sea water. At such times she used to think fondly of those she had left in the deep.

"One night her sisters came arm in arm to the top of the water. They sang so sorrowfully as they swam that she beckoned to them. Then they recognized her and told her how sad they had all been since she left her sea home for land folks. After that they visited her every night, and one night she saw a long way out her old grandmother, who had not been above water for many long years. She also saw her father, the merman king, with his crown on his head. They stretched out their arms to her and threw her kisses and love. But they did not dare come as near land as the six sisters had.

"These visits with her own people were a great comfort to the little mermaid, you may both be sure, my dears, but she still loved her prince better than any one on earth," daddy ended.

Training a Husband

Wherein Morris Is Irritable Again and Marian Weary.

"Marian, can't you stop that bird from screeching enough to take the top of one's head off?" called the irritated voice of Morris Southy from the top of the stairs.

"I suppose I could cover him up," wearily replied Marian.

"Well, I wish you would. It is a pity that on the few days when I can get time to take a nap I must be kept awake with that 'miserable bird.'"

"I am sorry he disturbed you. I would have covered him up if I had known you were trying to sleep. I hate to keep him covered up more than I have to." Marian spread a cloth over the cage.

"I'll wish his neck was wrung. What is the use of keeping a thing that is a source of annoyance to everybody all the time?"

"Oh, Roger thinks so much of him. It would break his heart to have to give it up." Marian's voice took on the tender quality it always had when speaking of her children.

"I guess he would get over it," snapped Roger's father. "It is nonsense to allow a child's pet to make the whole family uncomfortable."

"You are the only one inconvenienced. I never get a chance to take a nap in the day time and the children all enjoy his singing. You will not let them have a dog, and they must have something to pet; it is a child's right." Touch Marian on the subject of her children and she would show fight every time.

"Children's rights!" snorted the irriate father. "I guess it is the right of a tired man to sleep without having a hole drilled in his ear with a shrieking bird. I'll wring his neck if he wakes me up again." Marian heard the retreating steps of her husband and she went back to her hot kitchen, where she was canning peaches, with despair in her heart. Morris was getting more irritable and nervous every day. She had hoped that having a big house and a yard for the children to play in would cause less friction than when they were crowded together in a tiny flat, but things were no better.

"What can I do? What can I ever do?" she thought desperately. "If it was only myself I could get along some way, but it is awful for children to be brought up in an atmosphere of constant fretfulness." A cloud rested on her as she worked.

"When I think of my old home, with its rollicking brood, my heart aches for mine, hampered, repressed as they are. That was the way to live. We all grew up without knowing there was such a thing as a nerve in the body. Sometimes when the brood was particularly uproarious mother would look up and say:

"'Don't you think the children are getting a little noisy, father?' and he would look up from his paper and say, as he smiled at the noisy group:

"'I guess they are not hurting anything; let them have a good time. I want them to have a happy childhood. A noise does not disturb me as long as it is a pleasant noise.'"

A smile crossed her face as she remembered it all.

"We certainly did have a happy childhood," she reflected, "and it is every child's right. Mine are being defrauded of their inheritance, while I, their mother, sit silent and do not defend their rights."

Marian had filled the last jar with the yellow beauties and they stood in a row on the back of the table. She washed up the canning dishes and put them away, then sank down on a chair with her head in her hands. She was very tired. The heat was a factor that added to her weariness. Only a few days of high temperature at a time had ever to be endured in the eastern city from which they had come.

"I suppose it is the heat that adds to Morris' irritability." She pressed her fingers against her throbbing temples. "It is hard to bear. Perhaps when it gets cooler he will be less nervous. I must be patient, I suppose."

MASTER OF BAYLEY HALL.

The appointment of the Rev. Charles D. Meyer, of Montclair, assistant rector of the Church of Our Lady Help of Christians, East Orange, to the post of master of Bayley Hall, preparatory school for Seton Hall College, South Orange, was announced yesterday by the Rev. Dr. John A. Duffy, chancellor of the Newark diocese. Father Meyer is a recent convert to the Catholic faith, having been an Episcopalian clergyman in Wisconsin.

How Tapioca Is Made.

Hardly is there any article of whose origin so little is known as tapioca," writes J. K. Jank in a book on "Spices."

It is manufactured from tapioca flour on the islands of Singapore, Penang and Java. This flour is made from the tapioca potato, the root of the cassava or manioc plant.

These potatoes often weigh over twenty pounds. They are washed, skinned, cut into small pieces and put into a grater, where small circular saws reduce them to pulp. The fine flour is separated by a revolving drum and after being washed six times is dried on heated trays. It is then made into dough and passed through sieves and baked.

CAPE COATS VERY VOGUISH.

Flaring Skirt Still Holds Good—Cuffs, Too, Flare Towards Bottom—Cape Collars Shown in Various Attractive Ways.

By Mary Glynn.

When the cape collar was launched a season or so ago much comment was offered both for and against its favor. No definite stand was taken in regard to it. However, this season all possible doubt has been swept away, and the result is that it has been generally accepted as the fashionable feature. As a result of this stand, the cape effect has been introduced with much success on many of the smartest and newest garments. Coats, wraps, suits, and gowns have been designed with the cape as the main and distinctive feature. Separate bodices, too, have cape collars that lend a decidedly smart finishing touch to them. Some of these have been planned to give a quaint and picturesque effect, others lead a decidedly military and tailored look to a garment. One very distinctive top coat is illustrated. It was developed in gray broadcloth and attractively trimmed with moleskin fur. Though almost a full length garment, the hem of the skirt was plainly visible. Three huge buttons of moleskin fastened the collar and front of the coat. Especially interesting was the deep turning collar that topped the cape. A distinctive novelty was introduced in the bell shaped cuff, which, if desired, might form the muff-cuff effect. An attractive velvet hat and high glazed kid button boots afford suitable finishing touches to the garment.

THE VOGUT FOR SHOULDER CAPES.

These Made in Silk, Batiste or Linen and Worn with a Frock or Bodice—Substituting Neckwear.

By Mary Glynn.

A distinctly new fact is the increasing popularity of the shoulder cape. This may be of taffeta, satin, or the daintier fabrics, such as linen or batiste. These latter are often worn with dainty summer frocks as a finishing touch. Those made of taffeta are worn in capacity of a scarf or wrap and lend a very charming note to one's outfit. One especially attractive cape was worn over a frock of navy mohair which was developed on princess lines. It was developed in navy satin and lined with white satin. A soft roll collar rolled back from the throat, this being of white satin. Navy silk stitching afforded a singularly attractive form of trimming. This cape supplied the last necessary finishing touch to the outfit aside from serving as a useful and attractive wrap. Many of these capes are made to match the colors of the gowns worn, others are made in contrasting shades. Various forms of trimming, such as buttons, embroidery, ribbon fluting, or fur edging are employed to add to their attractiveness. The short haired furs are adapted for these capes, also, and prove very distinctive. The most attractive of these are the ones modelled on the lines of those worn by Empress Eugenie. Flat pelts, such as seal, ermine, and mole are most often used for these. The linings usually are in matching or contrasting tones.

SEAL OF OUR UNION

Uncle Sam's Mark When He Stamps Official Documents.

HISTORY OF ITS ADOPTION.

Franklin, Adams and Jefferson Were the Men Appointed by John Hancock to Prepare the Device For the Great Seal of the United States.

The founders of our government did nothing without careful deliberation, and we are told that the adoption of a seal for the United States was as carefully considered as the framing of the Declaration of Independence. It was adopted during the period of the Confederacy, several years before the adoption of the constitution, but not till after several years' deliberation.

On the 4th of July, 1776, after the Declaration of Independence had been finally acted upon, John Hancock, president of the congress, appointed Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson a committee "to prepare a device for the great seal of the United States of America." A seal was not needed for ornament or show, but to certify the official commissions soon to be issued by the United States. The committee took up the matter at once.

Each of the members of the committee had some ideas of his own, and they called in an artist of Philadelphia to help them formulate a design. This artist was Pierre Simittierri, a patriotic Swiss, who was doing some excellent portrait painting in the then capital city of the country.

The Swiss drew a design, which was discussed by the committee, after which each member suggested additions or changes, which were incorporated by Jefferson in a report made to congress on Aug. 10, 1776. This report was in heraldic language, describing the shield, crest, dexter, legend, etc. The following is an extract of this report:

"The great seal should on one side have the arms of the United States of America, which arms should be as follows: The shield has six quarters—the first an enameled rose, for England; the second a thistle proper, for Scotland; the third a harp, for Ireland; the fourth a fleur-de-lis, for France; the fifth the imperial eagle, for Germany; the sixth the crowned lion, for Holland—pointing out the countries from which the colonies have been peopled."

After describing other details, as the Goddess of Liberty, the initial letters of the colonies, etc., the report said, "Crest, the eye of Providence in a radiant triangle, whose glory extends over the shield and beyond the figures; motto, 'E Pluribus Unum.'"

For some reason or other congress refered this device back to the committee for further report. Franklin had proposed for a motto "Rebellion to Tyrants Is Obedience to God." Adams proposed Hercules leaning on a club, while all the virtues and nearly all the vices grouped about him in different attitudes. His design would have been a monstrosity and laughingstock. Jefferson's composite design simplified matters, and it was he who suggested the motto "E Pluribus Unum."

This was in August, 1776. The war soon absorbed the attention and nothing further was done about the seal until March, 1779, when a committee of three was appointed to consider and report on the subject. This committee reported in favor of a shield with thirteen diagonal stripes, alternately red and white, a constellation of thirteen stars, a figure of Liberty and the motto "Bello vel Pace Paratus" ("Ready for war or for peace").

This report also was recommitted, and it was nearly a year before the matter came up again. Not to follow through repeated discussions and rejections of several designs, the present seal was not adopted till June 20, 1782.

It was the work of a young American artist, William Barton by name, who followed in many respects the design submitted by Jefferson six years before, but simplified it. He retained the eagle, a bundle of arrows in one talon and an olive branch in the other; the helmet with six bars or quarterings, signifying the six nationalities from which the country had been mainly peopled, and the motto "E Pluribus Unum," which survived all the discussions.

The designer said, "The motto alludes to the Union." He added in his explanation, "The escutcheon is borne on the breast of the American eagle, without any other support, to denote that the United States of America ought to rely on their own virtues."

The different executive departments of the government have each their own seal, but every commission signed by the president is stamped with the great seal of the United States, which is kept in the state department.—Washington Post.

TOURISTS TO HAVE SHARE.

Touring motorists will soon have the opportunity to share the benefits of large private country clubs with such features as golf and other forms of amusement and privileges indulgen in by members. The International Motor Clubs' Association, with headquarters in this city, is feathring social benefits for its members by securing a number of organized clubs along the Atlantic coast to extend privileges to the I. M. C. A. tourists.

The first move in the establishment of this chain of club resorts was made during the past week when a deal was consummated with the Point Pleasant Golf Club for extending its privileges to the members of the I. M. C. A. The Pine Bluff Inn, which is conducted in connection with the golf grounds and clubhouse and which is beautifully located on the Manasquan River, about one mile back of Point Pleasant, is to be made one of the exclusive club resorts of the I. M. C. A. As this property is only a stone's throw from the main ocean motorway between Atlantic City and New York and about two hours and a half run from Philadelphia, makes it a very interesting and objective point for members of the association.

The Leighton Hotel, which is directly on the ocean at Point Pleasant, has recently signed up with the association as an exclusive club resort for its members for 1917. This will give the members an exclusive seashore club and a country club within two miles' distance.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

SARATOGA'S SPLENDID MEETING.

Everything has been conducive to making the Saratoga racing season, which closed on Saturday, the most successful ever held at the Spa. Old horsemen, whose imaginations are frequently more vivid than their memories, are often wont to wag their heads and say that the races or the crowds are not what they used to be. These two statements will no longer hold water if the meeting just closed is taken as criterion, because, according to the officials of the association, the crowds in the past were never as large, even in the so-called palmy days, as they have been during the last month.

From a strictly racing standpoint the sport at the Spa could not have been otherwise than of the best, as the class of thoroughbreds seen there represented the finest from all sections of the continent. The champions of Kentucky raced against the fleetest that the East and Canada have produced in the various age divisions, the equaling of track records at almost every distance was a common occurrence.

The crop of two-year-olds, both American and foreign bred, seen at Saratoga has been particularly impressive, and their running qualities have compared most favorably with those that raced before the sport was stopped in this State. The splendid performances of Campfire, which has won many of the important stakes for two-year-olds, including the Hopeful, run on Saturday, stamps this juvenile as the best at his age in recent years. The young son of Olambala has the blood of champions in his veins and is always willing to give the best when called upon.—New York Times.

BEST LOOKING INFIELD.

The present infield offered by Manager Callahan is the best looking outfit of the season. The enforced idleness of Honus Wagner necessitated a shift that sent Baird to second base, as he was missing a lot of chances on the home stretch sack. Once or twice being moved to the center of the infield Baird has failed to cover the bag on plays, but it has not resulted seriously. Alex McCarthy is playing nice baseball at short. He is one of the best fielding infielders in the league, his lack of hitting being the only thing that has kept him on the bench. Yesterday's big wallop from Mac's bat in the sixteenth inning won the game. Warner looks good for a rookie. He handles himself nice on a ball field, and especially at bat. Warner has batting sense, as he can stand up at the plate and wait for the good ones as well as any man on the team. Max Carey was always the best at picking out the good ones, but in the five games Warner has played he has shown a judgment rare even to the seasoned veterans. The fielding of Doc Johnson in the Philadelphia series was really sensational. This fellow, threatened continually with the bush league stuff, has worked faithfully and shown that he is the best fellow available for the sack. Doc is not hitting as well as last season, but his fielding has been sensational, and in emergencies he has been doing as well at bat as some of the other fellows on the team. Wagner is almost ready to get back into the game, but with the best looking infield of the season, Callahan can afford to allow the Dutchman to lay off until his injured hand is in good shape.

MAJOR LEAGUE TALENT.

With races in the big leagues fast drawing to a close managers are looking forward toward prospects for next year, with the class of new playing talent picked up in the minors holding an important place.

Every year word comes to the East of phenomenal ball players in the minors. Usually these are taken up, and sometimes they make good. More often than not, however, they are sent back. This year, perhaps more than any recent season, there is a dearth of good playing talent in the minors. Purchases up to the present have been very few and only players of extraordinary ability have been picked off by the scouts. Some of these already have reported, while others are being held for delivery at the opening of th training season next year. The big minors, the American Association, the International League and the Pacific Coast League, will supply the greatest amount of real material, as usual. In the lower leagues the percentage of ball players who look promising is remarkably low.

In the American Association there are a number of ball players who look like real finds. Among these is Pitcher Nick Carter, purchased from Indianapolis by the Cubs for early delivery. Carter is a big right-hander who was held by the Cleveland Americans at the beginning of the present season and turned over to Indianapolis with hardly a trial. He was the best picher in the association this year. Outfielder Joe Kelly is another Indianapolis player taken by the Cubs and there is a probability that Pitcher Victor Aldridge, of the Indians, also will be snapped up.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

ST. JOSEPH OUTFIT BOOKS THREE GAMES

Plainfield A. C. Carded For Tomorrow and Tile Workers Booked Monday.

The St. Josephs have arranged to play two games with the American Tile Workers' baseball team, both contests to be played on Hyde Oval on Labor Day. One game will be played in the morning, while the other conest will be run off in the afternoon.

According to the press agent of the North Plainfield team these two contests will be well worth witnessing, inasmuch as the visiting team is considered unusually fast. The locals expect to have Eddie Conshay on the mound in one game, with Earl Moran doing duty in the second. Tommy Mullin, it is expected, will perform with the Saints.

On Hyde Field tomorrow afternoon the third and deciding game between the Plainfield A. C. and the St. Josephs will be played. Much rivalry exists between the two teams, and an exciting battle is looked forward to. Either Eddie Conshay or Francis McDonough will be in the points for the North Plainfielders, while Harry Stites, a "no-hit" pitcher, will take care of the work for the Plainfield A. C.

CARLISLE INDIAN TO PITCH FOR ROYALS

At Least, Morris Will Try to Redeem Himself Tomorrow.

The second game of the Royal Giant-Dunellen series will be played at Maurer Oval, Dunellen, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. T first game was captured by the Du llens and the Royals are out to win this attraction.

Pete Simmons has anounced a lineup, with which the fans of Dunellen are acquainted. Morris, the Carlisle Indian, will try to redeem himself, and Waldorf will do his best to help him. On first base will be Eddie Ford, who did not take part in the first game. Eddie is expected to be a tower of strength to the Giants. On second the Royals will have Hackett, also a new man to Dunellen fans. Hackett, who was supposed to play in Dunellen, but who failed to appear, will "positively" (accented) appear tomorrow. On third Borden will shine, with "Senor' Maiden at short. In the outfield Briggs, of the Jersey City Colored Giants, the juvenile "phenom," and "Tune" Kline, who recently turned down a fine offer from the Philadelphia Colored Giants, will be seen.

Local fans are well acquainted with the Dunellen lineup. A gentle reminder will not go amiss, however. Johnny Dixon will do the pitching, with Eddie Bergen behind the bat. The infield will consist of Hannon, on first, Emery at second, Brown on short and Tommy Mullin on third. In the outfield Trust, Wilson and Gunzelman will pastime.

There is a possibility of Hall, a Plainfielder, pitching for the Royals. Hall has been in fast company, but only recently returned to the game, having retired about a year or so ago.

Game Tomorrow.

Netherwood vs. Baptists.

There is but one City League game on card for tomorrow, but according to the two managers that are to furnish the attraction, this contest is well worth seeing. The Netherwoods, champions of the league, will take on the Baptists, the game being played on the West End Avenue Field.

Advance information states that the Baptist manager is rounding up the best talent that he has on his roster. Freddy Mills, owing to a "previous engagement"—to get married—will not be able to pitch. His place will, in all probability, be taken by Oscar Dilts or Duncan Patterson. The Netherwood manager expects to have his best talent in shape for the encounter. Just who will assume the pitching burden is not known, but it is likely that Thorne will draw the job.

This game will most likely be the last one of the season. There is little chance of the Hope Chapel team playing off the "forfeited" match with the Baptists.

"BIG GAME" SLOGAN OF MANAGER WARDEN

Elizabeth Stars Will Visit This City Labor Day, Bringing Fourteen Players.

According to the manager of the Plainfield All Stars, a new organization, Parker Field will be the scene of the "big game" on Labor Day. Plenty of advertising will be given the project and special trolley c rs will be run to the grounds.

Manager Warden, a resident of North Plainfield, is back of the plan, and has arranged to bring the Elizabeth Stars here. This team is supposed to be fast, and seeks to take the measure of the locals. Jack Garretson will play first for the locals, and the rest of the lineup will consist of first-class talent. A well-known pitcher will be employed by the local men, who fully intend to make a stellar attraction.

The complete line up wil be announced tomorrow.

PLAINFIELD HORSES IN FREEHOLD RACING EVENT

Eighteen horses have been entered in the three light harness races to be held by the Freehold Driving Association on Labor Day afternoon. Each of the events are a trotting or pacing race for which purses of $200 each have been hung up. In the first race, a 2:30 class, there are eight entries, six in the second, or 2.15 class, and five in the third, or 2.20 class.

The "Baran" and "Owyhamac," owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, have been entered.

STATISTICS FELL.

Statisticians ploughed through the records lately to find that Joe Bush was the tenth Philadelphia pitcher to hold an opposing club hitless in a nine inning game. For the Phillies, Charley Ferguson first turned the trick in 1885 against Providence. Seward and Weying, of the Athletics held hitless Cincinnati and Kansas City in 1888. Frank Donohue blanked Boston hitless in 1898.

Chick Fraser stopped the Cubs hitless in 1903; Henley, for the Athletics, beat St. Louis in 1895 without a hit. Johnny Lush, of the Phillies, next spoiled Brooklyn's fun in 1906. Chief Bender was the last before Bush, he beating Cleveland in 1911.

DIAMOND NOTES.

The Brooklyns gained a half game on Boston, although engaged in nothing more exacting than riding the rail. It wasn't a monster gain, but in these days of closeness of the race small favors are received with the utmost thankfulness.

McGraw's pitching staff seems to consist of Tesreau and Sallee, although Benton, Perritt, Anderson and Schupp are still members of it. Without the aid of a memory tonic it is difficult to recall when Anderson last won a game. Smith, the recruit from Columbia, has done well the few times he has appeared at the fag end of contests.

PARKER FIELD CANNOT BE SECURED BY ROYALS

Therefore Game With Netherwood May Not Be Played Labor Day.

The Netherwood baseball team may not cross bats with the Royal Giants on Labor Day. The inability of the Royal manager to secure Parker Field left him with but one alternative, that of securing Avon Oval. This action he did take, but it is said that the Netherwood manager is adverse to playing on the Tabs' field. He would rather play on the South Avenue Field, but Pete Simmons would not consent to any such arrangement.

In the face of these facts it is hardly probable that the Netherwoods and the Royals will get together on Monday. The Royals certainly will not play on South avenue, and the Netherwoods, through their manager, do not wish to play on Avon Oval. Something must be done. The South avenue field is not the best palce in the world for staging a baseball game, according to Pete Simmons. Most fans agree with Mr. Simmons.

PLAINFIELD HORSES FAIL TO SHINE

"The Baron" and "Owyhamac" Do Not Capture Prizes

After equaling the track record of 2:10¼ in the 2:14 pacing race at the opening of the Monmouth Fair, Ben Ali, driven by C. E. Pitman, of Trenton, got only second money, H. S. Crossman's Major A. winning the the first, second and fifth heats. Ben Ali recently paced a trial in 2:07¾ at Monroe, N. Y. In the 2:19 pacing race Mr. Crossman's Robert Frisco won three out of five heats.

The Baron, owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, finished third in the 2:20 trot, the event being won by Bobby Moreland. Sam Foreman was second. Owyhamac, Dr. Winter's other entry, finished eighth in the 2:14 trot.

HYDEWOOD GOLF CLUB.

The Hydewood Golf Club program for Labor Day includes a seventy-two hole handicap, thirty-six holes of which will be played on that day, eighteen holes being played on the three succeeding Saturdays. There will be a mixed approaching and putting contest for women. The qualifying round for the fall championship will also be contested.

MAY PLAY CRANFORD.

The Dunellen basball team may play the Cranford club a double bill on Labor Day. Negotiations are now under way and final announcement will be made tomorrow. The Dunellens will play the Tabs a Sunday series in the near future, according to semi-official announcements made here.

Miss Helen Althouse, of New York city, is spending a few days with friends in the borough.

At the Traps

(By Peter P. Carney.)

Everything is being done these days to give the amateur all the honor and glory in trap shooting. Quite naturally the professional is forced to the background. He doesn't share in the prizes in any of the tournaments—but this is as it should be. It is the amateurs and not the professionals, that make the sport what it is. The professional in trap shooting is quite different from the professional in other branches of sport, however. He is a professional because he is employed by an ammunition concern. Some of these professionals continue to get a lot of publicity, even though they don't get any prizes.

Two of them are Leslie Gi[illegible] of Aberdeen, Md., and Walter Ha[illegible] of Macon, Ga. In the recent Alabama State tournament H. G. broke [illegible] out of 500 in the regular competition and [illegible] out of 625 in the tournament. This is some of the most remarkable shooting ever done. German is better known as "Long Run" German. His performance is knocking a long string of targets in succession. In the recent tourney at Betterton, Md., he had a run of 247 straight, and in the 500 targets shot at in the three days' shoot he broke 492, which is by no means a poor average. This kind of shooting is bound to get publicity.

LARRY DOYLE AGREES TO PLAY WITH CUBS

Larry Doyle, traded by the New York Giants to the Chicago Nationals in the deal for Heinie Zimmerman, signed a three-year contract with the Chicago team last night, after holding out several days. It is said Doyle will receive $7,500 from the Cubs.

Doyle will join the Cubs at St. Louis today. He left Chicago last night for St. Louis, in company with Dick Kinsella, Giant scout, who first brought Doyle into the limelight with the old Springfield, Ill., Three I League team.

Doyle very nearly caused the cancellation of the trade whereby the Cubs sent Zimmerman to the Giants. Larry insisted on getting a three-year contract at a figure greater than that for which his Giant contract called. He also insisted on getting a bonus and threatened to retire unless he got what he wanted.

FIELDING HISTORY.

Two fielders well known to Boston fans made fielding history in the past few weeks. Steve Yerkes, who hopped from the Red Sox to the Federals, and is now serving time in the Southern Association, has just finished accepting 114 chances at second base without error in seventy-eight games, made a record.

Sherwood Magee is the other elite Back Bay pace setter, with 170 chances without error in seventy-eight consecutive games. Magee also hopes to have this accepted as a record, it being superior to the mark set by Frank Schulte in 1908. Magee made his first error last Tuesday, thereby spoiling his chances for compiling a perfect record for the season.

LEONARD GETS BONUS.

"Dutch" Leonard today received $100 from President Lannin, of the Boston American League club for pitching a no hit, no run game yesterday against St. Louis. Lannin wrote Leonard he was especially gratified that he had duplicated the performance of George Foster, also of the Red Sox, earlier in the season.

SIXTEEN PLAYERS STILL IN NATIONAL EVENT

In an effort to give further striking testimony of his being a formidable contender for the national lawn tennis championship, Maurice E. McLoughlin yesterday afternoon regaled 5,000 persons at Forest Hills with a three set victory over Theodore R. Pell. The scores were [illegible], 6—4, 6—3. Pell and his far famed backhanders never even threatened to score a set against the Cyclone.

McLoughlin's success featured the march into the home-stretch. As the result of play in the third round only sixteen men, including nine from the East, six from California and one from the South, are still in the running. In the fourth round today McLoughlin will face George M. Church. William M. Johnson will play Leonard Beekman, Richard Norris Williams 2d will encounter William J. Clothier and Watson M. Washburn will match strokes with Wallis E. Davis. Other contests will bring together Robert Lindley Murray and Karl H. Behr, Wallace F. Johnson and Walter Merrill Hall, Clarence J. Griffin and Edward H. Whitney and Edward R. McCormick and Douglas S. Watters.

YANKS GET PITCHER.

President Robert Allen, of the Scranton New York State League team, announced yesterday that he has sold the release of Pitcher Jesse Buckels, one of the leading left handers of the league, to the New York Americans. Buckels at one time had a tryout with the Chicago Cubs.

Buckels pitched and won three double headers this year and has several one-hit games to his credit. He did not make a big running record, losing many low score games through poor support. He held Detroit to six hits in an exhibition game on May 26, and at that time Hughey Jennings offered $1,000 and Pitcher Ericksen for Buckels. He is 24 years old, 6 feet 3 inches tall and possesses much speed and a right-hander's control. He joins the Yanks September 10.

A Battin High School Alumni campaign committee is being formed for the purpose of aiding William J. Shearer in his campaign for the Democratic Mayoralty nomination of Elizabeth. The object of the committee will be to organize the young voters who attended school at the time Mr. Shearer was superintendent and principal of the high school.

The Democatic county committee will meet tonight. A call for the session has been sent out by Chairman Lucius T. Russell, but the purpose of the gathering has not been disclosed. The activity of the county committee does not usually commence until after the primaries, when the body is reorganized for another year.

Anti-Wittpenn Democrats in Hudson are threatening to "knife" the candidate at the coming election. A good sized storm seems to be brewing and it's all about the surrogateship. The persent surrogate, John P. Egan, is a candidate for renomination, and Wittpenn is favoring State Senator Charles M. Egan, who has announced his candidacy. A conference of the antis, including Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, Sheriff Eugene F. Kinkead and several other influential politicians, was held Monday and sent another request to Wittpenn to accept John P. Egan's candidacy. The answer was Charles M. Egan's announcement, and the battle is on. The line-up is the same old line-up of Wittpennites and antis, and the threatened breach is the more interesting in view of the recent withdrawal of Martin from the Gubernatorial race, with a plea for Democratic harmony. Martin, however, will never support Senator Egan, the latter having defeated him for State Senator in a bitter contest three years ago, and the indications are that the promise of harmony among the Hudson Democrats has gone a-glimmering.

State Senator Charles B. Pierce, of Cranford, and Assemblyman Charles L. Morgan, of Elizabeth, were the speakers last night at the meeting of the Sixth Ward Republican Club, held in the club's headquarters, 432 South Broad street, Elizabeth. While the Sixth ward meeting was in progress a reception was given to Colonel Austen Colgate in Republican headquarters, in Broad street, where a number of out of town speakers were heard. Both Senator Pierce and Assemblyman Morgan are strongly in favor of Edge for Governor.

A conference meeting is being arranged between the Progressives of Union and Morris counties. Since the two counties together comprise the Fifth Congressional district, it is considered desirable that the Progressives act together in any plan for the indorsement of candidates at the coming primaries. It is practically certain that there will be no Progressive ticket either here or in Morris county.

How Leaves Purify Air.

It has been calculated that a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men, perhaps a dozen or even more. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of twenty-four hours is put at about 100 gallons, but by Boussingault's estimate a single yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and the under side of the leaves, can, in favorable circumstances, decompose at least a gallon of carbonic acid a day. One hundred square yards of leaf surface then would suffice to keep the air pure for one man, but the leaves of a tree of moderate size present a surface of many hundred square yards. All other forms of vegetable life act similarly in abstracting the noxious carbonic acid from the atmosphere.

The Art of Optimism.

Live in the active voice, intent on what you can do rather than on what happens to you; in the indicative mood, concerned with facts as they are rather than as they might be; in the present tense, concentrated on the duty in hand without regard for the past or worry about the future; in the first person, criticising yourself rather than condemning others; in the singular number, seeking the approval of your own conscience rather than popularity with the many. Whoever lives the life of such unselfish devotion to the good of others and of all and lives it in the active voice, indicative mood, present tense, first person, singular number, is bound to find his life full and rich and glad and free—is bound, in other words, to be an optimist.—William De Witt Hyde.

Feat of a Baseball Pitcher.

Just one pitcher in the history of baseball—that is, a hurler who was working in a league of recognized standing and class—is credited with pitching two complete games in succession wherein the opposing batsmen failed to register a base hit. A big pitcher sailing under the name of Gene Wright, who hurled for the Dayton club of the Western association back in 1901, on Sept. 1 of that season pitched a no hit, no run game against Columbus. He followed up this feat by turning the same trick against the Grand Rapids team on Sept. 4.—New York Sun.

FOR THE INFORMATION OF THE PUBLIC:

The Railroads' statement of their position on the threatened strike, as presented to the President of the United States

A strike on all the railroads of the country has been called by the Train Brotherhoods for 7 o'clock Monday morning, September 4.

This strike was ordered from Washington while the President of the United States was making every effort to avert the disaster.

The Final Railroad Proposal

The final proposal made by the railroads for a peaceful settlement of the controversy, but which was rejected by the brotherhoods, was as follows:

(a) The railroads will, effective September 1, 1916, keep the time of all men represented in this movement, upon an 8 hour basis and by separate account, monthly, with each man, maintain a record of the difference between the money actually earned by him on the present basis and the amount that would have been earned upon an 8 hour basis—overtime on each basis to be computed pro rata.

The amounts so shown will be subject to the decision of the Commission, provided for in Paragraph (c) of this memorandum and payable in money, as may be directed by said Commission in its findings and decision.

(b) The Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise the keeping of these accounts and report the increased cost of the 8 hour basis, after such period of actual experience as their judgment approves or the President may fix, not, however, less than three months.

(c) In view of the far-reaching consequences of the declaration made by the President, accepting the 8 hour day, not only upon the railroads and the classes of labor involved directly in this controversy, but to the public and upon all industry, it seems plain that before the existing conditions are changed, the whole subject in so far as it affects the railroads and their employees, should be investigated and determined by a Commission to be appointed by the President, of such standing as to compel attention and respect to its findings. The judgment of such a Commission would be a helpful basis for adjustments with labor and such legislation as intelligent public opinion, so informed, might demand.

Statement of Executives to the President

In submitting this proposal to the President, the fifty railroad executives called to Washington and representing all the great arteries of traffic, made this statement to him of their convictions:

The demands in this controversy have not been presented, in our judgment, for the purpose of fixing a definite daily period of labor, nor a reduction in the existing hours of labor or change in methods of operation, but for the real purpose of accomplishing an increase in wages of approximately One Hundred Million Dollars per annum, or 35 per cent. for the men in railroad freight train and yard service represented by the labor organizations in this matter.

After careful examination of the facts and patient and continuous consultation with the Conference Committee of Managers, and among ourselves, we have reached a clear understanding of the magnitude of the questions, and of the serious consequences to the railroads and to the public, involved in the decision of them.

Trustees for the Public

As trustees for the public served by our lines and for the great mass of the less powerful employees (not less than 80 per cent. of the whole number) interested in the railroad wage fund—as trustees also for the millions of people that have invested their savings and capital in the bonds and stock of these properties, and who through the saving banks, trust companies and insurance companies, are vitally interested to the extent of millions of dollars, in the integrity and solvency of the railroads of the country, we cannot in conscience surrender without a hearing, the principle involved, nor undertake to transfer the enormous cost that will result to the transportation of the commerce of the country.

The eight-hour day without punitive overtime involves an annual increase, approximately, in the aggregate of Sixty Millions of Dollars, and an increase of more than 20 per cent. in the pay of the men, already the most highly paid in the transportation service.

The ultimate cost to the railroads of an admission in this manner of the principle under contention cannot now be estimated; the effect upon the efficiency of the transportation of the country now already under severe test under the tide of business now moving, and at a time when more, instead of less, effort is required for the public welfare, would be harmful beyond calculation.

The widespread effect upon the industries of the country as a whole is beyond measure or appraisement at this time, and we agree with the insistent and widespread public concern over the gravity of the situation and the consequences of a surrender by the railroads in this emergency.

In like manner we are deeply impressed with the sense of our responsibility to maintain and keep open the arteries of transportation, which carry the life blood of the commerce of the country, and of the consequences that will flow from even temporary interruption of service over the railroads, but the issues presented have been raised above and beyond the social and monetary questions involved, and the responsibility for the consequences that may arise will rest upon those that provoke it.

Public Investigation Urged

The questions involved are in our respectful judgment, eminently suitable for the calm investigation and decision by the public through the agency of fair arbitration, and cannot be disposed of, to the public satisfaction, in any other manner.

The decision of a Commission or Board of Arbitration, having the public confidence, will be accepted by the public, and the social and financial rearrangements made necessary thereby will be undertaken by the public, but in no less deliberate nor orderly manner.

The railroads of the country cannot under present conditions assume this enormous increase in their expenses. If imposed upon them, it would involve many in early financial embarrassment and bankruptcy and imperil the power of all to maintain their credit and the integrity of their securities.

The immediate increase in cost, followed by other increases that would be inevitable, would substantially appropriate the present purchasing power of the railroads and disable them from expanding and improving their facilities and equipment, to keep abreast of the demands of the country for efficient transportation service.

In good faith we have worked continuously and earnestly in a sincere effort to solve the problem in justice to all the parties at interest. These efforts were still in progress when the issuance of the strike order showed them to be unavailing.

Problem Threatens Democracy Itself

The strike, if it comes, will be forced upon the country by the best paid class of laborers in the world, at a time when the country has the greatest need for transportation efficiency.

The problem presented is not that alone of the railroad or business world, but involving democracy itself, and sharply presents the question whether any group of citizens should be allowed to possess the power to imperil the life of the country by conspiring to block the arteries of commerce.

NICE MAN, WESTCOTT. [illegible] fortune prove the victor [illegible] primary [illegible] is unquestionably a [illegible] election, even stronger [illegible] getter than Westcott. [illegible] people know him, and they don't [illegible] know Westcott. They like his breezy, [illegible] Republican year in New Jersey, but [illegible] and most of them know [illegible] is not nothing about Westcott's ways. They [illegible] as bright as like his independence in the Senate, [illegible] John W. Westcott, should the latter by any freak [illegible] and they have not the sligtest idea of what sort of independence Westcott, who is Jim Nugent's candidate, would display if he should be elected [illegible] United States Senator. There must [illegible] be a widespread suspicion, however, about the independence of any man whom Nugent would elect to political office.

On the basis of the square deal, too, Farmer Jim is entitled to a renomination. Party usage is on his side, and that counts for a great deal. As to his qualifications [illegible] well, he has had six years' experience in the Senate, whereas Westcott is a tenderfoot in national affairs.—Jersey Journal.

NO "EPIDEMIC" IN THE BOROUGH

Council Does Not Consider This Excuse For Bigger Health Budget.

PRICE OF ROCK IS UP

Automobile Fire Apparatus Is Insured for Fire Only—Liability May Be Added—Routine of Last Night's Meeting.

Payment of a claim for $300 presented to the North Plainfield Common Council last night was debated by members because it overdrew the health appropriation $100. The $200 available was ordered paid and the remainder will be paid at once because of "necessity," but the Borough Councilmen refused to consider that any extra money was needed by the health department to take care of an infantile paralysis epidemic, because they deny that an "epidemic" exists or has existed.

Attention to the claim was called by Treasurer Arnold. The health appropriation for the year was $500. Already $300 of this has been paid out and there remains but $200. Last year the health appropriation was $600 and Mayor Smalley explained that the members probably believed their allowance to be the same as last year. It was reduced, he said, because the board had a balance of about $600 at the first of the current fiscal year. It was first suggested that the $300 claim be held up but Councilman McGee suggested that two-thirds of it be taken care of out of the budget and a special appropriation made for the remainder at a later date.

Frank Reynolds was appointed fireman and Grover Schuck callman. Both appointments were approved by the Council.

Chairman Stahl, of the fire committee, reported that the new automobile apparatus had been insured for fire only. Other members felt that liability insurance was needed. The question was not decided but will be discussed later. Expenditures of the fire department for the month were $279.95, for the police department $502.81, and for the streets department $5,146.30. This amount included the work done on Somerset street.

A resolution increasing the pay of firemen was passed. It gives first class firemen $70 a month, second class $65 and third class $60.

A communication from the Plainfield Trap Rock Company notifying the Council that the price of rock would be increased ten per cent after September 11 was received. This will not apply to rock used on the Somerset street work.

Claims for the month totaling $7,244.57 were audited and ordered paid.

Treasurer Arnold was instructed to pay $3,056.17 as the borough's part of the cost of the joint sewer work, and to borrow $5,000 to pay current expenses.

Upon recommendation of Treasurer Arnold fifty per cent. of the cost of a tax sale on a piece of property was cut off.

A resolution calling upon the Public Service Corporation to connect up lights on the Grove street bridge was passed.

The meeting was attended by Mayor Smalley and Councilmen McGee, Wilson, Tingley and Stahl.

PLAINFIELDERS INVITED TO KENYON GARDENS

Plainfielders who are to be at home over Labor Day are requested to visit the Kenyon Gardens and see what the children are doing there. The gardens are easily reached by the Arlington avenue trolley, stop at Arlington place. Beyond a cellar, which eventually is to be a part of Stelle avenue, are the Kenyon Cottage and the big maple, and beyond them the gardens, the cucumber patch and the field of golden bantam corn, soon to be put out to fall spinach.

ALL EXPECT TO COME HOME SOON

New Jersey Troops Believe They Will Leave Border Next Week.

HINE ORDERED BACK

Goes to Sea Girt With Full Brigade Staff—First and Fourth Delayed By Shortage of Cars—No Interest In Strike.

(JAMES J. McNAMEE)

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 2.—General Hine and his staff this morning received orders to report at Sea Girt immediately. This includes Clerk Goddard and all headquarters officers of the brigade, and according to the officers can mean but one thing—the boys are coming home.

It is firmly believed by every New Jersey militiaman here that he will be home before one week from today. This includes infantry, cavalry and batteries. The enlisted men are certain that some advance information has been received by the officers, while the officers are convinced that such an order is the only logical outcome of events.

The First and Fourth regiments, due to leave here today for Sea Girt, from where they will go to Jersey City and Newark for strike duty, will hardly get away. The government has no cars in which to send them North. The men are ready, but they do not know when cars will be available.

Nothing can shake the hope of the men that they are to be mustered out shortly after they reach Sea Girt. They are but little interested in the strike, and do not believe that they would be needed by the government even if a strike should take place.

Douglas, Ariz., Aug. 28.—The arrival here today of 114 recruits for the New Jersey Brigade, who came in on a special train from Fort Du Pont, Del., occasioned an enthusiastic demonstration all along the encampment line. The men arrived in the local railroad yards shortly before 8 o'clock, but were not taken out to the camp until much later.

As the rookies swung up the road toward the camp, the new band of the First Regiment, which accompanied them from Fort Du Pont, played gaily and at the encampment they stopped first at the headquarters of Brigadier General Edwin W. Hine. Later they marched up the camp road, stopping at headquarters of each organization to drop the recruits intended for the individual outfits. The men were brought here under command of Captain Harry J. Burlington, Fourth Regiment; Lieutenant Joseph B. Herendon and Sergeant Charles S. Elliott.

AUTOMOBILES COLLIDE, NO ONE IS INJURED

An automobile accident that practically demolished the two machines but did not injure any of the occupants, occurred at the intersection of Terril road and South avenue yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when cars driven by George Trust, of Dunellen, and Horace Martin, Jr., of this city, came together. Martin's car was damaged the worst, and he sold it to a passerby.

Martin was coming down Terril road to turn into South avenue and Trust was crossing Terril road to ascend the driveway to the Hotel Maples, situated on the corner. The two machines struck in the middle of the road. A settlement was reached between the two.

SLIGHT AUTO ACCIDENT.

An automobile accident occurred at the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon when Robert Winkler, of Roselle Park, lost control of his machine while trying to avoid hitting a taxicab driven by Robert Tait and ran into a post. In trying to swerve in front of Tait to keep from hitting him, Winkler lost control of the car. The machine hit a pole, breaking the radiator, lights and mudguards.

SEEN ON THE STREET.

A large black and white sign painted on the front of an East Second street livery stable, reads as follows: "Horses borded and sold."

Atlantic City $2.50 Excursion

BOARD OF HEALTH ORDER

Parents are hereby warned not to take sick children on the public street for any purpose whatever.

If a child is sick, call a physician. The Health Department has learned that a child from out of town was brought to Plainfield on the trolley car, the child at the time showing the beginning symptoms of Infantile Paralysis.

SCOTCHMEN VISIT ELIZABETH CLAN

Attractive Program, Including Class Initiation, Feature of the Evening.

A large delegation from Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, Order Scottish Clans, visited Clan Gordon, No. 69, of Elizabeth, last night, the occasion being class initiation. Addresses were made by several visitors and bagpipe selections, songs and recitations were contributed by many of the members.

The presentation of a button-hole of Scotch heather, which had just been brought from the old country by one of the Gordons who returned from a visit there, was a feature of the evening. After the meeting there were contests in pinochle, checkers and deck quoits, the honors being about even. The local clansmen left for home about midnight, having spent an enjoyable and profitable evening.

MISS ISABELLA VAIL DIES IN 77TH YEAR

Prominent Member of Religious Society of Friends Passes Away Here.

Miss Isabella R. Vail, aged 77 years, a well-known member of the Religious Society of Friends here, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her brother, Adelbert Vail, on East Fifth street, following a long illness. For the past three years she had made her home with her brother, during which time she had been in failing health from complications.

Miss Vail was born at the Vail homestead at Greenbrook, being the daughter of the late Jonah and Rachel Pound Vail. Her parents died several years ago. Miss Vail was a regular attendant at the Friends' meeting on Watchung avenue, and was interested in all its activities.

There survives beside the brother, Adelbert Vail, a number of nieces and nephews. The funeral service will be held at the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and burial will be in the Friends' cemetery.

HEALTH BOARD ALTERS QUARANTINE RULES

Strict Regulations Regarding Children Under Sixteen Modified.

A change in the ruling of the health departments of both Plainfield and North Plainfield, exempts children under 16 who have been out of town, from quarantine, provided proper certificates from the health authorities of the place of departure are filed within twenty-four hours of their arrival in Plainfield. The failure to file such certificates as required by the State Sanitary Code will result in a quarantine for two weeks. Inn addition, all persons (both adults and children) will be subjected to quarantine if they have been exposed to infection of infantile paralysis and fail to file a certificate of release from their local health authorities.

The local authorities have about reached the conclusion that the infantile paralysis epidemic has spent itself and they can now begin letting up a little on the youngsters.

STEVE LARASSKY.

Steve Larassky, an Italian, who had been at Muhlenberg Hospital since August 24 for treatment, died at that institution this morning. The body will be taken to Manville.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town. INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

N. J. R. CHANDLER,
Health Officer.

HOW LABOR DAY WILL BE OBSERVED

Many Attractions Offered to Keep Plainfielders at Home.

TRADE DEMONSTRATION

Allied Crafts of City Will Participate In Big Parade—Special Programs at the Theatres—Stores Will Be Closed.

Perhaps, to a greater extent than ever before, holiday features will occupy the minds of Plainfielders on Monday, Labor Day. In other years most people left town on that day and the days preceding, but the threatened railroad strike, coupled with the precautions taken for the prevention of the spread of infantile paralysis, will cause a larger majority of the citizens to stay at home, to enjoy the entertaining features provided by their fellow townspeople.

There will be a labor parade in the morning, and it is expected that about 2,000 people will participate in the event. Numerous floats have been entered, and each of the labor unions will have a representation. Music will be furnished by several bands and drum corps, and the city and borough will be officially represented by the police in full regalia. There will be no delivery of mail and all the stores and banks will be closed for the day. The attractions at the local theatres will undoubtedly draw large crowds, many of the people going to see the "Globe Trotters" at the Plainfield Theatre and the pictures at the Proctor house.

In additon to the program already outlined there will be an unusually attractive baseball card presented to the fans. Those who live in North Plainfield can take a little trip to Hyde Oval and can see the St. Joseph and American Tile Workers' teams in action in a double bill. On Parker Field, the Plainfield All-Stars will compete against the Elizabeth Stars, and this attraction will undoubtedly provide plenty of amusement. In addition the Royal Giants are carded to meet Netherwood, and this contest will draw large crowds.

The library reading room will be open in the afternoon from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m. The library will be closed in the morning.

POLITICIANS' DAY AT MONMOUTH FAIR

Senator Martine and Others Mingle With Big Crowd at Red Bank.

Red Bank, N. J., Sept. 2.—It was politicians' day at the Monmouth fair yesterday, and many candidates for various offices were among the visitors. They included U. S. Senator James E. ALLIED FLEET IS SENT TO GREECE

Big Guns Support the Revolution Against Neutrality.

TRAINED ON PIREAUS

Venizelos Heads Party That Is Trying to Overthrow King—Italian Advance Stopped by Austrians—Revolution in Athens.

London, Sept. 2.—In anticipation of trouble at Athens, a fleet of twenty-seven Allied warships, convoying seven transports of troops, is off the Piraeus today and probably will land forces immediately. The Allied guns are trained on the Greek port, as in the days of the blockade that forced Greece to demobilize her army.

Whether King Constantine has abdicated in favor of the Crown Prince, has fled or is confined to his bed from illness, all of which have been reported, it is certain that Greece is near a revolt.

The patience of the Greek leaders eager to throw their lot with the Entente Allies is said to have been exhausted, and they have revolted against the neutrality of their King.

There is reason to credit reports that the pro-Ally faction seized the barracks at Salonica, Vodena and Fort Little Karaburun and the revolt is spreading, spreading. Venizelos is expected to be the power behind the new move, and a declaration of war against the Central Empires would bring no surprise.

Italian Assaults Checked.

Vienna (by wireless from Berlin), Sept. 2.—Attempts by the Italians to push forward their lines have been frustrated by the Austro-Hungarians, says the War Office report, dated September 1, which was made public today.

Revolution in Athens.

Geneva, Sept. 2.—Revolutionary disturbances have broken out in Athens, it is reported in a dispatch received here today. French and British troops are reported to be patrolling the city.

Paris Admits German Victory.

Paris, Sept. 2.—The capture of French trenches by the Germans on the Somme front was admitted by the War Office today. The Germans delivered very violent attacks in the region of Estrees, and were able to occupy a few elements of earthworks in the region of Maurepas, says the communique. There was heavy cannonading.

Roumania Includes Turkey.

Constantinople, Sept. 2.—Roumania has declared war against Turkey. The declaration of war was issued in Bucharest on the night of August 30, but owing to the interruption of wire communication between Roumania and Turkey, it was not until today that the Roumanian Charge D' Affaires notified the Turkish Government.

Germans to Help Austrians.

London, Sept. 2.—Fifty thousand German soldiers have been sent into Hungary by Field Marshal Hindenburg to help check the advance of Roumanians and Russians through Transylvania, say a Central News Agency dispatch from The Hague today. There troops are now at Klausenburg. The Austro-Hungarians have begun to evacuate Maoc, Vasarhely, 66 miles inside of the Hungarian frontier.

EARLY MORNING FIRE CAUSES $500 DAMAGE ON PARK AVE.

The Fire Department responded to an alarm at 7:39 this morning to extinguish a blaze in the apartment of Francis Jones, on the second floor of 119 Park avenue. The fire was put out by a stream of water and chemicals, with damage not exceeding $500. The stores of Henry Eggerding and James R. Blair, on the first floor, were slightly damaged by water.

The fire started while breakfast was being prepared. It is thought that a match thrown carelessly in the corner started the blaze.

RODE FREIGHTS.

Alfred Smith, Pames Eskerson and Roy Rockfellow, all youths living in the West End, were brought into court this morning by a detective for the Jersey Central, who caught them riding freights. It made the second time for Smith within a week, and after warning them that next time it would mean the reformatory, Judge DeMeza let them go.

SENATE AT WORK ON 8-HOUR BILL

Expects to Pass It By 6 P. M.—To Wilson By Midnight.

AMENDMENTS PENDING

Underwood Would Give I. C. C. Power to Fix Wages of Trainmen—Railroads Already Plan to Contest Legality of Measure.

Washington, Sept. 2.—When the Senate reconvened at 10 o'clock prepared to put through the House Eight-Hour bill by 6 o'clock tonight, the Underwood amendment, giving the Interstate Commerce Commission power to fix rate of wages for trainmen, was still pending. Senator Shafroth offered an amendment to it, providing that nothing in the provision should be construed as compelling the employes to work at the wages prescribed.

By midnight, it is expected, President Wilson, at his summer home at Shadow Lawn, N. J., will have signed the measures.

As soon as they are formed the bills have become laws, it is expected the presidents of the four brotherhoods will telegraph to their 640 general chairmen throughout the United States the code word announcing that the strike ordered for Labor Day is not to be called.

The brotherhood chiefs insist the bills must be signed by the President before they will rescind their strike order. W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, said early today:

"I wish I could say that it is all over, but I cannot. I cannot say anything."

Immediately after the bills are signed by the President a legal battle to determine their constitutionality will be begun by the railroads. Railroad magnates gloomily declare the passage of the bills will not avert a strike, but will merely postpone it.

Irresistible.

It was the war of 1990, and the amazons were ranged in battle.

The lady colonel was rallying her troops, among whom panic seemed likely to spread.

"Women," she cried, waving her parasol, "will you give way to mannish fears?"

For a moment they pulled themselves together, yet still hesitated to advance. Then their leader made one last effort:

"Women, listen! Are you going to show the white feather in a season when feathers are not being worn?"

The appeal was successful.

"Never!" cried the amazons as they dashed forward to meet the enemy.

Ladies' Portraits.

In a moment of self revelation Hoppner once stated that in painting ladies' portraits he used to make as beautiful a face as he could, then give it a likeness to the sitter, afterward working down from this beautiful state until the observer should cry out, "Oh, I see a likeness coming." Then Hoppner would stop and never venture to make it more like.—London Telegraph.

ANNOYING KIDNEY ILLS.

Make Life Miserable for Many Plainfield People.

There's nothing more annoying than kidney weakness or inability to properly control the kidney secretions. Night and day alike, the sufferer is tormented and what with the burning and scalding, the attendant backache, headache and dizziness, life is indeed, a burden. Doan's Kidney Pills have given peace and comfort to many Plainfield people. Profit by this Plainfield resident's experience.

Mrs. Wm. E. Gardner, 957 Union street, Plainfield, says: "I suffered much from pains through my back. My kidneys were irregular in action. I was in a distressed condition for months and nothing I tried seemed to give me a bit of relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from L. W. Randolph's pharmacy. They seemed to take hold in my system immediately, regulating the kidney action, removing the rheumatic pains and improving my condition so much that I felt like a different person."

(Statement given February 18, 1911).

On August 8, 1916, Mrs. Gardner said: "I can still praise Doan's Kidney Pills and I wouldn't be without them, for they certainly have been a good medicine for me. Not once have they failed to give me relief that has been nothing less than miraculous."

Price 50c., at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Gardner has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

RETURN OF SOLDIERS CHANGES CONDITIONS

New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League Discontinues Seeking Funds.

Sea Girt, Sept. 9.—Orders for the return of the First and Fourth Regiments from Douglas, Arizona to Sea Girt, have changed the plans for the future of the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League. Mrs. James F. Fielder, wife of the Governor and president of the League, this morning sent letters to all the county chairmen, asking them to discontinue seeking funds, but urging that the League be continued. The letter said:

"The issuance of an order for the return of two New Jersey regiments materially changes the conditions which up to this time have been the concern of the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League. The return of these men will reduce the number of dependent families and the funds on hand will probably be sufficient to meet all future demands, provided the return of the remainder of the troops occurs within a short period.

"The central committee requests that further efforts toward the collection of funds be suspended. It is urged, however, that the organization be kept intact, so that in case it should be found necessary to raise more money for the purposes for which the League was formed it may be quickly done."

The League has on hand $6,312, out of the original $9,961 subscribed for the work.

A FIVE-ROOM CEMENT COTTAGE

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THERE has been great improvement made during the past few years in medium sized cottage homes, having every modern convenience, pretty original designs and moderate in cost. It has been said that there "is nothing new under the sun", but these designs are all modified one from another and each has its own originality, they are complete little homes, such as the one shown in this illustration.

The general size is 24 ft. in width by a total depth of 33 ft. It is arranged for an east or south front. There are three good rooms on the first floor and two chambers with bath room and sleeping porch on the second floor, also ample closets are provided. There is a small porch entrance on the left corner with vestibule entrance and coat closet opening out of same. The living room is 16 ft. by 12 ft., with the dining room on the left and opening with the living room by wide cased opening. On the right is the stairway with basement stairs below and grade entrance and door from kitchen to main stairs making a very convenient arrangement. The kitchen in the rear is arranged with ample cupboards and has a large porch in the rear with sleeping porch over.

The first story is finished in oak and the second in birch. There is a good full basement with laundry, heating room, etc. The cost is estimated at $3,200 to $4,000. The construction is frame with metal lath and cement stucco outside, with shingle roof stained and all outside trimmings white or to suit the owner's taste.

THREE APARTMENT HOUSES FOR THE WEST END OF CITY

Louis Kadish, of 33 Somerset street, has awarded Cohan & Israelsky the contract for building two two-family houses at New and West Second streets. They will be two and a half stories each in height and of frame construction. W. H. Plume was the architect. Each dwelling will cost $3,000.

A store and residence to cost about $5,000 is to be built shortly at 301 Manson place, by Alfonso Cioci for Samuel Colison. It will be two and a half stories in height and of hollow tile construction. George Fisher drew the plans. The store will occupy the first floor and apartments will be on the second.

One Kind of a Woman.

In one of the leading grocery stores a richly attired woman was overheard ordering a pound of tea. "The eighty cent kind," she reminded the clerk. "We want it good." She was turning away when she stopped suddenly and, attracting the attention of the clerk, pointed to a coffee can marked "Seventeen cents a pound." "Just give me a quarter of a pound of that, please," she said. "My husband is the only one in the family who uses coffee."—Boston Transcriber.

Tibet.

Tibet is all mountains and valleys. There is scarcely a plain worthy of the name. The mountain passes are at a high altitude and crossed only with great difficulty. The valleys are well populated, but the cities are small and the houses crude buildings of mud walls. The streets are narrow and dirty. Northern Tibet is peopled largely by nomad tribes, while in the south there is a more settled population.

Bright Child.

"How long has your daughter been studying art?"

"Five years, and she has made great progress. She can talk about motifs and atmosphere and such things in such a way as to make you think she knows perfectly what she means."—Chicago Tribune.

The Kitchen Closet.

Glass is an ideal shelfing for a kitchen closet, as it can be kept clean so easily. If this is too costly paint the shelves white and give a coat of enamel. This is easily scrubbed and does away with the necessity of germ catching papers.

Wycliffe's Bible.

John Wycliffe completed the translation of the whole Bible for the first time into the language of the English people. He was born near Richmond, in Yorkshire, England, about 1324.

Something New Every Day

September days are really here—and even before you tear the August sheet off the calendar you're wondering just what you ought to buy for Autumn. The straight line serge frocks are so simple, so altogether charming—and they come in a variety of colors—then the waist line models with great full pockets sometimes weighted with embroidery have a roguish dash that Autumn suggests, to say nothing of nonchalant Redingote models. In spite of much discussion coats do seem to flare, and they vary from hip to knee length. Fur is used most ingeniously—the wide soft flat edging, sometimes of seal, sometimes other fur, always most effective on lustrous broadcloth. It is a comfort to know that at Hearn's one can always find extra sizes, as well as the regular sizes, and a style varied to suit every sort of person.

As for variety—that's one of the joys of the new hats. While as yet they are simplicity itself—the chicness depending almost entirely on the line of the brim—and the shape of the crown, whether it's high and stiff—wide and very full and floppy, or simply regular. Our copies of some of the French models are very interesting.

Have you seen them?

But the kiddies clothes—any little girl of twelve years or so is sure to get before the long mirror and say "Oh, I like this school dress." The newest frocks are in serge in regulation sailor styles, and then in middy effects. The older school girls and even the very fastidious high school or college girl will like our serge frocks. They vary so. We have everything for the school boy, too.

Since from now on our store is open Saturdays, it is very simple for school girl or the school girl and her mother to shop Saturdays. September 2nd (today) ends the Saturday closing—a practice which originated with this store sixteen years ago.

Every day brings new Autumn things—the very last whisper in style from those who know—and the sooner you make your selection, the surer you will be of finding the very thing you want.

Baseball Brains.

Speaking of picked baseball teams, a writer in the New York World says: "There have been teams picked for their batting and teams picked for their fielding, but if we were to pick a team for sheer baseball brains and could have all the men in their prime we would take Hal Chase at first, Johnny Evers at second, Honus Wagner at short, John McGraw at third, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Fielder Jones in the outfield, Mike Kelly behind the bat and Christy Mathewson on the mound."

Helen Varick Boswell, who is figuring in the Presidential campaign in the United States as president of the Women's National Republican Association, is a native of Baltimore, who studied law in Washington and holds the degree of LL. B. In 1907 she was sent by the Federal government to investigate social conditions in the Panama Canal zone. Her executive ability has enabled her to fill high and responsible positions in the Federation of Women's Clubs, in women suffrage organizations and in special societies formed to promote better social and industrial conditions. In the campaign of 1912 she saved the Republican party in much the same way she will serve it in this contest, namely, as an organizer of the women who, either as voters or contributors of money, feel inclined to support the party's candidate for the Presidency.

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Patrolman Max Batoski, a Chicago policeman who acts as court interpreter in a district described as possessing every known nationality and still "others from the moon and Mars and the Black Hole of Calcutta," speaks fourteen languages well enough to translate them to the perplexed judge when the latter has to face these variegated linguistic problems. As is well known, the knowledge of one foreign language besides one's native tongue, brings incredible facility for acquiring a third, and Patrolman Batoski got his start by being born a Pole in Russian Poland and therefore "growing" Russian and Polish as naturally as he grew his teeth; next by living in Germany from the age of 5 to 14 years, and attending the excellent German schools during this time, and finally by coming to America when he was still a young man—which was fourteen—to have some schooling and acquire English easily, after the fashion of youngsters. After this, nothing was difficult, and Patrolman Batoski has since been steadily adding to his collection of languages. An especially remarkable achievement has been the acquiring of Indian dialects when he served in the United States Army. He saw ten years' service, during which he was stationed in the West and came in contact with the Sioux, Chippewa and other tribes. His ability to understand the braves was such that when he resigned from the army he was straightway offered a position as Indian interpreter by Major McLaughlin, of North Dakota, who was an Indian agent.

One of the largest legacies music has ever received is the $700,000 just recently left by Bryan Lathrop of Chicago. The purpose of the bequest was expressed by Br. Lathrop as follows: "The City of Chicago now has universities, technical schools, museums and an unsurpassed orchestra, but it has no public school of music, such as the Conservatoire de Paris, and it is, in my opinion, very desirable that an institution should be founded in Chicago in which an education can be obtained in the higher branches of music and musical composition, not inferior to that provided in the cities of Europe."

The report that college men serving in the National militia on the Mexican border would be released to return to their studies in September, has given rise to a lot of discussion among the guardsmen themselves, and can be said to have been received with mixed feelings, in some cases by the collegians, first of all. Among the latter a goodly number have already signified that a college education was not in their opinion a reason for developing into a "slacker" and they will resolutely stick to their posts whether school keeps or not. As to the majority of the men, they believe that to release college students and hold men that have families dependent upon them and business interests going to ruin in their absence, is the most unfair and foolish proposition that could be advanced. Still, with things going on as they are, with only months of drill for no definitely known purpose in prospect, no one in camp is very virulent against any man who tries to get out by whatever means he can. College students are regarded as lucky, even if the principle involved doesn't meet approval.

Will Women Elect the Next President?

It is estimated that there are, in twelve States of the Union, more than 4,000,000 women who, if they care to do so, may vote for President at the November election. One-third of these live in Illinois. California has more than 800,000, Washington more than 400,000, Kansas nearly 500,000, Colorado 250,000, Idaho, Montana and Utah about 100,000 each, and Oregon more than 200,000. Arizona has probably 45,000, Wyoming 35,000 and Nevanda 25,000. True it may be that a considerable percentage of these women do not care to vote, but the great majority, after fighting for years to get the ballot, now exercise this privilege.

Some of the most forceful suffrage leaders intends to make the vote of their sex count in this year's campaign. They realize that the women, if they act in unison, may decide the Presidential election. In several of the suffrage states there are enough women voters to throw those states either to Wilson or Hughes in the electoral college. Their efforts are certain to heighten interest in the campaign, and a block of ninety-one votes is not to be despised, by pre-election mathematicians. Many a Presidential election has turned on a much narrower margin. "The Mathematics of a Presidential Election," by Frank E. Perley in the World's Work.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature as recorded at the State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 72 degrees; 10 a. m., 76 degrees and 12.30, 79 degrees.

Queen Sophia, of Greece, is the leading [illegible] for reforestation movement [illegible] the devastating forest fires which have of late been sweeping the classic hills of Hellas, have been a source of particular chagrin to her. Many of these mountains of Greece, once sung by the poets of antiquity as covered with a delicious verdure, are barren and stony, and the Queen has energetically preached their reforestation to the people, as well as the preservation of the woods and streams still in existence. Every year she plants a tree with her own hands, with due pomp and ceremony, as an example to the women of Greece.

HAS KEPT FAITH, SAYS PRESIDENT

Record Shows Promises Fulfilled, Declares Mr. Wilson.

HIS SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

National Defenses Are Provided For, Laws Against Trusts Simplified, Tariff Revised, Banking System Reformed, Remedial Measures Benefit Workingmen and Farmers and Merchant Marine Revived.

In his address at Shadow Lawn, Long Branch, N. J., accepting the Democratic nomination for president, Woodrow Wilson said:

"Senator James, Gentlemen of the Notification Committee, Fellow Citizens—I cannot accept the leadership and responsibility which the national Democratic convention has again, in such generous fashion, asked me to accept without first expressing my profound gratitude to the party for the trust it reposes in me after four years of fiery trial in the midst of affairs of unprecedented difficulty and the keen sense of added responsibility with which this honor fills (I had almost said burdens) me as I think of the great issues of national life and policy involved in the present and immediate future conduct of our government. I shall seek, as I have always sought, to justify the extraordinary confidence thus reposed in me by striving to purge my heart and purpose of every personal and of every misleading party motive and devoting every energy I have to the service of the nation as a whole, praying that I may continue to have the counsel and support of all forward looking men at every turn of the difficult business.

"For I do not doubt that the people of the United States will wish the Democratic party to continue in control of the government. They are not in the habit of rejecting those who have actually served them for those who are making doubtful and conjectural promises of service. Least of all are they likely to substitute those who promised to render them particular services and proved false to that promise for those who have actually rendered those very services.

Explicit Promises Fulfilled.

"Boasting is always an empty business, which pleases nobody but the boaster, and I have no disposition to boast of what the Democratic party has accomplished. It has merely done its duty. It has merely fulfilled its explicit promises. But there can be no violation of good taste in calling attention to the manner in which those promises have been carried out or in adverting to the interesting fact that many of the things accomplished were what the opposition party had again and again promised to do, but had left undone. Indeed, that is manifestly part of the business of this year of reckoning and assessment. There is no means of judging the future except by assessing the past. Constructive action must be wieghed against destructive comment and reaction."

Mr. Wilson asserted that the Republican party was put out of power because of practical and moral failure, because it had served special interests and not the country at large. Banking reform, the interests of the farmer and the army and navy had been neglected.

Set Free to Move.

"So things stood when the Democratic party came into power. How do they stand now? Alike in the domestic field and in the wide field of the commerce of the world, American business and life and industry have been set free to move as they never moved before.

"The tariff has been revised not on the principle of repelling foreign trade, but upon the principle of encouraging it upon something like a footing of equality with our own in respect of the terms of competition, and a tariff board has been created whose function it will be to keep the relations of American with foreign business and industry under constant observation for the guidance alike of our business men and of our congress. American energies are now directed toward the markets of the world.

"The laws against trusts have been clarified by definition with a view to making it plain that they were not directed against big business, but only against unfair business and the pretense of competition where there was none, and a trade commission has been created with powers of guidance and accommodation which have relieved business men of unfounded fears and set them upon the road of hopeful and confident enterprise.

"By the federal reserve act the supply of currency at the disposal of active business has been rendered elastic, taking its volume not from a fixed body of investment securities, but from the liquid assets of daily trade, and these assets are assessed and accepted not by distant groups of bankers in control of unavailable reserves, but by bankers at the many centers of local exchange who are in touch with local conditions everywhere.

"Effective measures have been taken for the re-creation of an American merchant marine and the revival of the American carrying trade indispensable to our emancipation from the control which foreigners have so long exercised over the opportunities, the routes, and the methods of our commerce with other countries.

"The interstate commerce commission has been reorganized to enable it to perform its great and important functions more promptly and more efficiently. We have created, extended and improved the service of the parcels post. So much we have done for business. What other party has understood the task so well or executed it so intelligently and energetically?

"For the farmers of the country we have virtually created commercial credit by means of the federal reserve act and the rural credits act. They now have the standing of other business men in the money market. We have successfully regulated speculation in "futures" and established standards in the marketing of grains. By an intelligent warehouse act we have assisted to make the standard crops available as never before both for systematic marketing and as a security for loans from the banks.

"The workingmen of America have been given a veritable emancipation by the legal recognition of a man's labor as part of his life and not a mere marketable commodity; by exempting labor organizations from processes of the courts, which treated their members like fractional parts of mobs and not like accessible and responsible individuals; by releasing our seamen from involuntary servitude; by making adequate provision for compensation for industrial accidents; by providing suitable machinery for mediation and conciliation in industrial disputes and by putting the federal department of labor at the disposal of the workingman when in search of work.

"We have effected the emancipation of the children of the country by releasing them from hurtful labor. We have instituted a system of national aid in the building of highroads such as the country has been feeling after for a century. We have sought to equalize taxation by means of an equitable income tax. We have taken the steps that ought to have been taken at the outset to open up the resources of Alaska. We have provided for national defense upon a scale never before seriously proposed upon the responsibility of an entire political party. We have driven the tariff lobby from cover and obliged it to substitute solid argument for private influence.

A Record of Promises Kept.

"This extraordinary recital must sound like a platform, a list of sanguine promises, but it is not. It is a record of promises made four years ago and now actually redeemed in constructive legislation. We have in four years come very near to carrying out the platform of the Progressive party as well as our own, for we also are progressives."

This program, Mr. Wilson declared, was resisted at every step by interests which the Republican party had fostered at the expense of the country, interests which had fought the reform of the banking and currency system and which were now planning for the amendment of the federal reserve act by the concentration of control in a single bank which the "old familiar group of bankers" can keep under their eye and direction. But while the "big men" who used to write the tariffs and command the assistance of the treasury have been hostile—all but a few with vision—the average business man knows that he has been delivered unless the party that consulted only the "big men" should return to power. They still select its candidates and dictate its policy, he said.

Foreign Affairs.

Concerning foreign affairs, we have been neutral because it was the traditional policy of the United States to stand aloof from European politics, Mr. Wilson declared. Property rights of our citizens can be vindicated by claims for damages, but the fundamental rights of humanity cannot be.

"The loss of life is irreparable. Neither can direct violations of a nation's sovereignty await vindication in suits for damages. The nation that violates these essential rights must expect to be checked and called to account by direct challenge and resistance. It at once makes the quarrel in part our own. These are plain principles, and we have never lost sight of them or departed from them. The passions and intrigues of certain active groups and combinations of men among us who were born under foreign flags injected the poison of disloyalty into our own most critical affairs, laid violent hands upon many of our industries and subjected us to the shame of divisions of sentiment and purpose in which America was contemned and forgotten. It is part of the business of this year of reckoning and settlement to speak plainly and act with unmistakable purpose in rebuke of these things in order that they may be forever hereafter impossible. I am the candidate of a party, but I am above all things else an American citizen. I neither seek the favor nor fear the displeasure of that small alien element among us which puts loyalty to any foreign power before loyalty to the United States."

The Mexican Trouble.

Concerning Mexico the president stated that we believed that small and weak states have the right to expect to be dealt with exactly as big and powerful states would be. Our recent pursuit of bandits into Mexican territory was no violation of that principle. We ventured to enter Mexican territory only because there were no military forces in Mexico that could protect our border from hostile attack and our own people from violence.

Many serious wrongs against the property, many irreparable wrongs against the persons of Americans have been committed within the territory of Mexico herself during this confused revolution, but we could not act directly in that matter ourselves without denying Mexicans the right to any revolution at all which disturbed us and making the emancipation of her own people await our interest and convenience.

"The people of Mexico have not been suffered to own their own country or direct their own institutions. Outsiders, men out of other nations and with interests too often alien to their own, have dictated what their privileges and opportunities should be and who should control their land, their lives and their resources—some of them Americans, pressing for things they could never have got in their own country. The Mexican people are entitled to attempt their liberty from such influences, and so long as I have anything to do with the action of our great government I shall do everything in my power to prevent any one standing in their way. It is hard doctrine only for those who wish to get something for themselves out of Mexico. I have heard no one who was free from such influences propose interference by the United States with the internal affairs of Mexico. Certainly no friend of the Mexican people has proposed it.

The "Unspeakable Huerta."

"The people of Mexico are striving for the rights that are fundamental to life and happiness—15,000,000 oppressed men, overburdened women and pitiful children in virtual bondage in their own home of fertile lands and inexhaustible treasure. Some of the leaders of the revolution may often have been mistaken and violent and selfish, but the revolution itself was inevitable and is right. The unspeakable Huerta betrayed the very comrades he served, traitorously overthrew the government of which he was a trusted part, impudently spoke for the very forces that had driven his people to the rebellion with which he had pretended to sympathize. The men who overcame him and drove him out represent at least the fierce passion of reconstruction which lies at the very heart of liberty, and so long as they represent, however imperfectly, such a struggle for deliverance I am ready to serve their ends when I can. So long as the power of recognition rests with me the government of the United States will refuse to extend the hand of welcome to any one who obtains power in a sister republic by treachery and violence. No permanency can be given the affairs of any republic by a title based upon intrigue and assassination. Mistakes I have no doubt made in this perplexing business, but not in purpose or object."

To Play a Leading Part.

The president declared that we must be prepared both in resources and in policy to play our part when Europe's war is over. There must be a just and settled peace, and the nations of the world must unite in joint guarantees that whatever is done to disturb the whole world's life must first be tested in the court of the whole world's opinion before it is attempted.

"We have created in the federal trade commission a means of inquiry and of accommodation in the field of commerce which ought both to coordinate the enterprises of our traders and manufacturers and to remove the barriers of misunderstanding and of a too technical interpretation of the law. In the new tariff commission we have added another instrumentality of observation and adjustment which promises to be immediately serviceable. The trade commission substitutes counsel and accommodation for the harsher processes of legal restraint, and the tariff commission ought to substitute facts for prejudices and theories.

"We can no longer indulge our traditional provincialism. We are to play a leading part in the world drama whether we wish it or not. We shall lend, not borrow; act for ourselves, not imitate or follow; organize and initiate, not peep about merely to see where we may get in.

"We have already formulated and agreed upon a policy of law which will explicitly remove the ban now supposed to rest upon co-operation among our exporters in seeking and securing their proper place in the markets of the world. At home we have put all kinds of unfair competition under the ban and penalty of the law. We have barred monopoly. We ought both to husband and to develop our natural resources, our mines, our forests, our water power.

"We must hearten and quicken the spirit and efficiency of labor throughout our whole industrial system by everywhere and in all occupations doing justice to the laborer, not only by paying a living wage, but also by making all the conditions that surround labor what they ought to be. We must co-ordinate the railway systems of the country for national use and must facilitate and promote their development with a view to that co-ordination and to their better adaptation as a whole to the life and trade and defense of the nation."

In conclusion Mr. Wilson said that he had sought to interpret the spirit and meaning of the St. Louis platform, and that the people knew that that platform was a definite pledge which would be kept. The day of little Americanism, with its narrow horizons, when methods of "protection" and industrial nursing were the chief study of our provincial statesmen, was past and gone.

"We are Americans for big America and rejoice to look forward to the days when all mankind shall look upon our great people with a new sentiment of admiration, friendly rivalry and real affection as upon a people who, though keen to succeed, seeks always to be at once generous and just and to whom humanity is dearer than profit or selfish power. Upon this record and in the faith of this purpose we go to the country."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE TO INAUGURATE UNUSUAL PROGRAM OF PICTURES BEGINNING MONDAY

The management of Proctor's local theatre have been fortunate in catering to a clientile of Plainfield's best theatregoers and it is noticable even on the hottest days, that the theatre has been comfortably filled of late. There is apparently a good reason for this as the local manager has been the recipient of complimentary letters congratulating the management upon the splendid film productions shown there.

For the fall season it has arranged one of the most elaborate photoplay programs ever shown in this vicinity, including the first run presentation of their productions in this city, and in additon to the Triangle, Fox and Metro feaures which they are now presenting, starting in September the management will add the world's famous Paramount pictures to the program. Thus patrons of Proctor's will have an opportunity of witnessing the performances of such well known and exceedingly popular stars as Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Dustin Farnum, Pauline Frederick, Victor Moore, Geraldine Farrar, George Beban, Hazel Dawn and scores of other talented artists. William A. Brady will also contribute his share to the entertainment of Plainfielders by presenting his famous World films and introducing such favorites as Kitty Gordon, Alice Brady, House Peters, Robert Warwick, Gail Kane, Mollie King, Holbrook Blinn and many other stars.

The Paramount and William A. Brady productions will be added to the present program, consisting of such well known and famous producers as Fox, Triangle and Metro, and also the V. L. S. E. or Big Four Features.

Some of the prominent Fox stars who will continue to greet their many admirers are Theda Bara, William Farnum, Valeska Surrat, June Caprice, Stuart Holmes and many other leading lights. Triangle will offer a large list of favorites which includes Douglas Fairbanks, the popular Gish sisters, Lillian and Dorothy, William S. Hart, H. B. Warner, Bessie Barriscale, DeWolf Hopper, Norma Talmadge, Frank Keenan, Mae Marsh and numerous others. Metro features will be made doubly interesting by the starring of such talented artists as Olga Petrova, Lionel Barrymore, May Allison, Francis X. Bushman, Mabel Taliaferro, Ethel Barrymore and Harold Lockwood. The V. L. S. E. Corporation, consisting of the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay, will present popular players, including Lillian Walker, Kathryn Williams, Nance O'Neil, Antonio Mareno, Henry B. Walthall, Edith Storey, Dorothy Kelley, Charles Richman, and scores of screen stars equally as famous, and in addition will present the famous Keystone comedies with such laugh provoking funmakers as Roscoe Arbuckle, Mack Swain, Louisa Fazenda, Ford Sterling, Al. St. John, Charles Murray, etc.

Prominent serials will also be offered for patrons desiring this type of entertainment among which will be "Beatrice Fairfax," the latest Hearst creation, with charming Grace Darling, who is loved and adored by thousands, and Harry Fox the famous comedian, in the leading roles.

On Mondays the management have introduced V. L. S. E. days; on Tuesdays the Triangle features and the Keystone comedies will hold forth; on Wednesday William Fox will introduce his creations, while Thursday will be given over to Thomas H. Ince's contributions to the Triangle program. Friday will keep up the standard by offering William A. Brady productions, while Saturday has been set aside for the presentation of Metro features. On Friday, September 29, first run Paramount pictures will be greeted by Proctor patrons.

It is confidently expected that the management has judged the amusement seekers of Plainfield rightly when it makes this appeal to all lovers of the best in photoplay entertainment and it hopes it will be well rewarded for their efforts by large audiences at all performances.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

ANCHOR TO WINDWARD.

Suppose a day when the German high command says, in effect:

"We have done all we can. We strove for victory, but it is not ours. They are too many for us; we must make terms. And we must tell our own people the truth."

Not an easy matter, certainly. The making of the last admission would, perhaps, be the most difficult of all.

But, should that day come soon or late, there is no man, save the Kaiser, and possibly not excepting him, whose authority for the statement would, so far as present appearances indicate, carry such weight with the Germans as Von Hindenburg. If he had not been made chief of staff it might be said that Germany had disregarded her chief factor in planning success or averting disaster. If, on the other hand, Germany cannot win with Von Hindenburg, could she have hoped to win anyway?

Von Hindenburg's appointment may mean a new era of success for Teuton arms, or it may be that a superhuman task confronts him. In the latter case his verdict, so far as can be seen now, would not be questioned by the German people. Whatever hopes may be based on Von Hindenburg, it is never bad policy to have an anchor to windward.—Newark Evening News.

EDUCATIONAL PREPAREDNESS.

Every generation in our nation's history has had its slogan. Indeed, so rapidly do conditions change, so fluid seem to be prevailing issues, that within one lifetime many cries are recorded. Today the rallying cry is "Preparedness." Press, platform, pulpit, public and private arenas of every kind, under the stimulus of political creed or of party politics, of business interests or of patriotic fervor, have accepted the new watchword as token of the paramount issue of the day, and are marshalling their forces of support or of resistence according to other relations to the questions involved.

This word of the hour, Preparedness, is interesting, is potent, is unavoidable, because of the depth of its significance, the reach of its application, and the epidemic nature of its challenges. Whether we will or not, we must meet in one form or another the issues which it raises, or fall into the rubbish heap of thoughtless, heedless, useless citizenship. Therefore, let us consider briefly the relation of education to this new issue, the responsibility of the home and the school.

Progress in times of peace and preparation in the time of crisis rest upon the clear long-distance vision of the prophet—for "where there is no vision the people perish." Power to command and power to obey, the former growing out of the latter, are two great essentials of preparadness and these are moral qualities, the outcome of moral training.

This granted, the duty, the responsibility, the opportunity of home and of school become clear. The whole scheme of training, the whole program of moral discipline in its ideals, its principles, its practice, is inspired by a deeper purpose, a fuller meaning, a stronger call. That a child should honor his father, his mother, respect their authority, obey their commands, show them consideration, treat them with gracious courtesy, is a matter of far more than personal or family concern. That the pupils of every school in the land should obey its rules, should show respect to those in authority, should punctiliously meet their responsibilities in the matter of work and of appointments as well as of conduct, is a matter of more than local interest and importance. The parents in the homes and teachers in the schools should train law-abiding, authority-respecting, socially responsible individuals with a high sense of personal honor and a deep regard for the rights of others is a matter of civic significance and of world-wide importance.

It will be admitted that education as a whole may be reduced to three categories: intellectual, moral and physical. But the question that gives rise to constant perplexity is: "What knowledge is of most worth?" It has been truly remarked that, in order of time, decoration precedes dress. And it is, therefore, not a little curious that like relations hold with the mind. Among mental as among bodily acquisitions, the ornamental comes before the useful. Not only in times past, but almost as much in our own era, that knowledge which conduces to personal well-being has been postponed to that which brings applause. If we inquire what is the real motive for giving boys a classical education, we find it to be simply conformity to public opinion. Men dress children's minds as they do their bodies, in the prevailing custom, in order that he may have "the education of a gentleman," that badge which marks a certain social position and brings a consequent respect. In these latter days of civilization, however, we see that in the dress of men the regard for appearance has in a considerable degree yielded to the regard for comfort; while in education, the useful has of late been trenching on the ornamental.

Dancing, deportment, the piano, drawing—what a large space these occupy! If you ask why Italian and German are learnt, you will find that, under all the sham reasons given, the real reason is, that a knowledge of those tongues is considered "ladylike." It is not that the books written in them may be utilized, which they scarcely ever are, but that Italian and German songs may be sung and that the extent of attainment may bring whispered admiration.

Of course, we are none of us content with quietly unfolding our own individualities to the full in all directions; but we have a restless craving to impress our individualites upon others. And this it is which determines the character of our education. Before devoting years to some subject which fashion or fancy suggests, it is surely wise to weigh with great care the worth of the results, as compared with the worth of various alternative results which the same years might bring if otherwise applied.

It seems to me the first in importance, though sometimes the last to be considered, is the problem, "How to live?" That is the essential question. Not how to live in the mere material sense only, but in the widest sense. The general problem which comprehends every special problem is the right ruling of conduct in all directions under all circumstances. In what way to treat the body, in what way to treat the mind, in what way to manage our affairs, in what way to bring up a family, in what way to behave as a citizen, in what way to utilize all those sources of happiness which nature supplies—how to use all our faculties to the greatest advantage of ourselves and others—how to live completely? And this being the great thing needful for us to learn, is, by consequence, the great thing which education has to teach. To prepare us for complete living is the funcion which education has to discharge.

In order to proceed systematically, our first step must obviously be to classify, in sequence, the leading knds of activity which constitute human life. They may be arranged naturally into: activites which directly minister to self-preservation; activities which, by securing the necessities of life, indirectly minister to self-preservation; activities which have for their end the rearing and discipline of children; activities which are involved in the maintenance of proper social and political relations; and lastly, those miscellaneous activities which make up the leisure part of life, devoted to the gratification of the tastes and feelings.

Of course the ideal education is complete preparation in all these divisions. But failing this ideal, as in our phase of civilization every one must do more or less, the aim should be to maintain a due proportion between the degrees of preparation in each. Not exhaustive cultivation in any one, supremely important though it may be, not even exclusive attention to two or three divisions, but an attention to all in proportion as the value seems greatest. In regulating education by this standard, we shall attain that degree of educational preparedness which shall determine the standards of the nation, the honor and worth of which must be measured by its service to civilization and not by its armed conquests.

Men Aren't Worrying a Bit.

The appearance of an ankle watch last Sunday created much interest. The fair damsel that wore her wrist watch in that manner was calm in manner and did not seem to be disconcerted in the least by remarks of passersby. If she wishes to wear her timepiece in that manner why should others worry?—Sebring Times.

"Helpful" Hints.

The pitiable case of a hard-working, law-abiding citizen who fell victim to the propaganda of the fadists is reported. Lem Hutchins read somewhere that whiskers are insanitary, so one night he sacrificed the proud growth of a quarter of a century and went quietly home and to bed. Awakening at dawn, Mrs. Lem saw an unfamiliar face on the pillow beside her. She placed her feet in the middle of Lem's back and followed this up with a kick that rolled him downstairs. Then she kicked him over the fence, where he lay until he told a neighbor who he was. Relations between the couple are still strained, and Lem's hip is broken. He says he is through reading the "Helpful" Hints column.

Encouraging His Successor.

(Hiawahta (Kan.) Democrat.)

We don't know who will succeed us, but we sincerely hope that he will receive the support due him, but we fear that he will not, for there are more tight wads, big jacks and two-faced hypocrites in this town than any town we ever knew, and since we know the situation better, we are less surprised that the long tongues do so much talking, for there is so devilish much for them to talk about.

THE TOILER'S VISION—THROUGH THE SMOKE OF THE PROSPEROUS STACKS HE SEES A REAL HOME OF HIS OWN.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Maclyn Arbuckle appears today by request at Proctor's in "The Reformed Candidate," one of Paramount's most popular pictures. Arbuckle is seen in this production as a hard-headed politician beneath whose broad, expansive coat beats a heart full of sympathy for the weak and the helpless. Art Hoke, the calculating political boss, with whom a November election is an event to be won at any cost, is not always the ruthless schemer bent on maintaining power at the expense of everything else. To be sure he is bluff and unmannerly in his ways at times. He is a great believer in muscular tutelage as an aid to decision with refractory voting followers, and knows when to show no compunction in driving home the lesson of minding one's business by knocking down an unwilling pupil with a right good will. The plot of the story is admirably worked out, the photography and lighting are excellent, and the acting of the suppporting cast including Forest Stanley and Myrtle Stedman, leaves nothing to be desired. In addition today Metro presents Ralph Herz in Sydney Rosenfeld's story, "The Purple Lady," in which he is ably supported by Irene Howley. This is a refreshingly original comedy drama, and was well directed by George A. Lessey. On Monday a double feature V. L. S. E. program will be celebrated, which includes two of the most popular film stars. Robert Edeson will be seen in "Fathers of Men," and Kathlyn Williams will be starred in "The Valiants of Virginia." In addition on Monday patrons of Proctor's will greet "Beatrice Fairfax," the new film series in which charming Grace Darling and Harry Fox, the musical comedy star, assume the leading roles. On Tuesday, Mae Marsh and Robert Harron are featured in a sauint Irish love story, entitled "The Marriage of Molly-O," while on Wednesday William Farnum appears in his latest Fox production, "The End of the Trail."

"POSSUM HUNTER" TRIALS.

Greenville, Ky., Sept. 2.—The fall term of the circuit court which convenes here this month, will take up for trial the cases of a dozen or more citizens under indictment on charges of banding and confederating together for the purpose of intimidation. The charges result from the whipping of James Stewart by a band of masked "possum hunters" last June. Several of those alleged to have been concerned in the affair were convicted at the last term of court and sentenced to terms of from three to seven years in State prison.

Plainfield Theatre.

Preparations have been completed for the opening of the local vaudeville season by the Plainfield Theatre, and as a starter the management has booked for Tuesday and Wednesday of next week a bill that will be the equal of any now showing in the metropolitan district.

With five excellent acts, the headliner of the opening bill will be "The Seven Melody Fiends," in twenty minutes of singing and dancing that is sure to please. Caroline Meredith in a song production will make a hit with her latest musical numbers, and the exhibition of marksmanship shown in "The Sharpshooters," will be a marvel to all.

Nat F. Jerome, late star of "Potash and Perlmutter," will apppear with his own company in a one-act comedy sketch, "Next, Please!" From the rise of the curtain until the last minute the sketch is a ripping, rollicking farce that is a success from start to finish. Brooks and Wilson in a one-act comedy, "Parting," wind up the vaudeville program with a farce that puts the audience into spasms of laughter.

Besides the vaudeville attractions a three or five-reel picture of the latest release will be a regular feature, and Pathe's News and Weekly will conclude each bill.

Does your name, fair reader, of Gladys, or Dorothy, or Emily, or Maud, or Lillian, or Ethel, or Bessie, fit you? If you had been present at your own christening would you have called yourself what your mother decided to call you? Have you been actually so rebellious, as more than one girl before you has been, as to change your name from Minnie to Elizabeth or from Mary to Helen to satisfy your own feelings as to the fitness of things? Why, after all, shouldn't one name be as good as another? What is there in you that suggests that you should have been called Miriam instead of Grace? To partially quote the philosopher, wouldn't a rose smell as sweet under some other name? Evidently, Otto Hauerbach and Arthur Hammerstein thought as you think, and so Elaine became Katinka. It was the intention of Mr. Hauerbach, who wrote the musical play, "Katinka," which Mr. Hammerstein will present here at the Plainfield Theatre tonight, to name his heroine Elaine, with its elfine sound, and its suggestion of romance and old-world chivalry, tickled, too, the fancy of Mr. Hammerstein, and the two decided to give the name of the heroine to the musical comedy. Accordingly, "Elaine" was announced in the dramatic columns as a forthcoming production by Mr. Hammerstein, Mr. Hauerbach and Mr. Rudolf Friml the triumvirate who had already given the world the charming operetta, "The Firefly," and the musical jollity, "High Jinks," and the advent of the petite Elaine was eagerly awaited.

At the Plainfield Theatre Monday matinee and night "Blutch" Cooper's big burlesque organization, "The Globe Trotters," will hold the stage, matinee and night, in two-act musical comedy, entitled "Trotting Around" and an all star vaudeville olio, which will be seen during the action of the play. Frank Hunter, the well known comedian and Eddie Swartz, who has been a favorite in both musical comedy and vaudeville, are the twin comedy stars of the organization this season. "The Globe Trotters" was written by that noted writer of comedy, Billy K. Wells, who also supplied the lyrics for the many musical numbers, which were set to tuneful melodies by Fred Egener. The staging of the production was under the personal direction of Mr. Cooper and Raymond B. Perez is responsible for the ensemble arrangements. In the company, in addition to the stars are George Hickman, Elsie Lavedau, Irving O'Hay, Bostonian Four, Virginia Ware, Flo Davenport, Isabella Sisters, Julia Clifford and others equally important.

Selwyn & Company will present their farce classic, "Fair and Warmer," whose fame preceded it over the whole country, at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday night, September 8. Avery Hopwood, author of this gay and bubbling piece became, on its presentation, the most talked-of man in New York. He had surpassed even his own gallant record of "Seven Days," and "Nobody's Widow," and he had written a farce which within its first fourteen weeks had surpassed "Within the Law," its most illustrious rival as a money maker, with its attendance at the Elting Theatre. For one year "Fair and Warmer" ran on Broadway before Selwyn & Company could answer the tremendous demand for it from other parts of the country, and send it on tour. It comes here with an excellent cast of farceurs.

THE FORUM

Apropos of the observance of Labor Day Miss Ada G. Marsh, of this city, has submitted the following expressions on the subject from Amos Pinchot and President Lincoln:

"In the labor movement of today we find the main hope of democracy. It contains the real idealism of American life. Political parties are essentially selfish. Without fundamental principles, they are maintained chiefly to get offices for men who use them to get office.

"The labor group stands out as the one organized body that is ready to make a great sacrifice for a simple and righteous aspiration. Labor is immensely vital because it is fighting for humanity's basic needs and rights." —Amos Pinchot.

"In the early days of our race the Almightly said to the first of our ancestors: 'In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.' And since then, with the exception of light and air of heaven, no good thing has been or can be enjoyed by us without first having cost labor. And inasmuch as all good things have been produced by labor, it follows that such things of right belong to those whose labor has produced them. But it has so happened in all ages of the world that some have labored and others, without labor, have enjoyed a large portion of the fruits. This is wrong and should not continue. To secure to each laborer the whole product of his labor, or as nearly as possible, is a worthy object of any government."—Abraham Lincoln.

ANNETTE KELLERMANN MAKES A PLEA FOR SWIMMING POOLS

She Tells of Construction Problems, of Purifying the Water, of Temperatures and General Sanitary Conditions for Natatoriums.

Article No. 29.

By ANNETTE KELLERMANN.

International Record-Holder and Star of the William Fox $1,000,000 Film "A Daughter of the Gods."

I feel that my series of articles in the Plainfield Daily Press would not be complete without further reference to swimming pools in cities. The building of a natatorium is not a difficult matter and if you would ask your city authorities to obtain a figure as to the probable cost they would be amazed at the apparent cheapness of the cost of erecting a natatorium.

A sunny location should be chosen. In fact, wherever possible the pool should be built on a hill or elevation.

Sunshine would and always will be the greatest asset. No chemicals of any kind should ever be used to purify the water. Instead of this, if a jet of running water be allowed to run through the pool at all times, it will purify the water more than any amount of chemicals could.

The pool should always be shallow at one end and about eight or nine feet deep at the other. It is always best to line the inside of the tank with white tiling. A good sized pool should be at least sixty feet long and thirty feet wide.

If a continuous stream of water is let into the pool the overflow will carry away the collection of sediment.

The pool should be emptied and cleaned once a week.

The temperature of the water should be 72 degrees. A plentiful supply of shower baths will greatly help the sanitary conditions of the water.

Never inclose a pool with a wooden ceiling and walls. Try always to use concrete and paint the walls white—if the pool is enclosed, try to secure a skylight of large dimensions instead of the regulation stone or cement walk around the tank, cork matting being much better than any other preparation.

Philadelphia can assert almost without dispute that it leads in the making of expert women and girl swimmers. In no other city East of the Pacific Coast are there so many record-holding and record-breaking women swimmers, and this despite the fact that that city hasn't nearly so many natural swimming facilities as New York, Boston and other Eastern cities.

Philadelphia, however, has many finely equipped indoor pools, and it is in these pools that the record-breaking girls have received their early training under the watchful eyes of competent instructors, who have brought into play every scientific point that would prove of aid to speed or endurance.

That these women have attained the enviable heights of record holding is due in nearly every case to the essential fact that they began their swimming with a good foundation. Learning to swim each stroke correctly and not trying to take up a more difficult movement until each fundamental is thoroughly learned is the secret of the success of all our great swimmers.

The swimming pool is the greatest training spot for the swimmers of interior cities, and perhaps for the lake and waterfront cities as well.

Monday—Miss Kellermann tells of her plan to come to Plainfield and meet the members of her Plainfield Daily Press Annette Kellermann Swimming Class. What she thinks the class will accomplish.

And Darted Like a Fish Through the Water.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Little Mermaid Visits A Whirlpool.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

THE first thing the children asked for after supper was a story. So daddy told them how a little mermaid visited the whirlpool where a sea witch lived: "There were no sea flowers or seaweeds where the witch lived, only bare, gray sands stretching toward the whirlpools, which, like rushing millwheels, swirled around and around and dragged everything that came within reach down into their terrible depths.

"Now, the little mermaid had to pass between these boiling eddies to get to the sea witch's house. For a long way the only path led over warm bubbling mud, which the witch called her 'peat bog.' Behind this stood her home in the middle of a weird forest.

"All the weeds and bushes before her door were polyps, half animal and half plants. They looked like hundred headed snakes growing out of the sand. The branches were long, slimy arms, with little feelers like wiggling worms constantly in motion. They wound themselves tightly around whatever they could get hold of and never let it escape.

"Standing outside watching all this horror, the little mermaid was quite frightened. Her heart beat fast with terror, and she almost turned back. Then she remembered how she loved the prince and how much she wanted an immortal soul like his. Surely, the old sea witch would be able to advise her.

"So she took courage again. She bound her long, flowing gold hair tightly about her head, so that the polyps could not grab her by it. She folded her hands across her breast and darted like a fish through the water. In between the hideous polyps, which stretched out their arms and feelers toward her, she dived.

"She could see that every one of them had something or other which they had seized with their hundreds of hands and still held as if in iron bands. The bleached bones of men who had been lost at sea peeped forth from the hands of some polyps, while others clutched rudders and sea chests or the skeleton of some small land animal.

"Soon she came to a small opening in the woods where the ground was all slimy and where some huge fat water snakes were playing. In the middle of this opening was a house built of the bones of the wrecked. There sat the sea witch, letting a toad eat out of her mouth, just as mortals let a canary eat sugar. She called the hideous water snakes little chickens and let them crawl over her unsightly breast. 'I know very well what you came for!' she called out to the little mermaid."

Training a Husband

by MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Plans to Show Who Is Lord and Master of His Castle.

"Stop that noise! What in the world is the matter now?" Morris Southy's brows were black with wrath as he strode into the kitchen where Marian was holding six-year-old Frank on her knee and trying to stop the blood that was flowing from his mouth.

"He fell and cut his lip with his teeth," she explained, her face flushing angrily.

"There, dear, it will not hurt long." She folded the frightened little fellow in her arms.

"If you did not make such everlasting babies of your children there might be some hope of their growing up. You make so much of every little thing that ails them that they will keep up the hullabaloo just to get the petting. You are making mollycoddles of them all." The child, still more excited by the loud, angry tones of his father, was screaming hysterically.

"You stop that crying! Do you hear?" He shook the child by the shoulder.

"Morris, do not interrupt your work. I will attend to him." There was an unusual ring in Marian's tone. He glanced at her in surprise and her blazing eyes told him that if he did not want further trouble he had better retreat while the retreating was good. He swung out of the door and walked angrily out of the gate. She had defied him, her husband; had interfered with his discipline. This thing could not be tolerated any longer.

"I never noticed anything of the kind in her before this summer. She has been willing to abide by my decisions and make no fuss about it till very recently," he reflected gloomily. "I mean to have this thing out with her at once. It cannot be borne, this being set at naught in my own house." Morris walked sullenly along past the last house in the street and up the country road till he came to a tree that cast a patch of shade on the strip of dry grass by the side of the road. Here he set himself down to think the thing out.

"Perhaps Marian is sick," he thought. "The weather has been very hot; I have felt it myself." He did not think to compare the task of cooking in the sweltering kitchen to writing in the study, well shaded by the big tree in the yard. "It will be all right if she apologizes to me. I will forget it. He felt proud that he had a large nature that could forget injuries. "But she will have to apologize," he added. "She owes me that." He bared his forehead to the wind, but it was too hot to be cooling. It was like the breath of a furnace. He sat nursing his injuries till the sun began to draw long shadows on the grass in the field near him, then he rose and turned his face homeward. All through supper he bore himself with the air of one deeply injured who was exhibiting Christian fortitude.

"I wish you would come to the study when you have a little leisure this evening," he said with an air of summoning a criminal to justice, as he passed Marian on his way up stairs.

Marian's face flushed, but her lips became a thin line as she moved swiftly two and fro, finishing the evening work. She put the baby to bed very leisurely, steeling herself for the interview before her. She called the other children and washed and undressed them. When the little hands were folded on her knee and the three little heads were bowed in the evening prayer she sent up a voiceless petition to be able to defend their rights; to make their father see that he was invading them.

"Don't kiss my lips; kiss my cheek, for my mouth hurts," whispered Frank, winding his arms around her neck.

"Now go to sleep, my dears," she said cheerily, as she pushed the damp hair from their foreheads, "so you can have a nice day to play tomorrow," and she started toward her husband's study.

MADEMOISELLE'S NEGLIGEE.

Fascinating Combinations of Lace and Chiffon Attractively Introduced. Crepe Effects and Separate Jackets Featured.

By Mary Glynn.

Few women can resist or ignore the lure of dainty lingerie and this is so, no doubt, because they are born with a great desire to adorn themselves. In past ages it was the custom to clothe the body either with little raiment or much, just as the times demanded—sometimes it was overdone, often not done. This tendency in dress was largely a reflection of the minds and manners of peoples, and so modes were accepted accordingly. Fortunately, within recent years women have not overdone nor neglected to put considerable serious thought and good judgment into the matter of clothing the body. Refinement of taste is also a marked factor of the modern woman's ability to select wearing apparel. The growing demand for dainty wearing apparel is especially evident in the selection of undergarments by the average woman today. She will follow the advertising columns carefully in order to secure the best quality for best prices. Particularly charming and irresistible are the negligees that come within the reach of most women. Flesh colored crepe de chine or georgette crepe invariably holds a popular place in the makeup of these garments. Elaborate and simple patters of wide lace are generally used also, and invariably rosettes of dainty ribbon, embroidery, or rosebuds lend the finishing note on these fascinating garments.

THE NEW PONTINE MOTOR COATS.

This Two-Sided Fabric Now Introduced in Top Coats and Combined with Heavier Materials.

By Mary Glynn.

Pontine, the new double faced fabric, has made a tremendous impression because of its beauty, practicability and its newness. After all, it is the new and novel that all are clamoring for and surely the artist, designer, and workman have found that in this new and fascinating material. Imagine a motor top coat, which to all appearances seems to be a garment of dark grey leather. One steps a little closer. Yes, it is leather. One examines it and behold, the "leather" folds in one's grasp, like a piece of satin! Turn the reverse side of this leather and one finds a beautiful glossy white satin. It is extraordinary to note the exquisite combinations that may be obtained. In this instance the pontine proved to be dark grey with a reverse of white satin. As a matter of fact any combination desirable may be obtained. In the coat mentioned the pontine was used in the development of the entire coat, which was three-quarter length. Usually the reverse side of pontine is used as trimming. However, this was not so in this case. A very dark grey velour was introduced as a border on the skirt, formed the belt and the broad shoulder collar. The effect was extremely rich and very smart. A trim sailor of pontine was worn and high white topped button boots.

CALIFORNIA STATE FAIR.

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 2.—The annual California State Fair opened its gates today for a week's engagement. The exhibition this year is more elaborate than ever, and the horse show, the live stock show, the poultry show and the display of farm and orchard products are the most complete in the history of the association. The management this year has eliminated many of the cheap amusement features and substituted a program of high class entertainment.

EX-QUEEN "LIL" IS 78.

Honolulu, Sept. 2.—Former Queen Liliuokalani, who reached the age of 78 years today, combined with her usual custom of receiving native Hawaiians on her birthday a reception to American officials and prominent residents of Honolulu. The former Queen appeared to be in excellent health for a woman of her years.

DEMANDS OF EMPLOYES.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 2.—Demands for a minimum wage scale of $2.50 a day, Saturday half holiday for the entire year and two weeks' vacation are on the agenda of the annual convention of the National Federation of State, City, Town and County Employes' Unions, which met in this city today. Many delegates filled Labor Temple Hall when the convention was called to order this afternoon by National President M. F. O'Brien.

Raking 'Em Over

THAT SOUTH AVENUE FIELD.

The Netherwood baseball team is a fine combination. There is none better in the city. The fact has been demonstrated time and again. But the East End team certainly has a poor field on which to stage its attractions. Inasmuch as this field was not secured out of any "love" for its suitable location, the manager of the Netherwoods cannot be blamed for his action in scheduling games to be played on that field. But when it comes to inviting an opposing team to play on that diamond, the matter assumes a different shape. The field is not a fit one. That fact is evident and can be proved. Peter Simmons, manager of the Royal Giants, says that the South avenue field is not one on which a good game of baseball can be played. We believe Pete is right. One game we witnessed played on the South avenue diamond was a farce, simply because every ball hit to right field either bounded out into the road or hit suspended supports for the telephone and electric light poles. In hitting a straight tap to right field, a player is considered fortunate if he reaches first base in safety. On the Netherwood field the writer has seen players merely "lift" the ball into South avenue, advancing, at times, to third before the return. Now that it is impossible for the Royal Giants' manager to secure Parker Field, he refuses to play on the Netherwood grounds. He believes that he is right in so doing and offers as his reason a statement much the same as the one cited above.

THAT PARKER FIELD MATTER.

Manager Warden, of the Plainfield All Stars congratulated us on an editorial on this subject, the editorial having appeared a day or so ago. The idea expressed was that the person or persons who first made application to Supervisor Wriston should be given the preference when a permit to use Parker Field was issued. There is but one "kick" coming. No one has expressed any sentiments, nor has anyone "kicked." But there are some whom we know are mumbling that "Plainfielders should have first choice." We are anticipating this—Manager Warden has anticipated the same. Therefore, he must have had a reason when he authorized us to announce that his team was a purely local one, with the exception of two or three men. He stated that he himself is a resident of North Plainfield. In the face of these facts, there can be no reasonable argument against Mr. Warden's right to secure Parker Field whenever he wishes. He presents, as he says, practically a local lineup. At any rate, it is just as "local" as is the Royal Giants' lineup. Now, in addition to voicing a little argument in behalf of the All Stars, it might be well to add that they play on Parker Field Monday afternoon.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

The title would lead one to believe that this article was written by one who is used to writing scenarios. Such is not the case. Unfortunately, all the scenarios we ever wrote were returned to us in short order. But let us get down to business. There is a little bit of trouble in City League circles. The matter is not a big one and, as one of our ambitious linotype men says, too much is written about it. The gentleman referred to says that one would think that Ban Johnson was mixed up in the affair. And, since the local president is an ardent admirer of John K. Tener, we ought to discountenance Johnsonian tactics. Here's the whole thing in a nutshell. The Baptists failed to appear for a baseball game; Hope Chapel was there. The matter was carried to City League authority, and Hope received a forfeit. "New evidence" caused an appeal, which resulted in an order to play the game, the forfeit being disregarded. It is now practically certain that the game will come up for much more discussion before it is finally played—if it ever is played. The matter ought to end right here and now. To censure one for expressing a view on the subject is poor policy and will not benefit any one of the parties concerned. The Baptists do not want the game donated to them; they want to earn it. Hope Chapel believes that it has already earned the right to the game. If the Hopes are foolish enough to let an opportunity to jump into a tie for second place go by unheeded, something is radically wrong. We will await developments.

WHAT SHAKESPEARE MISSED.

At the outset we will have to apologize to Tom Powers. Not that Mr. Powers will ever see this article, but he is the author of the title which we are using, and we have always made a practice of giving people credit. That's our slogan. But Shakespeare missed an opportunity to witness the grand work of scoring baseball games in this city and vicinity. Some of the scores handed in are a great deal worse than the writing on any prescription. Most of the managers in this city see to it that the record of the games are kept neatly. But there are one or two leaders who have, in some way or other, been led to believe that the newspaper writers are mind readers. Inasmuch as we never studied "telepathy" we are not adept at that art. Do better, scorers, please.

BROOKLYN'S CHANCES.

Instead of wresting first place away from Brooklyn, the Boston Braves today are two points farther in the rear. For the Braves to take the lead, it was necessary for the Superbas to lose to St. Louis while the Boston aggregation won two from Pittsburgh. But the dope went wrong. In the first place Brooklyn didn't lose, and in the second place the Braves were compelled to divide honors with the Pirates. Just to make Robbie's smile grow broader than ever, Chicago blanked the Phillies. Brooklyn fans heaved a sigh of relief when the results were posted. Boston may overtake the Superbas and the Phillies may repeat in the flag race this season. But even so, the joy that Robinson felt last night when his chief rivals were made to feel the sting of defeat will be a lasting memory. Marquard and Meyers were in the points for Robbie's Superbas. Rube and the 'Chief" have had the thrill of handling world's series money before and are willing to take another chance. Meanwhile, Stallings is fretting and fuming because the Pirates overcome a four-run lead and walloped the Braves.—Newark News.

COBB GETS BUSY.

Ty Cobb is fast overcoming Tris Speaker's batting lead and today is seriously menacing the Texan for slugging honors in the American circuit. Unofficial figures published yesterday show the Peach within 10 points of his rival, giving him a percentage of .369 to Speaker's .379.

"BIG GAME" CARDED FOR PARKER FIELD

Plainfield Stars to Play All Stars of Elizabeth Monday.

The "Big Game" will be played at Parker Field on Labor Day afternoon, when the Plainfield All Stars meet the Stars of Elizabeth. The local team is under the management of George Warden, who has left nothing undone in his efforts to present the fans of this city with something worth while. The team that he will present to the fans will be a good one and Lou Slocum will, in all probability, be the pitcher used. Slocum's arm is rapidly returning to form and it is expected that he will be in fine fettle. Appleton, a pitcher of the Duquesnes of Jersey City, will also be on hand.

The Elizabeth team is coming here determined to win. Three pitchers are to be brought along. Herb Pennoyer, a former City League star, will perform with the visitors. Herb is now a resident of Elizabeth and plays in the Sunday-school League at that place.

The lineups:

JAPANESE TENNIS STARS TO PLAY AT WESTFIELD

The Japanese tennis players, Itchiya Kumagae and Hachishiro Mikami, who played a match with Harold Throckmorton and E. H. Whitney on the courts of the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday evening, August 5, and broke even in the matches, will play a return match on the Golf Club courts on Labor Day afternoon.

In the match played on August 5 Kumagae wore such powerful glasses that the lights on the courts hurt his eyes so that he was unable to play after the second set.

At tha time Kumagae and Mikami were disappointed because they could not finish the match and promised John E. Nitchie, the chairman of the tennis committee, that they would return on Labor Day if they could arrange their schedule.

GRIM DETERMINATION MAIN FACTOR IN RISE

Bob Peck, All-American centre for 1915 and captain of this year's University of Pittsburgh football team, has removed the conditions which threatened to prevent his participation in the gridiron sport during the coming season, and has brought joy to the hearts of rooters who feared that the Panther machine might lack the services of its powerful leader.

The death of his father early in the second semester of the last school year forced Peck to drop out of school for a time and caused him to lose practically a half year's work. When school closed in June he was told that there was little chance for him to meet the eligibility requirements and be permitted to don the moleskin for the Blue and Gold this fall. However, Peck entered summer school, carried the maximum number of hours permitted a student, passing every course, and in addition made up his back work and passed the examinations covering the work missed during the preceding months.

CALEDONIAN GAMES.

The 60th Annual Diamond Jubilee Games of the New York Caledonian Club, which will be held at Washington Park, Grand street, Maspeth, L. I., on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 4, promises to be one of the finest gatherings of its kind ever held in this vicinity. The entries are coming in on every mail, which indicate a good field of the finest athletes. The inducements to these competitors are strong, owing to the magnificent prizes, which are offered for each event. The club and guests will assemble at the clubhouse, Seventh avenue, near Fifty-fourth street, at 8:30 a. m. for the annual parade. The line of march will be Fifty-fourth street to Broadway, along Broadway to Thirty-fourth street and east to Long Island ferry. John McGilvray is secretary of the games committee, and can be communicated with at the clubhouse, 846 Seventh avenue.

ROYAL GIANTS MAY REMAIN IN IDLE STATE

Definite Information Not Given Out By Those In Charge —Watch Bulletin.

There will, in all probability, be no game between the Royal Giants and the Netherwoods on Parker Field on Monday afternoon. It is not likely that these two teams will get together on any other field, until a later date. There has been a game arranged to take place on Parker Field, and the manager of the Netherwoods says that he will not lead his charges to battle on Avon Oval. Pete Simmons is determined that his boys shall not combat on the South Avenue Field. So there you are.

The manager of the Royals could not be reached this morning, as he was in New York, presumably "looking over some players." It, consequently, was impossible to get a definite notice regarding the matter as it now stands. But the gentleman left in charge at Simmons' parlor believed that the Tabs and the Royals would fight it out on Avon Oval on Monday afternoon. When told that the Tabs had been reported as having agreed to play a double bill in Dunellen, the gentleman replied that he understood that these matches had been cancelled.

In the face of all these charges, announcements and prophesies, it certainly is difficult to ascertain just where each of these teams will play. Fans will not be able to learn the truth until this evening, when it will be too late for the newspapers. But, for the convenience of the sporting public, a sign telling just where the games are to be played, will be posted in the Daily Press window. Our esteemed contemporary will, no doubt, do likewise.

CHURCH CONQUEROR OF "COMET" M'LOUGHLIN

The battle between McLoughlin and Church was the crowning feature in a day of keen competition for the national singles chamionship at Forest Hills yesterday. Every one of the eight matches in the fourth rounds was sharply waged, and in his match Church assuredly won his spurs. In the upper half of the draw those who remain after yesterday's toll are Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia; Clarence J. Griffith, of San Francisco; Douglas S. Watters, of New Orleans, and Richard Norris Williams, 2d, of Philadelphia.

Wallace Johnson advanced by defeating Walter Merrill Hall, tenth ranking player of the country, with surprisingly little trouble, at 6—2, 6—1, 6—2. Griffith had a merry battle before he was able to secure a decision over E. H. Whitney, the score in this match being 6—3, 6—2, 3—6, 12—19. At the close Griffin was absolutely exhausted, while Whitney was not much better off. Douglas Watters put out of the running one of the California group, Edwin M. McCormack, by the score of 6—2, 6—3, 6—4, and Norris Williams secured his fifth-round bracket by disposing of a fellow Philadelphian, the former national singles champion, William J. Clothier, at 5—7, 7—5, 6—4, 6—1.

LEAGUE RACES CLOSED.

These are trying times for major league leaders. For several days the Boston Red Sox have been coming back fas toward the other American League teams, and yesterday the champions dropped to within two games and a half of the Detroits. The Yanks, who still nurse pennant hopes, pulled them down that half game.

In the National League the Brooklyns' lead has shrunk to a meagre one game, and with the Braves and Giants booked for a double-header today it is possible for "Robbie's" subalterns to lose the lead by nightfall.

It is now a hot three-cornered race among the Brooklyns, Braves and Phillies. The Quakers are only two games behind the Braves and three games bac of Brooklyn.

ATTENTION SCORERS.

Owing to the unusually large amount of sporting news that will be produced over the holiday, scorers and managers are requested to hand in their scores as soon after the completion of the game as is possible.

DULL, DRAB MAN.

The men who are honest only because they have learned that honesty is the best policy, the men who tell the truth only because they are afraid they will be found out, the men who have none of that manliness that will stake all on a principle, are dull and drab.—Dean Charles R. Brown at Chautauqua.

PLENTY OF SPORTS FOR HOLIDAY FANS

Labor Day Baseball Program Best In Several Seasons.

Plenty of activity is promised in the sport line for Labor Day. Votees of all sorts of athletic endeavors, with the exception of track events, will have an opportunity to secure enjoyment in their home town on Monday.

At the various golf courses special handicap contests will be conducted and the qualifying round for the fall championship will be started at the Hydewood golf links. Tennis will occupy the time of many of the citizens of this and surrounding localities.

In the baseball line much will be accomplished. On almost every field in the city and borough, some sort of baseball match will be played. The "big game" will be played at Parker Field in the afternoon. A tabulated list of baseball events for tomorrow and Monday follows:

BASEBALL GAMES.

ROYALS AND TABS ARE GETTING READY

McFadden Will Be On the Mound For Abstainers.

The only Sunday attraction in this city will be the game between the Tabs and the Royal Giants. This game will be the third and deciding one of the series, unless the Royals are successful in their efforts to extend the series to five games.

On Avon Oval tomorrow the rival managers will present their best array of talent, while Pete Simmons is unusually certain that his pitcher—whose name is not being divulged—will be very effective. Mickey McFadden will again do mound work for the Abstainers, who have, as a whole, made no definite change in their lineup.

The lineups, probably, will be as follows:

TABS		ROYALS
Coughlan	3b	Borden
Rosenson	2b	Hatchett
Hannon	1b	Ford
Mullin	s.s.	Butler
J. Denny or Clarke	c.f.	Briggs Coleman or

EXPERT REPAIRING.

(By Peter P. Carney.)

The organization of new gun clubs and the bringing back to life of gun clubs that are dying a natural death is one of the main objects of the Interstate Association for the Encouragement of Trapshooting. To this end the association contributes upwards of 200 trophies yearly.

Since the beginning of 1916, 59 new trapshooting clubs have been organized, and each one has received a club trophy from the Interstate Association. Six of these clubs were formed in July. They are:

St. Lawrence Gun Club, St. Lawrence, S. D.
Warren Gun Club, Warren, Ark.
Alva Gun Club, Alva, Okla.
Outlook Gun Club, Outlook, Mont.
Burnham Gun Club, Burnham, Pa.
Woodward Gun Club, Woodward, Ia.

These 59 clubs have been formed in 25 States with Iowa leading with 10; Indiana is next with five, and Kansas and Illinois have four each, California, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, New York and Nebraska each have formed three; Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Michigan two each, and Tennessee, Missouri, Maryland, Connecticut, Colorado, Texas, District of Columbia, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Arkansas and Montana one each.

KINGS OF SWAT

The three-cornered battle between Speaker, Cobb and Jackson for American League batting honors is rivaling in interest the league's tight pennant race.

Last year was Ty Cobb's seventh consecutive year as batting king of the American League. He has led the league tight times in all, but in 1908 he had to take second place to Criss of St. Louis.

"Brick" Eldred, Seattle's star outfielder and leader of the Northwestern league eight times in all, but in 1903 derful performer with the willow. He reports to the Chicago White Sox this fall.

Tris Speaker, present leader of the major league wallopers, finished last season with a batting average of .322, and tied with Fourier, of Chicago, for third place among American League batsmen.

Seems that the Giants landed the star clouter of the Western Association when they grabbed Ross Young, a .350 sticker with the Sherman (Tex.) team.

Thrasher, of Atlanta, and Rumler, of Little Rock, form a heavy artillery trio that is making the Southern League pitchers take the leaps.

Second Baseman Mathes, of the Terre Haute Central League team, a .360 teaser of the pellet, is booked to demonstrate to the Boston Braves what he can do with the bludgeon.

Roger Hornsby, of the St. Louis Cardinals, is coming along at a fast clip in batting and looks to be able to give the National League hitting stars a real run for the high honors.

The veteran class of hitsmiths is ably represented this season by Wagner and Hinchman, of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Years of batting on the diamond seem not to have dimmed the batting eyes of the two old warriors.

Jimmy Hickman, a Brooklyn recruit, comes to the Robins with a record of eight hits out of nine times at bat in the Carolina League.

In Smythe and Smith the Montreal International League team has a couple of regular fellows in the hitting line. Smith has already been tagged for the Cincinnati Reds.

The leader in home runs in the Southern League is none other than our old friend, "Kid" Elberfeld, "Tobasco," who is piloting the Chattanooga outfit, has hit something thirty circuit drives this season.

Manager "Rebel" Oakes, of the Denver team, is showing Western Leaguers how to belt the ball a la big troupe. The old National Leaguer is whaling the pill around the .350 mark and going strong.

Beall, of Milwaukee, and Becker, the Kansas City slugger, are showing the way among American Association batsmen. Larry Chappelle, of Columbus, who failed to catch the step with the White Sox, is also doing considerable clouting in the association.

"Pinp" Bodie, of the San Francisco Seals, is batting his way to fame in the Pacific Coast League. The former White Sox gardener is to play the role of a come-back next season, having been signed by the Athletics.

WAGNER MAY NOT PLAY.

Honus Wagner, veteran shortstop of the Pittsburgh Nationals, will probably not be able to play again this season owing to a series of injuries received during the last month. He was out ten days as a result of a badly injured thumb and lacerated finger, and when these wounds had healed he twisted a ligament in his leg. This injury was improving slowly when on Wednesday, in the first game with Boston, Wagner went in as a pinch hitter and again hurt his leg.

DOUBLE BILL.

The St. Joseph's and the American Tile Workers will indulge in a double bill at Hyde Oval Monday. One game will be played in the morning, the other attraction being run off in the afternoon.

DEATH COMES TO JOHN M. HETFIELD

Former Postmaster Passes Away Suddenly, Following Heart Attack.

NATIVE OF THIS CITY

Was Son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Hetfield and for Many Years Was Engaged in Coal Trade—Leaves Wife and Son.

Former Postmaster John M. Hetfield, aged 57 years, one of the best known residents of this city, died suddenly of heart trouble at his home, 522 Belvidere avenue, late Sunday night. The attack was very acute, Mr. Hetfield being ill less than a half hour, and his death was a great shock to his family and many friends.

Mr. Hetfield was a native of Plainfield, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Levi Hetfield, who were among the oldest residents of this city. The homestead was at Madison avenue and West Fourth street. During his early business career, Mr. Hetfield was engaged in the retail coal trade here and was appointed postmaster by President Cleveland during the latter's second administration. He succeeded Postmaster E. R. Pope, and served but one term.

Later Mr. Hetfield returned to the coal business, being prominently identified with the wholesale trade in New York. He was widely known in the trade, being a member of the Coal Merchants' Association, of New York, for many years. He was also identified with several lodges in this city. Although a staunch Democrat he never took any active part in civic or political affairs. He was an attendant of the First Baptist church for many years.

He is survived by his wife, a son, Clarence M. Hetfield, who is also engaged in the coal business in New York; a granddaughter, Anita Hetfield, a sister, Mrs. Arretta Manning, wife of the late Dr. Andrew Manning, a brother, Judge Walter L. Hetfield, together with several nieces and nephews, among whom are Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the law firm of Reed & Hetfield. Private funeral services will be held at the late home.

MISS RUTH KEITER THE BRIDE OF EDWARD DREW

Miss Ruth Keiter, of 710 West Fourth street, and Edward Drew, of Bridgeport, Conn., were quietly married Saturday afternoon by Rev. Dr. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel. The couple was attended by Miss Florence Briscoe, of this city, and Edward Travell, of Bridgeport, Conn. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Drew left on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in Bridgeport, where the bridegroom is employed.

MERCHANTS SAY LOCAL MEN DID DECORATING

Several merchants of the city have taken exception to previously published statements that out of town people were engaged to decorate their places of business for the Labor Day celebration here. They declare that Plainfielders were hired for this work. Frank G. Wikoff, a local decorator and awning maker, requests the publication of the following statement:

"The facts are that F. G. Wikoff, who has been a resident of Plainfield over thirty years and who is doing business here today, as a decorator and awning maker, solicited some of the business houses in the city to do their decorating and he secured several prominent business houses here. If anybody feels that Mr. Wikoff is not a citizen of Plainfield, we would like to hear from them. If there was an out of town decorator in Plainfield getting business those who request this statement did not give him any business."

EDWARD W. JEFFCOTT WEDS MISS EMMA B. RAGLAND

The marriage of Miss Emma Blacknall Ragland, of Norfolk, Virginia, and Edward William Jeffcott, of Park avenue, this city, took place at the former's home, Saturday, September 2. The couple will be at home at 302 West Eighth street, this city, after October 15.

Mrs. Jeffcott is a niece of Miss Lucy Pegram Blow, of this city, and made her home here for some time. She is an expert swimmer and was the instructor in that line of sport at the Plainfield High School last year.

FREDERICK V. MILLS WEDS MISS CASNER

Rev. Dr. B. S. Hudson Performs Ceremony at Home of Bride's Parents.

Miss Martha Casner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Casner, of Kensington avenue, and Frederick V. Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Mills, of 538 West Eighth street, this city, were married Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Dr. B. S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends.

The bride's gown was of white net over silk. She wore a white picture hat and carried a shower bouquet of flowers. Miss Betty Mills, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor. Her gown was of pink and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The best man was Elwood Waller, Jr., of this city. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and supper was served Later in the evening the couple left for the mountains, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside here. The couple received a large collection of handsome gifts from relatives and friends.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Mills attended the Plainfield High School and have a large circle of acquaintances. Mr. Mills is well known in athletic circles, being pitcher this season for the First Baptist team of the City League. He is employed at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works.

The home was attractively decorated for the wedding with hydrangeas, ferns, honeysuckle, the prevailing colors being yellow and white.

NEW CANDIDATE FOR COUNCIL IN FOURTH

Chauncey L. Hight Will Make Race Against Blatz.

Chauncey L. Hight, of 23 Albert street, will oppose Francis J. Blatz for the Republican nomination for councilman from the Fourth ward in the primaries next month. Mr. Hight will file his petition today, his friends say, and will enter at once into the campaign.

As in other wards of the city the issue between the two men is on the renewal of saloon licenses. Mr. Blatz has not made a public statement but it is understood that he declared for the renewal of licenses when a committee of prohibitionists called on him. Mr. Hight announces that he will seek election on an anti-saloon issue.

Mr. Hight is the New York manager of the Weber Electric Manufacturing Company, a member of the Plainfield Country Club and Anchor Lodge, and a competent business man. He has been a resident of Plainfield for five years, coming from a no-license town, Somerville, Mass., and is strong in declaring the great benefits that town has derived through this form of government.

REV. DR. W. C. SNODGRASS MADE SPECIAL OFFICER

For the purpose of aiding the police of Roselle Park in preventing petty depredations on the part of boys, the Borough Council of that place has appointed Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, formerly of Plainfield, a special officer. He will serve without remuneration and will not be called upon to do patrol duty.

Dr. Snodgrass, who was for several years pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, now holds the pastorate of the First M. E. church of Roselle Park. He is the second minister to be named as special officer, Rev. S. J. LoVechio, pastor of the Church of the Assumption, that place, being given that honor recently.

FOUR YEAR OLD BOY ONLY NEW PARALYSIS VICTIM

Another case of infantile paralysis was reported in the city since last Saturday. On that day it was decided after several days of observation that James Dawson, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Dawson, of South avenue, near Terrill road, was a victim of the plague.

Julian Ronshein, a victim at the residence of Herbert Schuldenfrei, on Sandford avenue, was released from quarantine today, having recovered from an attack.

Inquiry at the Peacock home on West Seventh street today set at rest all rumors that Herbert Peacock, the nineteen-year-old P. H. S. athlete, who has been ill for several weeks, really has the disease. Three injections of serum and other precautions have resulted in his being better today than at any time since he was ill, although he has no control of the movement of his lower limbs.

UNION MEN IN ANNUAL PARADE

Thousands Line City Streets to Watch Big Demonstration.

MANY FLOATS ENTERED

Loizeaux Lumber Company Gets Force Cup—Sheet Metal Workers Win Rothberg Cup—Open Air Reception at Van Ness Park.

While thousands of cheering friends lined the streets representatives of Union Labor in Plainfield yesterday marched in a big demonstration that carried them to all parts of the city. The celebration in honor of the workingman was not confined to the street parade, but during the entire afternoon the various local unions held open house at the Van Ness Park.

Grand Marshal Lunger and the committee from the Allied Trades' Council that was in charge of the day's program were pleased with the success of the celebration and this morning asked that their thanks be expressed to the people of Plainfield for the tribute paid to organized labor.

The A. E. Force cup for the best looking body in the parade was awarded to the Sheet Metal Morkers. They were out several hundred strong, wearing high tin hats and carrying unique tin umbrellas. The committee of judges had a difficult task in making a decision, because of the splendid showing made by the painters and by the machinists. The last named had by far the best representation, but the prize went to the sheet metal workers because of their nniform and original costumes. Honorable mention was given to the other two organizations.

The Samuel Rothberg prize cup for the best looking float went to the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company. This was also a difficult selention. That of the Plainfield Ice and Supply Coapany was attractive and the suggestion is carried was most timely. The float of the Mathushek Piano Company was also very attractive, as was that of the Edison Company, entered by Stephen Haff. Miss Ethel Brown on the Edison float attracted much attention. Alfred B. Marsh, a five year old contestant, was also in the running. He drove a small pony outfit.

The judges who made the awards were Champlain L. Riley, Thomas C. Vail and the Rev. Edward S. Ralston. The cups will be given today.

Grand Marshal Lunger headed the parade.

Both Plainfield and North Plainfield policemen appeared to advantage in the parade. The borough's finest were mounted. At their head rode Chief Weiss, while Lieut. Higgins was in charge of the platoon of Plainfield police.

Chief Kicly, with Judge William De Meza and Councilman C. C. Graves followed the police, and behind them came a car that contained Mayor pro tem Blatz, Mayor W. L. Smalley, Councilman Charles S. Sminck, Councilman Clifford McGee and Collector J. K. Arnold. They were followed by the machinists, who headed the long formation of marching bodies and floats.

During the entire afternoon the union men with their friends held an open-air celebration on the Van Ness property. Refreshments and sandwiches were served. There was some disorder, but it was caused by outsiders, say the union men, and not by the person for whom the celebration was intended.

WILLIAM WILLIS AGREES TO PAY ALL DAMAGES

In the borough court this morning William Willis, a taxicab owner with offices on North avenue, this city, was arraigned before Recorder Hand and was ordered to pay the doctor's expenses and also to pay for the time lost by Charles Brighton, of North Plainfield, who was knocked down and injured by one of Willis' taxis last week.

At the time of the accident Brighton was working with Street Commissioner John Y. Barrett's gang and it was the opinion of those who witnessed the accident that the injured man was not to blame. In court this morning, Willis agreed to pay the damages.

BOARD OF HEALTH ORDER

Parents are hereby warned not to take sick children on the public street for any purpose whatever.

KEEP YOUR CHILDREN HOME.

NEW JERSEY DAILY'S ENTERPRISE.

The Plainfield (N. J.) Press has established border news service by sending James J. McNamee, its sporting editor and advertising manager, to Douglas, Ariz. Mr. McNamee left last week and his stories are now appearing daily in the Press. Plainfield is especially interested in view of the fact that nearly all of the members of Troop D hail from that city. The service is unusual for a paper the size of the Press, and is in keeping with the excellent National Guard news service it has furnished its readers ever since the Jersey troops were called to the colors.—Editor and Publisher.

BREWSTER HOME; DISCHARGE COMING

Corporal of Troop D is With Family at Spring Lake.

Corporal James H. Brewster, of Troop D, arrived at Spring Lake on Saturday, where Mrs. Brewster and his family have had a cottage for the summer months. He came home on a two weeks' furlough, and after he left Douglas, Ariz., word was received that his application for discharge from the National Guard under the dependency clause had been approved He has wired for instructions as to when he will receive his papers, and as soon as they come he will go to Fort DuPont, Del., where he will be mustered out of the service of the United States.

When seen yesterday by a Daily Press representative Corporal Brewster stated that he never felt better in his life. He said that all the men in the troop were "hard as nails," and that most of them had lost flesh, but are beginning to get the best kind of soldiering experience now, and are daily becoming more proficient. The weather is not so bad as when they first arrived, the nights being especially comfortable, two heavy army blankets being required to keep warm.

As soon as he is discharged Mr. Brewster will resume his business duties in New York. The family will probably continue to occupy their cottage at Spring Lake until October first.

ALEXANDER THORN DIES IN HOSPITAL

Well Known Borough Resident Succumbs Following Operation for Appendicitis.

Alexander Thorn, a life-long resident of this city, died yesterday morning in Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis. He was in his seventy-fourth year and had lived a retired life for the last nine years. He was probably better known to scores of Plainfielders for his connection with the firm of Berry & Thorn, who at one time conducted a hardware business at the corner of Front street and Park avenue. He was also for a number of years engaged in the grocery business. He was one of the oldest members of the Baptist church, which he joined in 1873.

Beside his wife he is survived by one son, Albert T. Thorn, and a daughter, Miss Bertha Thorn. Andrew F. Thorn, a brother, of California, also survives him. The funeral will be held at his late home, 15 Craig place, tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock and the service will be in charge of the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church. The interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town, INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

N. Y. IS FACING TIE-UP OF CARS

Manager Hedley Today Refused to Give up Contracts of Men.

MAYOR HURRYING HOME

He May Prevent a Strike—No Action Will Be Taken Today, Says Head of the Newly Recognized Union—Situation Considered Serious.

New York, Sept. 5.—Emphatically refusing to rescind the individual contract signed with the subway and elevated employes, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company is facing a tie-up, following a conference this morning between General Manager Hedley and the union committee, headed by Organizer Fitzgerald. When asked to return the 2,000 contracts signed by the members of the union organization Mr. Hedley refused to do so unless it was shown that the individuals did not realize the purport of the contracts to which they fixed their signatures. Following the conference Mr. Hedley stated that the company was prepared to stand firm in this attitude and go ahead with the operation of the subway and the elevated lines.

The Mayor is hurrying back from Plattsburg. He is expected in the city today, although he had planned to remain away until the eighth of the month. The situation will be put up to him for the reason that when the strike involving the surface lines was settled the union leaders promised the Mayor they would not order another strike without giving him a chance to see what he can do.

"President Shonte," said Organizer W. B. Fitzgerald of the union today, "has frankly announced through the press in a paid advertisement that he will not agree to our demand that the union is recognized. Of course, this means a strike unless the Mayor can head it off.

"We won't call a strike today. We intend to live up to our promise to Mayor Mitchel. A day or two won't make any difference so far as we are concerned. Our men are loyal and we can wait until we have exhausted every effort to avoid tying up the most important transportation systems of the City of New York."

CHICAGO VISITED BY HEAVY RAIN STORM

Chicago, Sept. 5.—A heavy rainstorm accompanied by a sixty-mile gale off the lakes, broke over this city today, causing considerable damage to property. The Congregational church in Oak Park was struck by lightning and destroyed with a loss of $150,000.

White, president of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield; Miss Katherine Sminck, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Suffrage Association, and Mrs. C. L. Riley. The first two are the local delegates to the convention.

MASHER FINED $50 AND SEVERELY SCORED

Andrew Mango Persisted in Forcing His Attentions on Three Women.

Andrew Mango, an Italian of Cottage place, was fined $50 or sixty days in the county jail by City Judge W. G. DeMeza this morning, after he was given a severe lecture by the court. Mango was charged by three young women with annoying them last night.

Instances of this kind have been rather numerous in the city of late, but the women have not wanted to appear against their tormentors and as a result nothing has been done. The three young women who were the object of the Italian's attention consented to make a charge against Mango and Judge DeMeza said he wished others would do the same.

Mango was arrested by Patrolman Kelly last night on Watchung avenue near Fifth street after he had followed the girls about all over the city. First noticing him in Jersey City as they were on their way home from a day's outing, the girls said he followed them to Plainfield. In a Front street candy store, where they went in an effort to get rid of him, he sat at the same table and wanted to buy them ice cream. When he followed them on a Netherwood line trolley they got off again and telephoned to the police station.

ALLEGED AUTOMOBILE THIEVES CAUGHT HERE

Lyons Farms and Garwood Youths Come to Grief After Exciting Experience.

Caught by the local police after the car had been wrecked by a fast freight on the New Jersey Central at the Rock avenue crossing early Sunday morning, William Simpson, eighteen years old, of 1227 Salem street, Lyons Farms, and Henry Terp, sixteen, of Second avenue, Garwood, were arraigned today in the First Precinct Court, at Newark, charged with the theft of a Ford automobile and were held under bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The car, which was practically wrecked, belonged to Charles G. Colt, of 21 Brientnal place, Newark, and was stolen from in front of a moving picture theatre on Broad street, that city, last Wednesday night.

The pair were arrested by Patrolman Leorch near Leland avenue just as he was "ringing in" at headquarters and getting instructions to be on the lookout for them. When the car became stalled on the railroad crossing and was smashed by a fast freight, the youths started to walk home. Meanwhile the engineer of the train notified the local station agent, who, in turn notified Muhlenberg Hospital, but when the ambulance arrived on the scene of the accident no one could be found, and then it was that several of the patrolmen remembered the youths passing them and their capture resulted.

When taken to headquarters, the youths denied they had stolen the machine. Simpson said that a friend by the name of Kenneth Hooper, also of Lyons Farms, asked him Thursday to go for a ride with him and afterward saying he had an engagement, left the car in his possession to drive about. After that he rode in the daytime and slept in the machine at night. On Saturday he went to Terp's home and got him to join him. In need of gasoline, they admitted, they went to a Westfield garage and got away with five gallons without paying for it, and at Dunellen it is said they got away with an inner tube in the same way.

When arraigned this morning, the court seemed to take little stock in Simpson's story of a third party and charged him with the theft and held Terp as a material witness.

GERMANS FORCED BACK BY FRENCH

Battle Along Somme Continues—Big Allied Victory.

COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL

Fighting Includes One-seventh of Whole Western Front—Bulgars and Germans Are on Roumanian Soil and Win Victory.

Paris, Sept. 5.—In a driving rain storm, amidst heavy gusts of artillery fire, the Germans launched an effort to win back some of the ground lost to the Allies in the battles that developed on Monday, but all of the assaults were repulsed, the French War Office announced today. South of the Somme, in the sectors of Soyecourt and Chilly, in both of which villages were captured by the French yesterday, the Germans attacked vigorously, but were repulsed with heavy losses.

The battle on the Somme, in which the Allies won such a signal success along a twelve-and-a-half-mile front on Sunday was resumed today with more aggressiveness and determination. Apparently the movement of Sunday was but the beginning of a tremendous drive, which was temporarily checked by a heavy rainstorm that lasted all day yesterday and far into the night.

South of the river unsuccessful blows were struck by the Germans east of Belloy. In these operations the French took 100 prisoners.

The allied attack today carried the terrific fighting over forty miles of Somme front, or, roughly, one-seventh of the whole western front from the sea to Switzerland.

Roumanian Lose Ground.

London, Sept. 5.—The first day's fighting on Roumanian soil, due to the invasion of Dobrudja by Bulgarians and Germans, is said by the Bulgarian War Office to have resulted in the retreat of the Roumanians, who left hundreds of dead on the field. As previously reported by the German War Office, the invaders crossed the entire Dobrudja frontier and occupied towns near the border.

Austrian Base Bombarded.

Rome, Sept. 5.—An Italian dirigible has bombarded Lussin in Piccolo, the chief city on the Austrian Island of Lussin off the Dalmatian Coast. The Admiralty in announcing the raid today said that heavy damage was done. The Austrians were using Lussin, Piccola as a naval base.

WILSON TALKS ON RACE OF MARTINE

Indicates He is Favorable to Westcott—Plainfielder is Not Worried.

President Wilson did some plain talking to Democratic leaders of New Jersey who met him at Shadow Lawn for a confidential caucaus just before the notification ceremonies Saturday. Each faction expected to tell him its troubles and win support, but the President forestalled them with a lecture, that they had to stop fighting and pull in harmony if they wanted him to help them. He made them promise then and there to get together and agree to support loyally whoever should be the nominess in the primaries for all offices.

While declining to pick out favorites, the President made reference to the senatorial contest that indicated his opposition to the return of Senator Martine, whom he compelled New Jersey to take six years ago as the winner of the first direct primary.

Senator Martine, who was not present, said afterward: "They cannot prevent my nomination. I have the support of a majority of the county organziations and the people are with me. I am sure of winning the primaries despite this opposition."

Senator Martine's primary opponent is Attorney General Westcott.

KILBANE WINS EASILY.

In less than eight minutes of actual fighting "Johnny" Kilbane, of Cleveland, wrecked the hopes of George Chaney, of Baltimore, for the world's featherweight championship yesterday. A terrific right smash to Chaney's jaw settled the battle near the end of the third round.

BICYCLES STOLEN.

The theft of two bicycles was reported to the police Sunday. Samuel Cohan had his taken while he was watching a baseball game at Avon Oval, and Morris Trabilsky missed his after he had taken a swim at Holy's pond.

Dents In Wood Furniture.

When wood is badly dented or scratched it is often a problem to know how to get rid of the marks. This is quite easy if the following plan, suggested by the Scientific American, is adopted. First of all fold a piece of blotting paper at least four times, then saturate with water, finally allowing the superfluous moisture to drip away. Now heat a flatiron until it is about the warmth required for laundry work. Place the damp blotting paper over the dent and press firmly with the iron. As soon as the paper dries examine the mark. It will then be found that the cavity has filled up to a surprising extent. Where the dent is very deep a second or even a third application on the lines indicated might be tried. Sooner or later even serious depressions can be drawn up, and most people who have not tried this plan will be surprised at the result of the treatment. Repolishing will clear away even the slight marks that might finally remain.

A Chinese Hero.

At Loping Hsien is a statue draped in full dress of a mandarin (the puting or police master) named Chin, who gave his life for the people. An exile who was in the camp at Jaochow and who owed the hsien (district magistrate) a grudge, rode a black horse to Loping and, having killed the hsien, got back for the Jaochow roll call next morning. As the murderer could not be found orders came from the capital that a large number of the people should be killed. To prevent this slaughter of innocent folk the puting, a good old man, said he stabbed the hsien after a few words over the wine cups, and he was consequently beheaded. No resident of the district would deal the fatal blow, but an itinerant cobbler or bamboo worker did it for a reward of 40 taels. Tradition adds that he was struck dead by lightning after leaving the execution ground.

Tennyson's Tactlessness.

Several stories are told of Tennyson's thoughtless speeches. "What fish is this?" he once asked his hostess where he was dining. "Whiting," she replied. "The meanest fish there is," he remarked, quite unconscious that he could have wounded any one's feelings.

Yet his kindness of heart was such that when his partridge was afterward given him almost raw he ate steadily through it for fear his hostess might be vexed.

On one occasion Tennyson was very rude to Mrs. Brotherton, a neighbor at Freshwater. The next day he came to her house with a great cabbage under each arm.

"I heard you like these, so I brought them," he said genially. It was his idea of a peace offering.

Quick Hitting.

Dr. White was once a champion boxer in Philadelphia. One day he asked a big teamster to move his wagon forward about two yards, but the teamster, instead of doing that, called the physician a wicked name.

Like a flash White knocked him flat in the gutter, and of course the teamster had him arrested. Magistrate Devlin heard the case, and the injured man complained bitterly that Dr. White had struck him so quickly he had no time to defend himself.

"Well," said the hardheaded magistrate, "what did you expect him to do—send you a postal card to tell you he intended to knock you down?"

The doctor was discharged without a fine.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Moving Pictures and Silver.

The moving picture industry is using a large amount of silver. There are about 20,000 picture houses in the United States, using approximately 120,000,000 feet of film regularly. The average life of a film is three weeks. Silver salts, used for sensitizing, are lost forever on being exposed to the light. It is estimated that 15,000,000 ounces of silver a year—a fifth of the U. S. total prod[illegible] used for this purpose.—Metal [illegible]

KEATING AND DEADY CAPTURE TOURNEY

Runners up Powelson and Gallagher Eliminated in Sunday Play.

Garret Keating and his young partner, Anthony Deady, are now the proud possessors of medals indicative of the championship of a tourney that has been in progress on the court at St. Mary's for some time. The runners up in the fight for honors were John Powelson and Joe Gallagher. These two were not eliminated until Sunday, when a loss of three sets out of four put an end to their chances.

While the tournament is still in progress, nevertheless, the "champions" are now known. These lads won sixteen games and lost but three. The runners up won ten games and lost eight. The other two teams, composed of Fred Green, Ed Sullivan, Joe McEvoy and Jerome Leary, have won three games and lost eleven, being tied for last place.

JAPANESE MARVELS DEFEAT LOCAL LADS

Take Measure of Phil and Lud Van Deventer on Westfield Courts.

Before a crowd of nearly two thousand residents of this vicinity Ichiya Kumagae and Hachishiro Mikami, the Japanese tennis champions, played in three special matches—two in singles and one in doubles—against Ludlow Van Deventer and Philip Van Deventer, of this city, on the Westfield Golf Club courts yesterday. The Oriental pair won all of their matches, although they dropped one set in doubles, and Mikami one set of his contest with Philip Van Deventer.

Kumagae showed pretty conclusively that he is the stronger of the Japanese pair, for he took all but one game of his singles event with Ludlow Van Deventer.

The scores:

Singles—Ichiya Kumagae defeated Ludlow Vandeventer, 6-0, 1-6. H. Mikami defeated Philip Van Deventer, 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Doubles—Kumagae and Mikami defeated Van Deventer and Van Deventer, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2.

'THE BARON' CAPTURES FIRST AT FREEHOLD

Dr. H. E. Winter's "Owyhamac" Finished Third in 2:25 Class Trot.

One thousand persons witnessed the light harness races held at Freehold yesterday under the auspices of the Freehold Driving Association. The customary attendance of 5,000 to 8,000 was reduced by the many other holiday attractions, but all were true horse lovers and while not the fastest time was made some of the best racing ever staged on the old track was seen. William J. Hudson, of Somerville, acted as starting judge.

In the 2:25 class, trotting or pacing, "Owyhamac," owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, finished third. "Legal Patch" won the event. In the 2:20 class, trotting or pacing, "The Baron," also owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, captured first place. His time was 2:22¼, 2:22¼, 2:22¼, 2:19¼, 2:27.

AS A GIFT.

The Lowell team of the Eastern League was presented to its manager, Jesse Burkett, formerly of the St. Louis Browns, by the owner, Andrew F. Roach, last night, after Roach had given formal notice that he had withdrawn the team from the league at the conclusion of yesterday's games at Worcester. Roach received the club's share of yesterday's receipts. Burkett announced that he would try to finish out the regular season, which closes September 16. It is understood he accepted the team free of indebtedness. Lowell is in ninth place in the ten club circuit.

BORO COURT CASE.

Ralph Delibro, an ashman, was arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand in the borough court this morning on a charge of allowing his wagon to stand on the sidewalk and also on a charge of carting furniture without a license. Delibro was fined five dollars, which he paid.

Autumn Household Sales

LINENS

Household and Decorative

Second Autumn Sale Starts Tomorrow

Linen manufacturers in New York have been advising some of their customers recently to "go to Wanamaker's because they sell linens at retail cheaper than we can wholesale." And the retail shopkeepers have come, bought what they wanted at retail prices to sell again.

THIS Linen Sale is unique. It offers linens which we believe cannot be matched in this country at the prices. Belgian, Scotch, Irish tablecloths of exquisite quality; Irish hand-embroidered linens; a whole new collection of linen towels; a wonderful lot of damask by the yard. Every thread all-linen. Many priced less than we can buy them at wholesale today.

What is the secret? Forethought, foresightedness. BEFORE linens grew scarce and high, the Wanamaker Store provisioned itself for months ahead. Whenever it had a chance it bought low, and now passes all its advantages on to its customers.

Remarkable Groups

Odd tablecloths—Quite a number from our stocks, reduced because impossible to match up with napkins, except in some instances. Some a little soiled on the outer fold.

Napkins to match some of the above at proportionate prices.

Damask by the yard—Scotch and Irish single and double damasks, unusual patterns, 72 inches wide, many at less than present wholesale cost. $1, $1.25, $1.35, $1.50 yard.

All-linen towels—Just out of Customs, a fine collection of huck face towels at $3.60 to $24 dozen. Many at lower than present wholesale prices.

Embroidered linens, half price—Imagine getting a pure linen 6-inch doily, with Irish hand-embroidery and scallop at 15c! And a 10-inch doily at 25c. And an 18-inch centerpiece at 60c, a 24-inch centerpiece at 85c, a 30-inch centerpiece at $1.35! CURTAINS

FRENCH curtains, Swiss curtains, American curtains—thousands of them in hundreds of styles, will make the Upholstery Store a snowy drift of laciness Tuesday.

"You will never get your Swiss curtains this year," remarked an importer the other day. That very minute five cases of Swiss curtains were being unpacked.

It has been splendid the way the bulk of our exclusive foreign curtains have arrived.

From Switzerland all the rich Irish point curtains for which people are asking, all the misty ones of Brussels lace, many of them like fairy wedding veils, and those others with delightful princess cut work, and applique designs.

From France, also, a very large and charming collection of curtains with hand-made laces—Bruges, antique, filet, cluny and hand-embroidered designs and the favorite Marie Antoinette curtains with graceful raised designs on white or ecru grounds.

We are very proud of our American collection. It contains many exclusive styles originated by Wanamaker experts and others that reproduce rich foreign styles at a small part of their cost.

Delicate ivory nets with applique borders, and Marie Antoinette laces, and curtains with quantities of hand-made antique lace or machine made laces that copy real ones. These in addition to all the little simple nets, transparent point d'esprit, voile, scrim and marquisette.

What Are the Prices?

As a general rule they are very moderate, but there are so many it is difficult to recite all.

A little scrim curtain starts as low as 75c—twelve styles between that and $2.50. Irish point curtains from Switzerland are $4.25 to $22.50 and they come in 3, 3½ and 4 yard lengths. Brussels lace curtains from Switzerland are $9.50 to $65, and the old-fashioned tambour curtains are $7.50 to $17.50. The Marie Antoinette curtains are $4.25 to $20.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning
Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.
To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.
To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.
Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.
To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.—Adv.

FRELINGHUYSEN IS STRONGEST CANDIDATE

Former Prosecutor Pope Optimistic Over Sentiment for Somerset Co. Man.

Somerville, Sept. 5 (Special.)—"Joseph S. Frelinghuysen is regarded as the strongest available candidate for the nomination of United States Senator on the Republican ticket and sure of being elected if nominated, as we in Somerset believe he is going to be," said Frederick A. Pope, former procesutor of the pleas. "I believe, after a trip through many of the southern counties, that Senator Frelinghuysen is sure of the nomination at the primaries on the twenty-sixth. I found a deeper appreciation of his worth as a statesman everywhere I went that there was apparent six months ago. The voters of the State have become more familiar with his record as a constructive statesman, and they are now thoroughly convinced that he is qualified in every way for the position as the successor of James E. Martine, the present United States Senator whose term will expire next March.

"Senator Frelinghuysen is regarded as a man of forceful character, unquestioned judgment in business and political affairs, and a man whose views on the big questions of the day are sound. He is looked upon as a man who would support the policies of Justice Hughes in every particular. In every country I found that the former Progressives were enthusiastic in his support, and they are expecting to give him the biggest kind of a vote throughout the State to indicate their acceptance of the principle as enunciated in his platform when he announced his candidacy.

"The name of Frelinghuysen sounds good to a majority of the Republicans of the State. They remember that there have been three United States Senators from New Jersey of that name, all worthy and able statesmen, and they feel that the credit of the State will be further maintained in every way by selecting Joseph S. Frelinghuysen at the primaries, and once he is nominated it is admitted everywhere he is sure of being elected by a large majority."

CHIEF DOANE BACK FROM PROVIDENCE CONVENTION

Fire Chief Doane returned Saturday night from Providence, R. I., where he has been for a week attending the annual convention of the National Fire Chiefs' Association and was enthusiastic over the progress being made in the making of appliances to fight fires. Chief Doane was offered the nomination for second vice president, but declined the honor because he felt his other work would not permit him to accept.

The convention was held in the armory of Providence and attracted over eight hundred chiefs from all over the country, but the threatened railroad strike caused many from the West to hurry home without waiting for the completion of the convention. In the drill hall of the armory, the chief said, there was an exhibit of all sorts of devices for fighting fires, and a number of engines were given a twelve-hour endurance test, finishing with excellent records.

CORNING POULTRY FARM DESTROYED BY FIRE

A few minutes after noon today a fire, of unknown origin, broke out on the Corning Poultry Farm at Manville Park and destroyed most of the buildings and outer houses, roasting to death hundreds of fine chickens.

The Corning Farm is situated on the trolley road from Bound Brook to Somerville and covers a considerable area. The fire departments of surrounding towns were not called to the scene of the conflagration and very little water could be secured. It is estimated that the loss will be exceedingly heavy.

A TYPICAL TENT CITY OF MILITIAMEN ALONG THE BORDER

TROOPERS ARE IN BEST OF HEALTH

Only Three Men That Are Suffering From Illness or Injury.

CAMP LIFE IS PLEASANT

Country Hot, But Men Are Well Fed, Well Treated and Fairly Well Entertained — Preparations for Winter's Work There.

(By James J. McNamee.)

Douglas, Ariz., Aug. 30.—There is at least one place hotter than Douglas and a considerable number with worse facilities for a military camp. There are few men stationed here who are not satisfied with their lot and determined to stick to a finish no matter how long Washington may deem it wise to keep them on the border patrol. Reports of illness and injuries have been wandering back to Plainfield from time to time, but a canvas made this afternoon shows that there are but three members of Troop D who are not in the very best of physical condition. Trooper John Calder is recovering from one of the most serious operations ever performed in Calumet Hospital, and expects soon to be back in the tented village. Trooper James Conway is undergoing treatment in the hospital for an illness that has troubled him for years. He decided to take advantage of the excellent facilities for treatment in this institution and will soon be discharged completely cured. Trooper Roger Mellick was kicked on the leg by a horse a fortnight ago, but has so nearly recovered that he will throw away his crutches today or tomorrow. Outside of these three instances there is absolutely no illness or injury of any nature among the Plainfielders, and every man has become vitally interested in the routine of soldier work.

Douglas is hot; this fact cannot be denied. There is more humidity at this time of the year than at any other season and comparatively little rain has fallen for the past fortnight. One Newark youth wrote a postal in the Y. M. C. A. tent this afternoon to his mother saying the thermometer has reached 145 degrees. He was just about thirty-five and possibly more degrees ahead of the official mark. Wildcat reports of this nature are being sent home every day in the week and it is little wonder that the folks at home are kept constantly on the anxious edge.

Contrary to stories that have been traced to discharged guardmen or disgruntled news correspondents this place is fairly tolerable, and while the few chronic kickers make themselves conspicuous, it is noticeable that the grumblers are greatly in the minority.

Douglas likes the soldiers and the soldiers find much to interest them in this queer western town. The Copper City comerciants (merchant) makes his kindly feeling impressive by tripling prices on necessary commodities of wear and food, and his various novel schemes to collect escudo-armericano (American dollars) help remind the Jerseymen that home is not the worst place on the face of the globe. Pennies, or penique, as the Mexicans call them, are practically worthless here. The storekeepers have a trick of marking articles down to twelve and one-half cents, but it is necessary for the consumer to hand over fifteen cents, as pennies will not be accepted. Silver "cartwheels" are also conspicuous and they tell us that paper money was worthless before the soldiers invaded Douglas. If you hand a merchant a twenty dollar bill for a dollar purchase he will invariably hand you back nineteen silver dollars. These are heavy and clumsy, but even the banks prefer them to the paper currency.

Trop D has already won the distinction of being the best fed unit at Douglas, and it has also excited more or less jealousy from other quarters by the almost daily arrival of gifts from patriotic and thoughtful Plainfield citizens. Captain Borden's men enjoy many luxuries that the other guardsmen have yet to be introduced to at Douglas in the way of eatables, but despite this fact they have gained praise at company inspections and while hard work was in progress during camp building time.

The "back-homers" will never be able to realize the conditions under which the troopers are now soldiering. They are ideal, to say the least. The camp streets are as good as the best macadam thoroughfares in Plainfield, and the cooking and living facilities and the water supply are on a par with that to be had back home. No one has a legitimate kick to lodge and every man knows better than to grumble if he has nothing to grumble about.

Troop D's officers have won their way into the heart of every guardsman and the friction so prominent in one or two other units is entirely absent in the Plainfield headquarters. When the Queen City troopers are granted little liberties they take the greatest pains not to abuse them, and the troop to an individual works in harmony with its official staff.

However, in one respect the Plainfielders are like all the rest of the soldiers here. They have their representative wiseacres who get daily "hunches" about the length of time the guardsmen will be stationed at this point. Some firmly declare that they will be sent back home by September 15 while others are more conservative and set October 1 as the date. Despite the persistency on the part of the soldier element the government goes right ahead spending thousands of dollars to bring new men here, organizing motor truck corps, permanentizing the camp and doing other little and big things that foretell a long stay. Those having "hunches," however, cannot be shaken from their views and considerable fun is had at their expense by those who have settled down for a winter of it.

Despite these "hunches" everything points to a stay of many more months. Regular army officers in Douglas declare it will take at least six months from now to whip the Jersey troops into fighting trim. These men have visited the Douglas camp and know what they are talking about. While no official information has leaked into camp the higher authorities believe that they are here for a much longer stay than most of the men anticipate, and the sooner the wiseacres realize this the better it will be for them.

The men have certain hours of the day and evening to themselves and generally spend them in a visit to town, the city proper being about three-quarters of a mile away. Clusters of Plainfielders gather at Hotel Gedson or other town points each evening and many of the officers take supper occasionally at Douglas hotels. Moving picture houses, trolley rides and visits to the residential section of the city occupy the time of many of the enlisted men. Douglas is a thriving municipality, thanks to the administration that sent the militia here. Business enterprises of every kind are prospering, and new ones are being opened each day.

Douglas is known as the Copper City because of its monster copper smelters. Hundreds of men are employed in the two biggest smelters, and pay average $5 and $6 a day. Some men are making as high as $8 a day as factory workers. Living costs are higher than in the East, but the smelter hands admit that they are hording up the gold for a rainy day. Arizona is a "dry" State and the men get little opportunity to squander their earnings on booze.

All in all this is a pretty decent sort of a place after all. It doesn't do to be too particular, and your time will be wasted if you spend it hunting for cool weather. The big question naturally is, "when are we going back to Plainfield?" but those individuals who are attempting to answer it are making idle guesses.

OFFICERS AND MEN HAVE "HUNCH" THEY ARE TO LEAVE FOR HOME THIS MONTH

(By Staff Correspondent)

Douglas, Aug. 30.—Despite the fact that the government has just thrown into camp 214 new recruits the men with the "hunch" about leaving here for home September 15 refuse to have it shaken. They declare they have good reason to believe that Douglas will be a soldierless city, as far as the New Jersey troops are concerned, by the middle of September or the first of October at the very latest. The peculiar part of these "hunches" are that they are assumed by some of the officers and while in some cases they wont divulge the source of their information several claim the "inside stuff" came direct from Washington. It is a known fact, however, that no orders have been issued to this effect and that the commandants of the Jersey troops are outlining a plan of work that will carry them well into the winter. To discourage the "hunches" nearly one hundred big motor trucks have arrived in camp and a truck corps has already been organized. A machine gun corps will be made up from the various units within a few days.

The men are once more anticipating the arrival of pay day and it is hoped that the monthly compensation with this month be dealt out on time instead of fifteen or more days late.

COMPANY M MEN IN A NEAR RIOT

Stage Small Rebellion When Esterby Fails to Get Promotion.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., August 31.—An attempt to put an end to politics in the Fourth Regiment, today resulted in several companies of that unit being thrown into a state of turmoil which promises to end with serious results. Appointments made by Colonel George T. Vickers, the leader in the movement to break up horse play in elections, were not ratified by the companies affected, and disorderly demonstrations ensued.

This morning Company M, whose members hail from Hoboken and northern part of Hudson county, turned out with their bayonets in their hands and refused to drill because the colonel appointed First Lieutenant Hugh G. Gillespie, of Company C, and a veteran of the Boer war, their captain. The men said they did not personally object to Gillespie, but were indignant because the colonel refused to make their first lieutenant, Arthur H. Esterly, the commanding officer of the company. Esterly said today that his resignation was written out and he will probably hand it in before nightfall.

When the men refused to drill an order was given assigning Lieutenant Frank S. Wells, yesterday elected captain of Company A, to the command of the company temporarily in place of Captain William J. Krogg, who left for home tonight on a thirty day furlough, pending action on his resignation. The men last night paraded around the camp with a sign reading "We want Esterly" and "We'll hang Gillespie to a sour apple tree." Esterly pleaded with them to quit but they refused and are still in a state of near riot.

BREWSTER GETS FURLOUGH; BIRD IS DISCHARGED

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., Aug. 30.—Private D. W. Bird, of Troop D, and Private Henry Wilder, of Troop C, left last night for the East, each having received a depnedency discharge during the day. Sergeant James Brewster, of Troop D, will leave for Plainfield today on a fifteen-day furlough. Brewster has had an application for discharge for several weeks, but the action of the War Department has been so slow, and when the time came when he really needed to depart his only alternative was to file application for a furlough, permission for which was obtained inside of two hours.

Life in the New Jersey camp has now settled down to one continuous round of hard work and with the preliminary work nearly completed the soldiers are looking forward to extensive drilling during the next few weeks. The amount of drill work which the men have been put to to date has accomplished wonders. Evening parades bring out companies of militiamen whose marching is done with a clock-like precision.

PLAINFIELD ELKS GUESTS OF DOUGLAS LODGE

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 1.—Plainfield Elks in Troop D, along with about 200 other "Bills" in the camp, were the guests at a reception given under the auspices of the Douglas lodge last night, the affair being a thoroughly enjoyable one. The evening was spent in dancing and an informal program of song and music was rendered. The local lodge announced at the conclusion of the affair that an effort would be made to hold such events each week during the stay of the troopers in Douglas.

Do Not Meddle With Your Ears.

Whatever plausible reasons laymen may have for treating some diseases, they should not meddle with the ear. It is a very sensitive and delicate organ, peculiarly liable to serious injury through the manipulations of men and women ignorant of its anatomy, functions and pathology. Judicious treatment is most important, but it is better to let ear troubles alone than to seek the aid of Aunt Samantha or take the advice of some officious neighbor.—Volta Review.

BURRO BUYING IS MANIA ON BORDER

Plainfield Threatened With Nuisance When Boys Come Home.

TROOP TO RIFLE RANGE

Cooks Are Sent Home—Rivalry for Vacancies Created by Discharge of Non-Commissioned Officers—Motor Trucks Valuable.

Douglas, Ariz., August 31.—Those people back in Plainfield who are shouting for the return of Troop D and the rest of the Jersey military units have no idea what is going to be inflicted upon them as soon as the militiamen arrive back on the "old sod." Home folk know what it is to be eaten up by mosquitoes, scared to death by dogs or pestered to death by cats, but they have yet to experience having to dodge a hundred or more burros in and about the main thoroughfare.

Burro buying has become a mania down this way and every enlisted man has laid plans to cart one of the small sized mules back home with him. They can be purchased for a "song," that is—they will be transferred by native Mexicans for two or three silver dollars. They are as conspicuous in this country as mosquitoes are back home and they make just as much a nuisance of themselves.

To date Captain Albert Borden has permitted but one of the little beasts in the camp, and if the Planfielders know where they are well off they will send hurry up messages to him pleading for the placing of a ban on the noise makers. If some action is not taken in the very near future every one of the hundred or more Plainfielders will have himself tied up to a contract to take one or more of the pets back to Plainfield. True, they make fine pets and better beasts of burden, but they also furnish enough noise to keep a whole city awake at night. Just what regulations the Plainfield authorities would establish upon the introduction of the burros has become a matter of keen speculation among the troopers.

"Susan" Burro has been adopted as the Plainfield boys' mascot. She has taken a liking to tobacco chewing, will eat or drink anything that looks worth attempting and, last but not least she will make a friend out of anything garbed in khaki. Ambitious recruits or fun loving officers have frequently taken upon themselves to furnish the burro with a comfortable bed alongside of some sleeping soldier and the latter has been awakened by revielle by the soft nose of "Susan." She has also come in handy for initiation purposes and as a refuse gatherer. The boys don't have to clean up; they let "Susan" do it.

Word was received today that Troop D will spend Friday and Saturday on the rifle range. This comes as a welcome bit of news, as the Plainfield boys have been anxious to get out and do some shooting and they are optimistic of their chances to set up some records. The range was recently constructed, a number of Plainfielders having a hand in the work, and it has been inspected and pronounced ideal for practice work. The units who have used it to date have established some noticeable marks and every Plainfielder expects to qualify as a marksman. This, incidentally, means an advance in pay for privates of from $15 to $18 a month, and the additional $3 will find a welcome.

News of the discharge of Sergeants J. Hartley Mellick, Sherman B. Joost and James H. Brewster, and Corporals Maxwell Perkins and William Tyler was received this afternoon, and Mellick and Joost were noticed this evening trailing along toward town to purchase a couple of suitcases for the return trip. The five releases have naturally created considerable interest relative to the filling of vacancies, and it is the general belief that first-class privates will be brought up from the ranks immediately to fill the shoes of the discharged officers. All of the five men have proven themselves efficient in camp and it is with keen regret that their comrades see them go. Sergeant Mellick has proven himself of special value as mess sergeant and the troopers are naturally watching this election the keenest of all, because what concerns their appetites most vitally interests them.

It was also learned today on creditable authority that an order has come through to dscharge all negro members of militia representing New Jersey. Plainfield has three negroes in Troop D, and these will be sent home. All of of the men have worked hard and are anxious to remain, but Captain Borden has no power to keep them here. They are Troopers Leslie Kinslow, William Daniels and James Hall. To help fill the mess hall vacancies Captain Borden has had Private John Logan, of Dunellen, studying the culinary art in the regulars' camp south of here. He will be brought back some time prior to October 1, the officers of the various units having colored members being granted a respite until that time to get rid of the ones affected.

Private Lester Chandler, of the First Field Hospital Corps, has been slightly under the weather for the past few days, but is now on the job and fast regaining his health. As soon as he exhibited signs of illness Major Corbusier delegated him to the hospital tent and he soon pulled around.

Despite the belief that fall weather had arrived, today was one of the warmest the troop has spent in Douglas. There was considerable humidity and during the afternoon the men were pretty well worn out while on parade. Considerable attention is now being devoted to drill work and the troop is rounding into fine condition under the instruction of the officers. Despite the heat the men were all willing to go through the ordered afternoon's work and none were affected by the hot sun.

The motor truck donated by several Plainfielders has been doing great work, and it is the envy of all of the other units. The truck is used to haul equipment and eatables back from town and saves the outfit much expense and labor. The generosity of Plainfield people has become notable to the whole camp and on every hand is heard talk of the treatment being given the boys from Plainfield by the folks back home.

VACANCIES ARE FILLED IN TWO NEW JERSEY UNITS

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., August 30.—Vacancies caused by resignations were filled by election in two units of the Jersey militia here yesterday. Arthur E. Jenkins, of Trenton, being named captain of Company G, First Regiment, and Robert B. Brown, of Newark, a former first lieutenant, being promoted to the majorship from Troop C. In Company G, Mathew G. Connors, of Newark, was elected first lieutenant and in Troop C Second Lieutenant Lewis B. Ballentyne was named first lieutenant. These men have already received their commissions and will enter upon their new duties immediately.

TROOPER NOTES

Fellow troopers believe that "Reggy" Rowland has too much else to write to a certain little miss in Plainfield to think of thanking her for a big cake she sent down here last week, and have petitioned the press to do the appreciation stunt. Reggy got the cake, and while it lasted, he was the most popular boy in the troop. The guardsmen didn't say anything about asking her to send along another one, but have a hunch that we knew enough to draw conclusions.

Trooper Kirby is spending his time trying to train one eye to do the work of two. When the troopers were inspected the other day he tried to convince the examining officer that the sight of one eye was defective enough to warrant his discharge. The officers couldn't discover any defectiveness and he was sent back to camp. He may be blind to some things, but the boys claim that Kirby has the keenest vision in Douglas when money is flashed in his optics.

Captain Borden is the busiest man along the border and the good people in Plainfield who are endeavoring to aid the soldiers in every possible way are the ones who are making all the work for him. The captain answers personally every communication from home folk relative to the troop, but he says it is part of his duty, and he takes care of the task cheerfully. Captain Borden has expressed his appreciation of the work being done for the troops in Plainfield and wants to co-operate in every way.

Trooper Johnny Logan, of Dunellen, is serving time with the regular army. An order is expected in the near future which will compel Troop D to discharge its three efficient colored cooks, and Captain Borden is preparing for the emergency by having Logan schooled with the regulars in the culinary art. Logan works twenty-four hours and is off twenty-four hours, in alternating periods, and likes his new assignment well.

Trooper Johnny Rinehart is splitting up tme chauffeuring business with Trooper Joe Gallagher, a fellow Dunellenite. They have been handling the Plainfield motor truck and the machine is being made useful in a number of ways.

CAVALRY TO MAKE LONG "HIKE" SOON

Men Will Be Out of Camp for Twelve Days—Newspaper Popular.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 1.—All cavalrymen are anticipating the twelve or fifteen-day "hike," to be held about the fifteenth of September. Six days will be consumed in hiking sixty-one miles to unselected spot, three more in field work and six days for the return. Details of the march are now being awaited, but it is understood that General Hine will take every man in the brigade with him. He had also intended taking along with him the First and Fourth regiments, but the unexpected withdrawal of these two units will leave the brigade incomplete.

The newspaper tent has become the centre of information for both men and officers. It will be remembered that the first news of the mobilization order came from the newspaper tent at Sea Girt and officers were not officially notified until several hours afterward. The newspapermen received "flash tips" in camp here Wednesday night concerning the withdrawal of the regiments at least two hours before any of the official staff came into possession of the news. Since then nearly every one of the 6,000 or more men have directed their attention to the war correspondents for their first hand "dope."

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week. Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Adv.

TWO REGIMENTS LEAVE FOR HOME

First and Fourth Expect to Be Mustered Out at Sea Girt.

NO MORE DISCHARGES

Troop D Believes Pending Applications Will Be Denied—Cregar and Stemmon En Route Here—Fill Vacancies Sometime This Week.

(By James J. McNamee.)

Douglas, September 5.—In the face of a terrific rain storm the trains bearing members of the First and Fourth New Jersey regiments pulled out of the Douglas yards last night bound for home. Despite the downpour the trains got away without a hitch, and no amount of cold water could dampen the flame of joy that burned in the breasts of the men, for they were going home. They will be in Sea Girt Friday.

Although these men were ordered home because of the threatened railroad strike no change in the order was made after it became apparent that the strike was averted, and this leads to the belief that they will be mustered out of Federal service after they have been at Sea Girt a few days. There can be no possible good in the men remaining in the camp at Sea Girt, officers say, and the boys down here refer to the regiments as the "Lucky First" or "Fortunate Fourth."

There were two Plainfielders in among members of the Fourth Regiment. Troopers Cregar and Stemman left with them and they should be in Plainfield by the end of the week.

There will be no more discharges from Troou D soon. While no official statement has been made to this effect it is generally known among the men, and those who sought release have lost hope of favorable action on their applications.

When Troop D returns to Plainfield, and little or no information can be gleaned from this end as to when this is likely to be, the official personnel will be bettered beyond a state of identification by home folk. Dependency discharges have been flying thick and fast during the past three days and when the clouds lifted after what promised to be the finale of the fusillade last week every officer with the exception of Captain Albert Borden, Lieutenants Daniel Runkle and James N. Charles; Sergeants Roy Cox and Louis Alberts had "release" papers tucked under their belts. The last detachment of these men is en route to Plainfield and now comes the task of filling the vacancies.

Other units in camp here have been well nigh broken up by appointments made to fill just such openings in the official staff as this but no such trouble is anticipated in Troop D quarters. The men have implicit faith in Captain Borden and his nominations will doubtlessly be unanimously endorsed. In the meantime all of the troopers are awaiting in eager anticipation the announcements for there are many who feel qualified to fill the vacant shoes. This is entirely true for some good soldiers have developed since the outfit left Plainfield and while all the men do not possess the peculiar and essential qualities of a leader there is enough talent to fill in without drafting from other troops or companies.

Spoons.

The origin of the spoon is uncertain. It must have been invented at a very ancient date, for it is found among people that have never come into contact with civilization. The necessity of having some implement for dipping water seems to have led first to the invention of the calabash or the use of the cocoanut shell and later on to the spoon.

THE UNIONS ON PARADE.

Yesterday was the day of Labor. The country, in theory, paid homage to the builder, the worker, the man whose brawn and brain and will has made every big thing and every good thing we enjoy possible. That is the purpose of the holiday, and yet in Plainfield, as in other cities, the fact fell pitifully short of the theory. But few except those of labor had a part in the celebration. But few except those of labor gave more than passing thought to the rights or needs of that biggest and best element in American's citizenship—the man who works. Labor Day is merely a national bid for public recognition on the part of the working man. It should serve a higher purpose. A parade does no more than call attention to the magnitude of the army that is enlisted under the banner of unionism. The parade is beneficial, essential perhaps, though it should be but a preliminary event in the day's celebration. Yesterday the entire country was keenly interested in one of the biggest labor problems of the year, or any year. The public would have been attentive to any form of argument as to the justice of an eight-hour day for railroad trainmen. This question is not settled and will never be settled until decided by the people, though it appears that a majority would ratify the action of Congress. Today the public is still seeking the side of labor. Labor Day has come and gone, and with it went a golden opportunity for missionary work on the part of the unions. They came, we saw—they might have conquered.

"HUNCHES ON THE BORDER."

Down on the hot sands of Arizona serious-minded business men who formerly laughed at "hunches" are beginning to be inflicted with them. Correspondents send daily stories of the "hunches" that enlisted men and officers have as to the exact time they will be ordered home by the War Department. Apparently this is one form of amusement among militiamen. The border "hunches," like those that strike folks at home on the outcome of the presidential election, are based mostly on hope. If the troopers were home they would probably be having "hunches" that Hughes or Wilson would be elected, and with about the same assurance of realization.

This commission represents the first real attempt at an understanding with our troublesome Southern neighbor. It is to be hoped that its deliberations will fully justify the optimistic utterances of the Secretary of State who said in opening the conference: "I hope that every obstacle to vex the cordial relations of our governments, may be removed and your two countries and their peoples may be drawn into a closer union, cemented by friendship and good will and by mutual respect."

An Irish comedy written by Granville Warwick presents Mae Marsh in the role of the colleen, and she is an attractive Molly-O. The name of the vehicle in which Miss Marsh is starred is "The Marriage of Molly-O," which is the story of a pretty Irish lass who is left to care for her mother. They owe a great deal of rent to the lord of the estate, and in order to meet the debt Molly accepts a loan from Danny McGuire, the son of the agent, hoping to pay him back when her beautiful pig wins the prize at the fair. She loves, and is loved by Sir Laurence O'Dea, she not knowing anything about his noble connections; but she thinks him unable to support her, and closes her ears to his entreaties. Then, just as she is about to take her pig to the fair, she finds it has been sold to meet the demands of the agent. Danny, figuring that if he has helped her thus far, he may as well undertake Molly's support for life, sends for the priest to marry them; but before the marriage can go through, Larry O'Dea reveals his true identity, and there is a genuinely happy ending. A laugh-proviking Keystone comedy and the thirteenth chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine" complete today's program.

Tomorrow William Farnum again greets his many admirers in a production not unlike his former successes. The Fox Company announced recently that his last vehicle, "The Man From Bitter Roots," would be the last picture in which Farnum appeared as a rough and powerful character and would in the future appear in society dramas, but so insistent became the demand from film fans hroughout the country that the Fox Company decided to present two more of this type of pictures, and thus "The End of the Trail," telling a story of love among the snows of the North.

On Thursday Theda Bara will appear in a return engagement at Proctor's in "Under Two Flags," Frank Keenan and Charles Ray will co-star in "Honor Thy Name." On Friday and Saturday an added feature will be Charlie Chaplin in "The Count."

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Back on the Farm.

Erasmus was the huskiest of all the college team;
His kicking was as classic and his running was a scream.
The enemy all took flight, their terror ill-concealed,
Whene'er he grabbed the pigskin and went tearing down the field.
He was the very limit in the strenuous pastime;
To ask a man to tackle him was nothing but a crime.
He was the strongest man they'd had in twenty-seven years;
He always left the field bestrewn with arms and legs and ears.

But back home in vacation time his strength just failed, I vow,
He was so weak he couldn't think of following the plow.
He couldn't hoe potatoes and he couldn't split the wood.
Although he told his parents he would like to if he could.
He simply seemed to pine away and dwindle as a rule,
Till in the fall when time came 'round for him to go to school,
Then he'd recover suddenly and take an awful brace.
In feats of strength a deal depends upon the time and place.

Plainfield Theatre.

The vaudeville season will be ushered in at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and evening with an excellent bill of five acts and will continue during the winter, except on days when a play is booked. With an entire change of program every Monday and Thursday, the management has completed arrangements for the presence of the most successful vaudeville entertainers in the Metropolitan district, and the headliners of each bill will be an entire show in themselves. As in past seasons, there will be one performance in the afternoon and two at night. The headliner in the bill scheduled for today and tomorrow is the "Seven Melody Fiends," in twenty minutes of fun. Caroline Meredith in her singing and dancing, is a distinct departure from the ordinary and will undoubtedly score a hit, while the "Sharpshooters" in their exhibition of marksmanship will give an excellent version of "preparedness." Nat F. Jerome, formerly of "Potash & Perlmutter," adds a new sort of one-act comedy to the bill with his one-act sketch entitled "Next, Please," and Brooks & Wilson in a comedy entitled "Parting," are a great success as funmakers. A three-reel drama and a comedy are included in the bill, as well as the Mutual Weekly and Pathe News.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Mrs. Mary A. Landon, of South Elgin, Ill., is said to be the only woman president of a railway in America. Mrs. Landon was recently elected to her post by the stockholders of the Woodstock-Sycamore Traction Company, which operates gasoline cars making hourly trips between Sycamore and Marengo, Ill., and handles considerable freight, besides a large passenger business. There was no opposition to Mrs. Landon's election. She was active in promoting the erection of the road, which strikes a stretch of territory overlooked by the steam lines, and owns a large part of the stock.

Miss Frances Lippitt, daughter of United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt, of Rhode Island, sailed for France last week to take up work as a nurse in French war hospitals. Miss Lippitt was Helen Taft's chum during the Taft administration, and acted as official hostess for her father at Washington up to the time of his marriage to Mrs. McLaughlin, an aunt of Miss Taft, a year or two ago. She has been identified with Red Cross work since the outbreak of the war, and one of Miss Mabel Boardman's right hand men in organizing classes for first aid work. She was enrolled in the Chevy Chase Service School, and is one of the best equipped young women for her work yet to enlist for service in Europe.

One occasionally hears a wondering voice inquiring if Liliuokalanai, deposed Queen of Hawaii, is still alive. According to Judge T. B. Stuart, of the Hawaiian bench, now on a visit to America, the former Queen, whose reign ended in 1893, is living a venerable old age in comfort and content in Honolulu, enjoying a veneration and affection amounting to worship from her former subjects. She draws a pension of $12,000 from the Hawaiian government, most of which she gives away in charities, having always been open-handed to a fault. Her old friends and many of her former subjects call upon her at her home, where she holds a sort of court, still a queen to the Hawaiians. Of late years Liliuokalani has given up traveling, but in her earlier days was very fond of travel and of making long sojourns, particularly in Paris, where she indulged to the full her feminine fondness for style and shopping, and was one of the most lavish customers of the "grand makers."

Mrs. George Bass, of Chicago, will be in charge of activities among women voters of the Western States in behalf of President Wilson. She will act as chairman of the Women Voters' Bureau of the Western headquarters of the Democratic National Committee, and will have jurisdiction over the twelve States where women have the franchise. Mrs. Bass was for three years president of the Chicago Women's Club, and has campaigned for suffrage in many States. Two years ago she was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Commissioner.

PROHIBITIONISTS WILL GATHER AT CARTERET ARMS

Prohibitionists of Union county will gather at Carteret Arms, Broad street, Elizabeth, tonight at 8 o'clock for the county convention of the National Prohibition Party for the purpose of nominating three assembly candidates, candidates for coroner and other county offices.

Prof. Livingston Barbour, of Rutgers College, the Prohibition party candidate for United States Senator, will be present and give the address of the evening.

The general public is invited to attend the convention, and all properly qualified to do so to participate in the business part of the meeting.

ANNETTE KELLERMANN COMING TO PLAINFIELD TO MEET HER SWIMMING CLASS PUPILS

Famed Swimmer, Concluding Her Splandid Series for the Plainfield Daily Press, Tells Why She Wished to Meet You Face to Face. Received 200,000 Letters in Five Weeks.

Article No. 30.

By ANNETTE KELLERMANN,

International Record-Holder and Star of the William Fox $1,000,000 Film "A Daughter of the Gods."

I have been told many times by editors and writers that the number of letters received by the newspapers and some featured persons who write for them, reaches an astonishing total.

Now I am more than prepared to believe anything of this sort that will ever be told me. I have been deluged with letters received from the pupils following my swimming articles. The little enrollment coupons that many newspapers have published have been filled out—not merely by thousands, but hundreds of thousands.

Suddenly I find myself a woman with two hundred thousand letters to be answered—letters from Salem, Ore., and far San Diego to Portland or Bath, Maine, and southwards to Tampa and New Orleans.

How can I do it?

If two hundred thousand boys and girls are so interested in swimming and good health that they take the trouble to write me personal letters, I am going to follow up those letters—and all those I have received from the Plainfield Daily Press in particular.

This is how I will accomplish something of a permanent nature. Early in the fall I shall write the Editor of the Plainfield Daily Press, giving him at least two weeks in advance notification of the date when I will arrive in Plainfield. Between us we will then arrange to publish notices calling our swimming pupils together and we will arrange some method whereby all of us shall meet face to face. If a pool is conveniently near we will have a swimming gala, such as we held in far Australia or in England. If this is not available we will meet anyway at a party for a talk—not a lecture, for I despise the thought of preaching when I feel sure that you would like to feel as if we were just sitting across a table from each other and having a good, friendly chat.

Out of our meeting I think we can arrange a permanent local organization that will be an important factor of good in Plainfield. The kind of things we will do and the matters in which we would be jointly interested are the sort of things that will benefit Plainfield or any other community.

So, may I give you my love and good wishes and ask you to follow some articles I may write meanwhile in the Plainfield Daily Press and watch for an announcement of my arrival later, then, instead of being long distance friends, we will have a "close-up" party—and all of my friends who see the movies know the meaning of the term "close-up" by now, I feel sure.

She Was the Most Beautiful Thing In the Palace.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Little Mermaid Visits A Prince's Palace.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

DADDY waited for the children to clap for a story. Then he began: "Once upon a time a little mermaid got a sea witch's potion so that she might become a mortal and win a prince's love. Up, up, through the dark blue waves she rose. The sun had not risen when she came in sight of the prince's palace and landed on the beautiful marble steps before his garden. The moon was still shining clear and bright.

"She sat down on the steps and drank the stinging, burning potion which the old witch had brewed for her in payment for her own tongue. The brew was like a sharp, two edged sword run through her tender body. She fainted away and lay there on the steps as if she were dead.

"When the sun arose on the sea she woke up and became conscious of a sharp pang. But just in front of her stood the handsome young prince with his black eyes fixed upon her. She cast her own down and saw that her fish's tail was gone. In its place were the prettiest little white legs any maiden could possibly want.

"The prince very politely asked her who she was and how she came there. She looked at him tenderly, with a great deal of love in her dark blue eyes, but she could not speak a word because she had given her tongue to the old witch.

"When the little maiden, no longer a true mermaid, did not answer him the prince took her by the hand and led her into his palace. Just as the sea witch had warned her, every step she took was like treading on sharp knives and spikes. But she bore it gladly. Led by the prince, she moved as gracefully as a bubble.

"The prince had her clothed in the costliest silks and muslins. She was the most beautiful thing in the palace, but she was dumb and could not sing or speak. Beautiful slaves clad in silks and gold came forward to sing to the prince and his parents. One of them sang better than all the others, and the prince clapped his hands and smiled at her. This made the little mermaid very sad, for she knew that once she used to sing far better than any of these girls. She thought, 'Oh, if the prince only knew that I gave up my voice forever for the sake of being with him!'"

"Couldn't she write the prince a letter and tell him all about it, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"My dear, mermaids don't have to go to school and learn to write like land children," said daddy, kissing her good night.

Training a Husband

by MRS EVA LEONARD

Marian Astonished Morris With a Firm Declaration of Her Rights and the Children s.

When Marian Southy entered her husband's study he motioned her to a chair to indicate that the interview he had requested was to be long and of a most serious nature. She sank down by the window and looked at him in the half light of the summer twilight waiting for him to begin.

"I asked you to come here, Marian, because I feel that you owe me an apology," he said with slow impressiveness.

"An apology!" she repeated in astonishment.

"Yes; I know the weather has been hot and you are tired, but that cannot excuse your manner toward me this afternoon, nor your interference with my discipline of Frank." He looked at her steadily to see if she realized the gravity of the situation. As she did not reply, he continued:

"You have been a very dutiful wife, and as this is your first offense, I am willing to overlook it, provided you ... that I cannot permit a recurrence of it."

"Morris," Marian leaned forward to get a good look at his face in the darkening room. "I am glad you have ...ced me to speak. I have long been trying to gather courage to tell you the things that are in my heart." She stopped and put her hand to her throat as if she were choking. "As long as I alone was wronged——"

"Wronged?" exploded Morris, turning sharply toward her.

"Yes, wronged. Listen to what I have to tell you. I remember reading somewhere that a young wife finding a certain thing irritated her husband marked the subject that had caused the friction with a danger signal as something to be avoided. It said that most marriage was a careful steering away from danger shoals if marriage was to be a success. It seems to me that is all I have been doing, all these years, charting my course to avoid trouble, and it has become so torturous that I can no longer navigate." Morris was staring at her with his jaw dropped. "I cannot be myself. I feel bound and imprisoned, gasping for breath. But I doubt if I should have said anything if I alone had been concerned, so strong are the chains of habit, but I cannot see my children grow up in the same prison. I owe it to them to try and get freedom for us all."

Morris did not answer. A great fear filled his brain that his wife had gone crazy.

"It is the heat and overwork," was the panicky explanation, but he had no idea what was the best course to pursue with the stricken woman.

"In my home," continued the quiet voice, "there was such freedom to live our lives. We were not hushed and repressed from morning till night. The air was not full of nervous irritability whose lightning stroke any chance word might call on an offending head."

"Marian," her husband wet his dry lips before he could go further, "you are tired and we will not talk about this any more tonight. The heat has affected you."

A bitter laugh came from the darkened corner. "I know what you think, but I am signing a new declaration of independence for myself and children forever." She rose and threw herself on her knees on the floor beside him. "Morris, I have worked very hard to make you happy, and have hidden my own feelings till you thought I never had any. I have made you selfish by yielding to your every whim, and I have done wrong. You must learn to consider the rights of others, the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Our children cannot grow up under constant repression and be developed properly." It was so dark that Marian could not see her husband's face, but she could feel his body growing tense and rigid as she leaned against him. She reached out one hand for his, but there was no answering pressure when she slid hers into it. After a long silence he said in a voice she had never heard:

"Leave me, Marian; I must think." With a heart like lead in her bosom Marian rose and stole softly from the room.

FELT HATS VERY NEW.

Variety of Shapes Seen—Novel Bead and Embroidery Featured as Trimming.

By Mary Glynn.

Among the fall showing of millinery there are some extremely new and smart felt hats. Many of them are in light shades, that is, tan, blue, and gray tones. Most of this felt has a zobeline finish, and is invariably very simply trimmed, this being a narrow band of grosgrain ribbon, silk embroidery, or the smart variation of wool embroidery. The white felt hat illustrated was a smart roll-brim sailor shape, with a simple rope of white wool yarn spaced with red cord, joining under a huge garent ornament. It was a stunning finishing touch to an outfit that consisted of white gaberdine suit, white button boots, and a white fox scarf.

"PADDED" ROYAL GIANTS DEMONSTRATE ABILITY ON LOCAL BASEBALL FIELDS

Suffer Defeat by Dunellen by 8 to 7 Score—Play 2 to 2 Tie With Tabs—Maiden and Dixon Knocked Out of Box—Bradford, "Philly" Giant, Pitches Great Baseball—Tabs Do Well.

At Dunellen.

Pete Simmons and his crew of huskies invaded the precincts of Dunellen on Saturday with the expressed intention of trimming Tommy Apgar's worthy cohorts. Alas, the tables were turned and Pete was forced to depart for home with an 8 to 7 defeat on his hands. There will be no third game.

The contest was a batting bee from start to finish. "Senor" Maiden, fresh from his victory over the Tabs, was picked to pitch for the Royals. "Senor" started off by walking Eddie Gunzelman, who, eventually scored. Hits by Trust and Johnny Wilson attended to this matter. Johnny Dixon was the Apgar choice for moundman and Johnny dragged along nicely until the third frame when the Royal bats began to get busy. Hits by Griffen and Fiall, two errors and a maimed batter, resulted in three runs and tossed John a little. The Royals rushed four more tallies over the pan in the seventh, hits by Hatchet, Borden, Fiall, Brown and "Ill" Tommy Washington doing the trick. But, Dunellen, like the proverbial cat, came back. Having tallied three runs in the sixth frame, by means of a fusilade of hits, the Apgarites got busy in the eighth and banged out four hits, scoring four runs. The score was then 8 to 7 and it remained so, despite the fact that, with Fiall on second, Pete Simmons did a pinch-hit stunt for "Tune" Kline. Warry McLaughlin fanned Pete and also caused Waldorf to bite the ozone. The score:

At Avon Oval.

With Bradford, of the Philadelphia Colored Giants, on the mound and with but three Plainfield players in the lineup, the Royal Giants were held to a 2 to 2 nine-inning tie by the Tabs at Avon Oval Sunday afternoon. About fifteen hundred people witnessed the contest, which was one of the most exciting games of baseball ever staged in this vicinity. The Tabs, composed of no outsiders, played great baseball and easily outclassed the Royals in fielding. In the hitline, however, the colored fellows were the masters, Bradford allowing the Abstainers but five hits.

The Royals scored a run in the first frame and repeated the stunt in the second inning. In the other seven innings they scored nothing. Bradford, one of the most reliable colored pitchers in baseball, worked leisurely and stated that he would tighten up and pitch "baseball" only when his mates refused to deliver the goods. He kept his promise and was very effective. Errors by Hatchet and Borden, the latter of whom dropped an easy throw to second, for which error he was shifted to the outfield, were directly responsible for the Tab runs. A great catch by Lou Brown saved the day and his double scored the run that evened matters. This run was the only one earned off Bradford.

The performance given by the Tabs pleased the huge crowd, fast plays being executed very often. The Royal infield was an entirely "outside" one and was inferior to the Abstainer infield. The game was called in the ninth, because Simmons said his players had to catch a train. The score:

AMERICAN TILE WORKERS IN DOUBLE ATTRACTION WITH ST. JOSEPH TEAM

Plainfield A. C. Defeats Saints in Saturday Tilt—Tile Workers Lose Both Ends of Double Attraction—Percy Harney on Mound in One Contest.

The St. Joseph baseball team indulged in three baseball attractions over the week-end, losing one contest to the Plainfield A. C. by the score of 7 to 2, and winning both ends of a double bill with the American Tile Workers, the scores of these contests being 12 to 11, and 5 to 2.

The North Plainfield team was in the pink of condition and performed splendidly in both attractions. Percy Harney, of Bound Brook fame, hurled in one of the games and was touched up considerably. The borough pitchers were very effective, both Earl Moran and Francis McDonough being unusually successful in their efforts to bring home the bacon.

Harry Stites hurled for the Plainfield A. C. on Saturday and allowed but three hits. Harry's friends believe that he is rapidly rounding into the best pitcher in this vicinity.

ELEVENTH STRAIGHT WIN FOR APGARITES

Tab Sunday Team in Ten Inning Tussle at Dunellen.

Dunellen scored its eleventh straight victory when it defeated the strong T. A. B. S. team of this city in a ten-inning game at Dunellen yesterday afternoon by the score of 9 to 8. As a result of this victory, little Johnnie Dixon is the hero of Dunellen today. For it was he who relieved the "Veteran" McLaughlin in the box in the tenth inning and held the heavy local sluggers in check, retiring the side by the strike-out route.

When the game started the stands of Maurer Oval were taxed to their capacity. The Tabs got away to a flying start, scoring three runs. Teeling, first up, singled. He was sacrificed to second by McCarty. Coughlan, next up, flied out to Brown at short, but Rosenson was given a free ticket to first. Mullin waited patiently and also walked. Things looked bad for Dunellen. Wall hit a sharp grounder to Brown at short. As Brown bent down for the ball it took a bad bound over his head. The hit went for two bases, Teeling and Rosenson scoring. Hannon, with a count of two and three on him, bunted and he obtained a life and Mullin scored when McLaughlin fumbled the ball. Wall, who tried to score on the play, was extinguished, Bergen to Apgar.

Things looked dark for Dunellen when they went to bat in their half of the ninth, but the unexpected happened and Brown, Trust and Dixon doubled in rapid succession. These hits netted Dunellen two runs, and Manager Scott "yanked" Denny and put in his star slabman McFadden. Berger, next up, hit safely back of short, scoring Dixon with the tying run. Wilson was then given a pass to first, but Bergen was slow in making up his mind to go to third when Teeling dropped a pitched ball and he was thrown out, Teeling to Coughlan. McLaughlin then flied out to Rosenson and Wall nailed Emery's liner.

In the fatal tenth, Johnnie Dixon's single with two on and two down, pronounced victory for Dunellen. The score:

"BIG GAME" WENT TO ELIZABETH TEAM

Manager Warden's Plainfield Stars Forced to Taste Defeat at Visitor's Hands.

The "big game" was pulled off at Parker Field yesterday afternoon and attracted considerable attention, the local team being compelled to taste the bitter dregs of defeat by the close score of 6 to 5.

"Allie" Compton, the First Baptist right fielder and catcher, did the pitching for the locals and was reached for eight bingles. Compton was effective in the pinches and lasted throughout the entire attraction. The Elizabeth team used two pitchers, who were clouted for eight hits, two of which went for two bases. These clouts were made by Porter and Campbell and came in the first session. An error in the eighth frame last the game for the locals. Herb Pennoyer, formerly of this city, played with Elizabeth.

WELSH GETS DECISION.

"Freddie" Welsh retained his title of champion lightweight pugilist yesterday after going the full scheduled twenty rounds with the challenger, "Charlie" White, of Chicago. The referee, "Billy" Roche, of New York, awarded Welsh the decision on points. As the gong sounded at the close of the twentieth round Roche stood for several moments as if undecided. He then reached out both hands toward the boxers, and many of the spectators believed he was about to award a draw. Suddenly Welsh rushed over to Roche and placed his glov in the referee's hand, and it was raised aloft, while the official appeared to be reaching for White. The next instant jubilant friends of the champion swarmed into the ring.

Saturday's Score.

Baptists, 6; Netherwood, 5.

Only one City League game was played on Saturday, the league champions going down to defeat at the hands of the Baptists, the score of an unusually interesting game being 6 to 5. The game was marked by fast fielding and by the presentation of a new lineup by the Baptists, who, by the way, played like leaguers throughout the attraction.

That this is the last game of the season cannot be questioned. There is very little probability of the Hopes playing with the Baptists as is scheduled for next Saturday. It has been unofficially reported that the Hope manager and several of his players have positively refused to play the game.

There will be a City League meeting in the Daly Press office this evening, when the Netherwoods will be awarded the honors earned by them. Medals and a flag will be given the club by admiring friends. The presentation will be attended to this evening and a large crowd of City Leaguers is expected to be present.

According to official information the City League will be re-organized for next year, with eight teams, if possible. Keep up the good work, boys.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

John McShay, who arrived here recently from Ireland, was fined $5 and took the pledge for one year when he was arraigned before Judge De Meza in city court today on a charge of fighting and drunkenness. McShay met a man on the street yesterday and without any warning walloped him hard.

David Turner and Joseph Brown received suspended sentences from the judge for fighting on East Front street and throwing glasses.

Joe Bungalote, in court for the twentieth time on a charge of being drunk, was given one more chance by the judge.

For swearing and fighting on Watchung avenue last night, James Stites and Harry Madden were fined $2 apiece by Judge De Meza with a warning not to let the same charge be lodged against them again.

William Price and Hughes Morris got into an argument on Park avenue over politics last night and wound up in court, but were given a suspended sentence.

$25 FOR DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT.

Because he was acting in a disgraceful manner on North avenue Sunday night and becoming a menace to public health, William Holloway, colored, was given a severe lecture yesterday by Judge De Meza in city court an fined $25 or forty days in the county jail. Judge De Meza is waging a war against such type of offenders, and Officer Martin has made three arrests recently, each man getting the same fine.

GRASS FIRE.

The fire department was called out shortly after noon yesterday to extinguish a grass fire on Park avenue near the city limits that threatened several houses.

ARNOLD ANSWERS SURVEY REPORT

Treasurer Says That the Experts Misrepresented Facts.

DEFENDS HIS METHODS

Misleading Statements of Condition of City Books Due to Fact That Research Men Only Spent Forty-five Minutes in Office, He Says.

Answering criticism of the work of his office made by the municipal experts who recently conducted the survey of Plainfield departments, City Treasurer William F. Arnold last night addressed to the Common Council a lengthy communication in which he declared that the experts had misrepresented facts and circulated misleading statements.

Mr. Arnold said they only spent forty-five minutes in his office and therefore they did not learn all the truth about his methods of handling public money. His communication contains some interesting comment upon the work of these experts and their recommendations as to improvements in the manner of conducting the office of City Treasurer.

The Council ordered 500 copies of the communication printed for distribution. A resolution authorizing this was introduced by Councilman Cose, and was seconded by Councilman Sutfick.

Mr. Hylan suggested that the Council wait until it knew what the communication contained.

Mr. Cose said the Council had the same opportunity of learning the contents of Mr. Arnold's letter as it had of learning the contents of the expert's report when 1,000 copies of that were ordered printed. He said he had never seen the report when the Council voted that 1,000 copies be printed for distribution.

It was his own fault. Mr. Hylan said. A copy was on file in the office of the clerk and another in the office of the Mayor for six weeks before the printing resolution was passed.

Councilman Hamilton suggested that Mr. Arnold be consulted. If the Council felt that copies should be printed for distribution he believed the Council should authorize this action. Mr. Arnold said that he would like to have copies of the communication so that one could be added to each copy of the survey report given out.

Councilman Cose informed the Council that but 12 copies of the survey report had been given out. He was using the figures of the clerk, and he admitted that 1,000 copies of the Arnold letter would never be used. On suggestion of Mr. Babcock the resolution was changed to read 500 copies and was passed by unanimous vote.

The letter of Mr. Arnold follows:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

Gentlemen:—

The Bureau of Municipal Research of New York recently made a survey of several departments of the city government and submitted to the Plainfield Tax Payers' Association a report of its findings. This report has been ordered printed by your honorable body for dissemination among the people of our city, and since the statements contained in the report of the surveyors are absolutely incorrect in so far as they affect the office of the City Treasurer, I desire to make some comment upon the report and to state the facts as they are, so that the people of this city who have confided in me these many years may understand that their confidence and trust has not been misplaced.

On page 9 of the surveyors' report it is stated that in Plainfield the only central accounts are maintained by the Treasurer's books, and the only place where ledger accounts are maintained for all branches of the government is in the Treasurer's office, therefore the city's accounting system is defective. I deny this statement. The accounting system is not defective unless the Bureau of Municipal Research would recommend the employment of two or three men to do what I am now doing alone.

Again, on page 11, the surveyors state, "Notwithstanding the fact that the City Treasurer of Plainfield receives money from individuals and from several different city officers almost daily, and pays out money daily in an amount which in a year approximates three-fourths of a million dollars, there is no independent auditing control whatever over his transactions, and the only audit is that which is made after the close of the year's business."

The foregoing statement is absolutely incorrect. The Treasurer does not pay out any money unless the bill is audited by the City Auditor, signed by the Mayor, President of the Common Council, and approved by a Councilmanic committee.

The surveyors' statement would give the impression that the City Treasurer conducts his office as he pleases and that the people's money is not safeguarded by the ordinary precautions employed in the collection and distribution of public funds. To permit an impression of this kind to go before the people reflects no credit upon those responsible for its presentation and I should be neg-

T. A. B. S. TO GIVE MINSTREL SHOW

Catholic Society Discuss Plans for Second Annual Affair This Winter.

DANCE ON SEPT. 15

Bowling Season to Be Inaugurated Soon and a Team Will Be Entered in the City League—Membership Campaign.

At a meeting held in the Total Abstinence Benevolence Society's Hall on West Fourth street last evening, plans for the fall and winter activities were formulated. Much is to be accomplished this year and various committees have been appointed to carry out the work.

A campaign for new members will be conducted this fall, the idea having originated with the Father Mathew T. A. B. Society of Elizabeth. It is proposed to secure, at least, a membership of five hundred before 1917, when the local organization will be forty-five years old. James Scott is chairman of the campaign committee and has already held several meetings.

At the meeting last evening, invitations for a dance to be held on September 15 were issued. This dance and social will be the first of a series and several hundred invitations have been issued. In addition to formulating plans for dances and socials, those who met last evening also discussed plans for the second annual minstrel show to be given by the society in the latter part of November. L. F. Barrett, who so successfully coached the cast last year, will again be in charge and will conduct tryouts next week. Under Mr. Barrett's able direction an unusually successful show was conducted last year. Three full performances were given and the individual work of several of the principals drew forth much favorable comment. The show this year will be conducted on a much more elaborate scale and assistance will be rendered by the Social Club, a band of young women who assist in the society's activities.

The bowling season will be inaugurated at the clubhouse the latter part of this month. The alleys have been renovated and the pinners have been practicing. It is proposed to enter a team in the City Bowling League if such an organization is formed.

THOMAS HARVEY HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

Charged With Stealing Leather From Frederick Harrington's Factory.

Thomas Harvey, of 110 Madison avenue, was held in $200 bail this morning by City Judge DeMeza to await the action of the Grand Jury upon the complaint of Frederick Harrington, of Central avenue. The latter charged Harvey with stealing $70 worth of sole leather from him, and after hearing the evidence of the complainant, the attorney for Harvey waived examination for a Grand Jury investigation.

According to Mr. Harrington and several other witnesses Harvey has been taking leather from time to time. He is employed by Harry Smith, of Dunellen, who does carting for Mr. Harrington, and hauls express and freight from the railroad to the leather factory on Jefferson avenue. The cases were all right when they left the station, it is said, but later the leather would check up wrong at the factory and Mr. Smith and several of his men testified to finding pieces of leather in the moving van driven by Harvey.

One witness testified that when he was helping to move the household effects of Harvey from this city to Staten Island a short time ago he handled a tub of leather and when he remarked about it when they arrived at Staten Island he was discharged by Harvey.

Harvey was in the city court several weeks ago in connection with a stabbing affray, but was released for lack of evidence.

CITY HALL WILL COST $149,000

Only a Few Hundred Dollars Will Be Left for Furnishings.

BIDS ARE RECEIVED

P. F. Kenny Co., of New York, Low Bidders on General Contract—Galbraith is Lowest on Plumbing—Awards to Be Made Later.

At the lowest possible figure the actual construction of Plainfield's new city hall, including the price of the site, will cost $149,000, leaving less than $1,000 of the bond issue of $150,000 to pay for furniture and other equipment.

Bids for the general contract, the plumbing, the heating and the electrical work were received by members of the Common Council at the meeting of last night. If contracts are awarded to the lowest bidders in each competition the total will be $110,694. As more than $30,000 has already been paid out in buying a lot, and architect's fees must yet be provided out of the fund, the total expenditure necessary will be within a few hundred dollars of the appropriation. The lowest bidders on all work follow:

General contract, P. F. Kenny Company, New York, $102,000.

Plumbing, Den. Galbraith, Plainfield, $3,165.

Heating, Miller & Brady, New York, $4,079.

Electrical work, Manhattan Engineering Company, New York, $1,446.

All bids were referred to the City Hall Building Committee, of which Councilman Hylan is chairman, and will be carefully gone over and the character of the competing firms looked into. If no objection arises the work will be awarded to the lowest bidder in each case. This is provided by law and the only way it could be avoided would be for the Council to reject all bids and advertise anew after changes had been made in the specifications.

Messrs. Peck and Bottomley, architects, were present at the Council meeting of last night and they did not seem surprised at the figures. There was much rivalry for the contracts and the Council chamber was filled with contractors when President Blatz called the meeting to order.

It is not likely that recommedation will be made within the next two weeks as Mayor Calkins does not expect to return within that time and the City Hall Committee will probably postpone definite action on the bids until it can meet with him.

The bids follow:

General contract, James McArthur Company, $120,868; Norman Kerr Company, $104,800; John T. Brady Company, $109,511; W. H. Fissell & Company, $117,900; P. F. Kenny Company, $102,000; Charles E. Preston, $132,000; John Laurie, Jr., $110,856; Bradley & Weed, $113,000. All of the low bidders agreed to finish the structure within 300 working days from the signing of the contract.

Electric work, Rider & Graves, $1,635; Allen B. Laing, $1,525; Manhattan Engineering Company, $1,446; Miller & Brady, $1,749.

Heating, George J. Tobin, $4,779; Miller & Brady, $4,079; Den. Galbraith, $4,368.

Plumbing, Den. Galbraith, $3,165; P. F. Kenny Company, $3,997; Geo. J. Tobin, $3,339.

LAST DAY TO FILE PRIMARY PETITIONS

Many Had Not Complied With the Law at 2 O'clock This Afternoon.

Although this is the last day on which candidates whose names are to appear in the Republican primaries may file their petitions not all those who have announced for office have fulfilled the legal requirements. At 2 o'clock this afternoon City Clerk Carroll had only four petitions for councilmen. There are seven candidates in the field.

Mr. Carroll announced that he would be in his office at the City Hall until 10 o'clock tonight and petitions may be filed up to that time. The law simply states that this is the last day, and therefore the time will not expire until midnight, but Mr. Carroll will hardly sit up until then waiting for petitions that could have been filed days ago.

The petition of Leighton Calkins is the only one filed for Mayor. That of James F. Buckle is the only one in for freeholder and of William G. De Meza for city judge.

Both of the First ward councilmanic candidates have their petitions in. They are A. D. Edgar and Fred S. Cutter.

The petition of Charles E. Loizeaux is the only one in from the Second ward. Councilman Christie P. Hamilton will run and will probably file his petition today.

No petitions have been received from the Third ward. Councilman Robert H. Cox is not asking re-election. Mr. Cox is now on the border with Troop D. G. Herbert Condict is announced as a candidate from this ward and his petition is expected this afternoon.

The petition of Francis J. Blatz is the only one in from the Fourth ward. Chauncey L. Hight will oppose Mr. Blatz, it is said. His friends announced yesterday morning that his petition would be filed today.

But few of the candidates for city and county committeemen either Republican or Democratic have filed petitions. The only ones received are W. L. Hetfield, Jr., for city and county committee for the First ward, John Gjettlesen for constable from the First ward, Frank Smith for county committee from the Third ward, William Newcorn for city and county committee from the Fourth ward, and John Bowman for city and county committee from the Fourth ward.

But three Democrats have filed petitions. The are L. J. Ellis for county committee from First district of Second ward, James E. Prindle for city committee from First district of Second ward, and William F. Taliaferro for county committee from First district of Third ward.

STELLE WINS PRIZE IN LOIZEAUX CO. CONTEST

Percy M. Stelle, of 963 Union street, was the winner in the Loizeaux Lumber Company Labor Day float contest. Mr. Stelle guessed nearest the value of the load of lumber in the parade. He gets $10 in gold. D. L. Harlick, of 114 Grove street, wins second prize, which is $5 in gold. The awards were made this morning. J. A. Gaffney, of the Courier-News and C. F. Colthar, of the Plainfield Daily Press, were judges. The lumber was worth $486.60. Stelle's guess was $486 and that of Mr. Harlick $485.96. There were sixty-five entered in the contest and the figures ranged all the way from $100 to $11,000. Five letters arrived after 4 p. m. yesterday and were not considered.

VISITING FROM GEORGIA.

COTTAGE PRAYER MEETING.

There will be a cottage prayer meeting held tomorrow afternoon at 2:45 at the Industrial Home on West Front street.

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town. INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). 'PULLING STAKES' FOR DEPARTURE

Soldier Homesickness Pervades Douglas Camp Upon Return of 1st and 4th.

GIFTS ARE DISTRIBUTED

Guardsmen Were Just Settling Down to Hard Work and Many Regret Return Order — Negro Cooks Cannot Serve With Outfit.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 2.—What bears all the earmarks of soldier-homesickness has swooped down upon the Jeresy camp here, following the sudden announcement directing the return of the First and Fourth regiments to Jersey. Prior to the issuance of the order the 6,000 men in the big desert camp had become resigned to their fate and had decided that to make the best of it was the best policy. "Pulling stakes" in the affected reigments has cast a noticeable gloom over the Fifth regiment, three batteries of artillery and a squadron of cavalry and much speculation is going the rounds concerning the possibility of a speedy return for all.

On the other hand, the official personnel of the camp is not backward in saying what it thinks of the return order coming at a time when the militiamen were getting down to hard work and giving evidence of disappearing rough edges. Drills, range work and army routine had just been introduced in all their branches and a noticeable improvement was being shown on all hands. While there are some who believe that the First and Fourth will be sent back and that the rest of the men will be held here pending their return the majority think differently and those departing expect to see no more of Douglas. The two months' stay here has been devoted largely to acclimation and hardening work and the troops are now in a condition to tackle the hardest kind of work that might be dealt out to them. At no time could so much good be accomplished as at the present. The commanding officers last week expressed their approval and commendation on all hands regarding the condition of the guardsmen and were complimenting themselves on having gotten their charges into a teachable shape.

The pangs of homesickness have been made all the more keen by a general distribution by the parting soldiers of little gifts to those left behind. Particularly noticeable today was the handing over of a number of useful articles sent here last week by Newark Lodge, No. 21, B. P. O. E. to Elk soldiers. Many of those who received the gfist are packing up to go home, and are leaving them behind for the less fortunate campers. The following combination of articles was received by every guardsman who claims membership in the Elks' order: Tooth brush, towels, wash cloths, talcum powder, ivory soap and toilet soap, safety pins, pen and ink and writing paper, envelopes, sun glasses, knife, cigars and cigarettes.

Company A, of the Fifth infantry, haling from Passaic, claims to have the champion baseball outfit of Douglas and Manager Van Riper has issued a challenge to all other soldier outfits. The team personnel follows: Babbles, first base; Field, pitcher; McCann, catcher; Super, second base; Henry, third base; Reno, shortstop, Guistence, left field; Shirak, right field; Detrick, center field. The team is one of the few uniformed ones herabouts and promises to lend a little "pep" to the future camp life here.

An order has been sent out by the War Department for the dismissal of all negro cooks, it being pointed out that no negro may serve with a white outfit. This came as a blow to several of the units and pleas from captains resulted in a month's grace being granted. Several companies have detailed men to a month's service in the regular army at Camp Harry Jones, Douglas, and they are now learning the rudiments of the kitchen art.

Bugler Stephen H. Tanger, of Company A, Fifth Infantry, has been appointed regimental bugler and has already assumed charge of his new duties. His place as company bugler has been taken by Private Arthur Field.

The organization of a machine gun corps for the New Jersey brigade has been practically abandoned for the time being owing to the departure of the two regiments, units from which a majority of the men would be detailed. Sergeant Geary, of Newark, connected with Company G, First regiment, had been appointed first lieutenant of the corps but his leave-taking will leave this vacancy should the officers later organize the corps from the men left here. It is understood that three machine guns are on the way here and that preparations had been made for complete organization.

L. H. Bahler, of the First New Jersey cavalry squadron, has taken an apartment at Hotel Gadsden, Douglas, in order to recuperate after a slight illness. Plans are under way for an army motor truck trip of 599 miles to test out the value of the motor trucks in the transportation of soldiers in the field. It will be under the direction of Colonel Glenn, of the Eighteenth infantry, one of the first

CANDIDATES FOR ASSEMBLY NAMED

Prohibitionists of Union County to Place Full Ticket in the Field.

PLATFORM IS ADOPTED

Greater Economy and Efficiency in Administration of County and State Government Among the Planks Favored.

Prohibitionists of Union county in convention at Carteret Arms, Elizabeth, last night named three candidates for the Assembly, one for coroner for the unexpired term, and one for coroner for a full term, adopted a platform that contained many planks outside of those relating to Prohibition and listened to a Prohibition address by Professor Livingston Barbour, of Rutgers College, who is the Republican candidate for the United States Senate. There were a number of Prohibition songs led by C. W. B. Fisher, of Elizabeth.

The candidates named were as follows: For the Assembly, W. A. J. Reeve, of Summit; Eugene A. Smith, of Union; Rolland B. Moore, of Elizabeth. Coroner for unexpired term, Peter N. Dalley, of Elizabeth. Coroner for full term, Parker D. King, of Summit.

Besides the planks favoring Prohibition, the platform adopted by the county Prohibitionists called for greater ecenomy and efficiency in the administration of county and State government, the enactment of a law similar to the Torrens law, by which the State will guarantee land titles, a constructive peace policy, but at the same time adequate protection to the country, a stronger policy in Mexico, but without a violation of the sovereignity of that country or a war conquest against it, settlement of disputes between capital and labor by arbitration, the abolition of child labor, and a number of other economic and social justice conditions.

The work which is being done in the present campaign in Union county was explained, and it was stated that conditions seem brighter for the Prohibition party than ever before.

Professor Barbour, in his address, stated that the liquor problem would never be settled by moral suasion or by regulation, but must come about by national Prohibition party, administered by those in favor of such a law. He showed how Russia, considered one of the most backward nations, was given Prohibition, and the good results that have followed. He stated that the death throttle is already in the throat of the liquor demon and that Prohibition will soon be an accomplished fact in the United States.

MISS A. L. BRAY BRIDE OF MICHAEL GRIFFIN

Rev. Joseph G. MacDonald Performs Ceremony at St. Mary's Church.

The marriage of Miss Anna Louise Bray, daughter of Mrs. Mary Bray, of Plainfield avenue, and Michael L. Griffin, was quietly solmenized in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph S. MacDonald, assistant pastor of the church, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the couple. The bride wore a traveling gown of blue satin and hat to match and carried a bouquet of brideal roses.

The couple was attended by Miss Mary Bray and Walter Brick, of this city. Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Griffin left on a honeymoon trip to be spent in the Middle West. On their return they will reside in their newly furnished home on West Fourth street.

Both Mr. Griffin and his bride are well known to a large circle of friends here and are especially popular among the younger set in the west end of the city. Mr. Griffin is connected with the New Jersey Central Railroad and is a prominent member of Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus.

The report of Borough Tresurer Isaac J. Stites for the month showed a balance of $37.39, against one of $854.44 last month. To meet current bills the Mayor and clerk were authorized to issue a note for $3,150. The issuance of a note for $1,259 was also authorized to make final payment on the Front street drain.

Bennet E. Siegelstein, counselor at law, in a communication called the attention of the Council to the fact that the uncompleted and boarded-up state of the sewer on Sandford avenue in the Equator tract was working an injury to his client, the National Land & Improvement Company, and he expressed the hope that the Council would take some action on the matter at once.

H. K. Corbin & Co., through a communication called the attention of the Council to the fact that it cannot improve the south side of North avenue on account of the close proximity of the gas main to the sewer pipes until the gas has been shut off. The opinon advanced through a communication by Borough Attorney von Minden was that no gas company or any other corporation can prevent the resurfacing of any street and he advised that the contractor notify the gas company that he was going to proceed with the making of improvements on the the street.

J. Alfred Wilson, Charles Fedderman and J. R. Van Blarcom and other property holders on Washington avenue (south) were present to complain against dirt being carted away from the street. Mr. Wilson in particular, called attention to the fact that it was being taken from the gutter, when, if any earth was taken away at all, it should be from the top of the road. He stated that so much earth had been taken away from his gutter that his curb has been placed in jeopardy. Street Commissioner Paul Reusch stated that the work was being done under his direction and he was sure that when it was completed that property holders along the street would be pleased with the grade of the avenue. J. Alfred Wilson here wanted to know where the grade stakes were, stating that he had never seen any. Engineer Churchill in speaking for the borough said that there was no spot along the avenue from which earth had been taken which was lower than the sub-grade of the street or the surface upon which macadam or paving would be placed when the street is paved.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS UNKNOWN HORSE THIEF

Accused Stranger Maintains Stolid Silence When Held for Grand Jury.

Admitting that Charles Hale is not his right name and refusing to tell anything about himself, other than that he was born in Connecticut, a man about 45 years of age was arraigned before Judge De Meza in city court this morning charged with stealing a horse and wagon belonging to Dennis Gavin, of Columbia avenue, last night, and he was held in $600 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The mystery surrounding the identity of the stranger and his refusal to say anything about himself has aroused the suspicion of the police, and efforts are being made today to fathom the silence he is surrounding himself with.

Galvin left his horse and wagon standing on East Second street last night near Park avenue, while he made a social call, but when he returned about 10:0 o'clock he found them missing and a general alarm was sent out that resulted in the suspect being caught at Bound Brook. Sergeant Charles Flynn went to that place and got "Hale" this morning and he was arraigned in court.

When questioned by the Judge the prisoner said he was employed as a teamster, but refused to say where. He came to this city yesterday from Newark, and says he is unmarried. He is not robust nor strong and this morning could hardly control himself and was several times on the point of breaking down.

THE FORUM

"SUFF" CONVENTION THOUGHTS.

For so many discouraging years Equal Suffrage has seemed to be a local or a State issue, claiming, in the greater part of the country, the interest of the minority. There were the ardent advocates, the earnest opponents and, far greater in number than the sum of these, the mass of the indifferent.

Now, quite suddenly it seems, a change came in the situation. Is it in answer to the voice of the awakened multitude that all five of the party platforms of 1916 contain an Equal Suffrage plank? Have the political leaders of the land developed a greater sense of justice?

Or what are the subtle causes which have produced the following—

The Democratic Party:

We recommend the extension of the franchise to the women of this country, State by State, on the same term as to the men.

The Republican Party.

The Republican party, reaffirming its faith in government of the people, for the people, as a measure of justice to one-half the adult people of this country, favors the extension of the suffrage to women, but recognizes the right of each State to settle this question for itself.

The Progressive Party.

And we believe that the women of the country, who share with the men the burdens of government in times of peace and make equal sacrifice in time of war, should be given the full political rights of suffrage, both by State and Federal action.

The Socialist Party.

We advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to—

Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women;

The immediate adoption of the so-called "Susan B. Anthony amendment" to the Constitution of the United States, granting the suffrage to women on equal terms with men.

The Prohibition Party.

The right of citizens of the United States to vote should not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. We declare in favor of the enfranchisement of women by amendment to State and Federal constitution. We condemn the Republican and Democratic parties for their failure to submit an equal suffrage amendment to the national constitution. We remind the four million women voters that our party was the first to declare for their political rights, which it did in 1872.

And the candidates of these parties do not lag behind their platforms.

Obviously Equal Suffrage has become a national issue, and the eyes of the politicians of the different parties are turned to Atlantic City, where the A. N. W. S. A. is holding its national convention, for the policy decided upon, as a result of the three-cornered debate held this afternoon will be a tremendous factor in the coming election.

SENATE MAY NOT ADJOURN THIS WEEK

Washington, Sept. 6.—An unexpected hitch in adjournment plans arose today when the Senate by a vote of 32 to 14 adopted Senator Owens' motion to take up the Corrupt Practices Bill, limiting Presidential and Congressional campaign expenses. There is certain to be a vigorous fight on the measure.

WESCOTT WILL NOT BE HERE FOR SPEECH TONIGHT

If any Plainfielders were looking forward to the announced coming of General Wescott tonight, they are doomed to disappointment. Some time ago Sept. 6 was fixed as the date on which the opponent to Senator Martine would speak in Plainfield, but today a Press reporter learned that the engagement was cancelled weeks ago. No word of the change in dates was given out here. A Wescott supporter said he read of it in an Elizabeth paper. He said General Wescott would come to Plainfield later.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Under the caption, "Journalistic Gardeners—Their Troubles Grow As Fast As Do the Weeds In Good Old Jersey," the Editor and Publisher has the following to say in its current issue concerning some well-known Plainfielders:

"In these days of infantile paralysis, street-car strikes, Black Tom explosions, and other things, one can occasionally observe along Park Row, Broadway, and the other lanes and alleys of Manhattan a New Yorker now and then wishing out loud he was a Jersey commuter. But, as it is true that all is not gold that glitters, so also is it truth that Jersey is not all that 'she seems.' Nope. This is Gospel.

"For instance, take Plainfield. Lots of newspaper people like Solomon S. Carvalho, of the Hearst enterprises; Henry E. Bowen, of the Herald; 'Dick' Parkhurst, of the Evening Telegram; George T. Hughes, city editor of the Globe; Alfred Zimmerman, of the World; Charles A. Selden, of the Times, and many others, can be seen hitting the Liberty Street pavements nights bound for 'Purest Plainfield,' where one can have quiet, and refreshment, and joy, and, and, and—and gardens. But having a garden is one thing and having a gardener is quite another. If you don't believe it ask any of the above gentlemen or just stop in the Woolworth Building and shoot up to the 46th floor and ask the Brooklyn Standard Union man, genial R. F. R. Huntsman. Huntsman knows advertising from all angles, and it was on Plainfield's first daily that he learned how to write copy like this:

"'WANTED—A gardener, one unafraid of weeds preferred; any full-grown man who can rasp the whiskers off the lawn is eligible; one who would rather tickle the gravel walk with a rake than tear the liver lights out of the weeds in the succotash patch will please stay away; brains not considered a detriment; emolument $2.00 and upward per day, according to disposition. R. F. R. Huntsman, 826 East Front Street.'

"It was quite natural then that when he ran afoul of a lot of weeds in that Plainfield potato patch of his that he took to advertising in the Plainfield newspapers, his Alma Mater, in order to get relief. Oh yes, Jersey is a great place, a fine State, but in old New York we should worry about the gardeners."

FIRST WARD REPUBLICANS

At a meeting of the First Ward Republican Club held in the office of President Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., last night, plans for the coming campaign were discussed and the workers enthusiastically entered into the work outlined for them.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature at the State Trust Company today was 72 at 9 a. m., 80 at 11 a. m., and 82 at 1 p. m.

Instinct and Reason.

"Instinct" is the generic term for all those faculties of mind that lead to the performance of actions that are adoptive in character, but pursued without necessary knowledge of the relation of the means employed and the ends attained. "Reason" is usually applied to such acts as are consciously performed with some particular end in view. Of the two, instinct would seem to be the more perfect, since it seldom goes wrong, whereas the missteps of reason are innumerable.—New York American.

STEPS ARE TAKEN TO END RECEIVERSHIP

Reports Show Steamship Corporation to Be in Prosperous Condition.

As a step toward the ultimate discharge of the receivership of the International Mercantile Marine Company, of which Horace G. Phillips, of this city, is treasurer, and Emerson E. Parvin, also of Plainfield, is secretary, an order was obtained yesterday from Vice Chancellor Howell through R. V. Lindabury and F. S. Katzenbach, Jr., permitting the directors and stockholders to take action on a reorganization scheme devised by committees repreesnting bondholders and preferred and common stockholders, respectively.

A petition filed by counsel for the company recited that by reason of the increase in freight and freight rates the company's business and profits have increased to such an extent that it is now able to pay or provide for all its debts, resume its business and conduct it "with safety to the public and advantage to its stockholders."

Mr. Katzenbach told later that the company has $70,000,000 in its treasury. Philip A. S. Franklin is the receiver.

R. NORRIS WILLIAMS IS THE NATIONAL CHAMPION

R. Norris Williams, 2d, of Philadelphia, who was the champion two years ago, regained the title that he abdicated when he defeated William M. Johnston, of San Francisco, in the final match of the thirty-sixth annual lawn tennis tournament for the singles title yesterday on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills. There probably has been no better exhibition of the racquet game than was seen when the best of the East pitted his strokes against the leader of the Western game.

As a fitting climax to the tournament the two players went the full limit of five sets, and the crowd of nearly eight thousand was held spellbound until Williams had made the last smashing stroke which crowned him champion for the season and gave him his second victory for the blue ribbon of the tennis world since he has been playing in national competition.

HOWARD VAN CLEEF.

Howard Van Cleef, son of the late John V. H. Van Cleef, died suddenly yesterday of heart disease at his home in New Brunswick. Mr. Van Cleef was a member of one of New Brunswick's oldest families and was connected with the Provident Life and Trust Company. He leaves a widow and two children.

PLAN ELECTRICAL CELEBRATION HERE

Part of National Movement to Be Observed From December 2-9.

Plainfield is to have a great city-wide electrical celebration this fall as part of a national movement, backed by many of the industrial leaders of this country, to electrify America. From December 2 to 9, inclusive, every city of more than 10,000 population in the United States will demonstrate in many striking ways the business progress it has made in the last five years. Definite steps were taken in New York during the past week, when 1,650 leading business men of America accepted appointments to a national directing committee.

Gerard Swope, vice-president of the Western Electric Company is at the head of the executive committee. The campaign will be directed by the Society for Electrical Development, of which J. M. Wakeman is general manager. The event will be known ac American Electrical Week, and will be featured simultaneously everywhere by parades and pageantry special illuminations, electrical shows and demonstrations of what electricity has done in peace and in war in the last few days.

William R. Causbrook, of this city, is the local chairman, in charge of the event and will call a meeting of the city committee at an early date to adopt a complete program for the fall celebration.

The Clear Infinity.

That which we foolishly call vastness is, rightly considered, not more wonderful, not more impressive, than that which we insolently call littleness, and the infinity of God is not mysterious, it is only unfathomable; not concealed, but incomprehensible; it is a clear infinity, the darkness of the pure, unsearchable sea.—Ruskin's "Modern Painters."

A BEAR AND A CROW.

"If you wish some of your favorite blackberry pies, Bobby, you must go to the field and gather berries," said Mrs. Bear one morning.

A little later Bobby Bear left home, a new tin pail over his arm and his mother's old pink sunbonnet on his head. He looked cautiously about to see if any one he knew was watching.

"Don't you dare take off that bonnet, Bobby," warned his mother. "The day is very hot, and you might get a sunstroke. If that naughty Jimmy Crow laughs or says anything to you, just don't pay any attention to him."

Now, although Mrs. Bear did not know it, Jimmy Crow was perched out of sight on a nearby tree, and he heard every word she said.

Before long Bobby was hard at work among the blackberry bushes.

Unknown to Bobby, Jimmy Crow had followed him, and his sharp eyes spied something that Bobby would have missed, even had he not been hampered by the sunbonnet. Just ahead of the little bear boy lay a snake, small but poisonous, which had been disturbed by Bobby's presence, and was in a very nasty temper. Its tail switched angrily, and the darting fangs were ready to strike at the first chance.

"Look out, Bobby! Look out!" cried Jimmy; but, mindful of his mother's words, Bobby paid no attention. "He's only trying to tease me," thought Bobby, and he advanced a step further. Then he heard a rustle among the dry leaves and the hiss of the snake. The little bear boy dropped his pail and started to run, but the brambles caught his thick fur and held him prisoner. He screamed in fright and struggled frantically to tear himself loose, but the thorns only gripped him the tighter.

The snake was almost upon him when something flashed from above like a streak of lightning, disappeared among the leaves, and next moment emerged in triumph. It was brave Jimmy Crow, grasping the snake firmly back of the neck, close to the head, so that it was powerless to strike. Jimmy flew to the brook and dropped the enemy into the deepest pool, then hurried back to help Bobby.

It was some time before the little bear boy was untangled, and it took still longer to fill the upturned pail. Then the pair started happily for Bobby's home.

When Mrs. Bear heard the story of her boy's danger and rescue she forgot all about the scolding that was waiting for Jimmy Crow. Instead, she insisted that he stay for supper, and when Jimmy finally said, "Good night," he carried home with him a beautiful blackberry pie all his own.

Why Dogs Turn Around.

The habit of dogs turning around several times before lying down is said to be one of the wild traits of this animal's prehistoric ancestors, who did so to make a bed in the grasses and leaves. Foxes and wolves have the same habit when lying down in the open where there is no grass.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS.

Plainfield People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Disordered kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions may be dark, contain sediment.

Passages are sometimes frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is often present day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells may occur.

Weakened kidneys should receive quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Plainfield evidence proves their worth.

John B. Winans, 324 West Second street, Plainfield, says: "Being exposed to all kinds of rough weather, my kidneys became disordered. I felt a constant, dull ache in the small of my back. When I stooped or tried to lift anything the least bit heavy I got sharp pains across my kidneys. I got no relief from medicines until I took Doan's Kidney Pills. I am pleased to say that short use made a permanent cure."

JERSEY GUARDSMEN PARTICIPATE IN ANNUAL LABOR DAY FRONTIER EXHIBITION AT DOUGLAS

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 5.—Those Jerseyites who spent Labor Day wondering what loved ones were doing in "wild and woolly" Arizona probably never suspected that a majority of the Jersey guardsmen had the best Labor Day of their lives. This is the first time that a full day's program of interesting events has been put on since the militiamen pitched their tents here and the officers entered into the spirit of the occasion by granting plenty of holiday liberties.

The big event of the year for Douglas, and, in fact, the whole State of Arizona, is the annual Labor Day frontier exhibition and several hundred New Jersey guardsmen occupied seats in the grandstand of the local ball park yesterday as the guests of the committee in charge. Bud Robbins, of Sonora, and Jack DeGraftnreid, of New Mexico, a pair of the best know cowboys in the west, staged the exhibition and twenty wild west horses were ridden by twenty wild and reckless cowboys. There was broncho busting, steer roping, bull dogging steers from horses and automobiles, the riding of four mules bareback and other daring stunts to interest the appreciative audience, a large part of which was togged out in olive drab. Cowboys from Arizona, New Mexico and Sonora took part and music was furnished by a military band. Many of the regular soldiers stationed at Camp Harry Jones also viewed the wild west show and all were taught a thing or two about horses which they never knew or even suspected before.

The Douglas Elks' Club held "open house" all day and many of the "Bills" from New Jersey spent the afternoon and evening at that place. Various Newark, Paterson, Passaic, Plainfield and Elizabeth guardsmen interested in the Knights of Columbus have started a movement for the establishment of a council here in the near future and Supreme Warden Thomas McLaughlin, of Newark, will probably be present as one of the invited guests. He has two nephews in the cavalry here and visited them recently. Various informal meetings to discuss this subject have been held during the past two weeks and the soldier Knights got together again yesterday.

One of the foremost gathering places for the uniformed men since their arrival in Douglas has been the finely appointed and equipped Y. M. C. A. building. At any time of the day of revening big delegations of militiamen may be seen resting in the parlors or reading rooms of this institution or enjoying the hot and cold shower baths at the courtesy of the board of directors. Yesterday was no exception and last evening the throng was especially large in the association building.

Many of the men spent the afternoon in the municipal swimming pool, this place being crowded throughout the day and evening. Next to the good old Atlantic Coast this was the best possible way to get a bath and swim, the soldiers claimed.

Moving picture houses and no less than a half dozen of them have sprung up in Douglas since the boys of Uncle Sam's fighting force arrived, put on special attractions and lines of militiamen nearly a block long were in evidence where feature programs were advertised.

It was the busiest Labor Day Douglas has ever experienced, and few of the merchants gave their employes a holiday. The merchants and soda fountains did a tremendous business and in the evening a number of dinner parties were held at the Gadsden Hotel, officers and enlisted men being present.

TOMMY MULLIN IN "LEE MAGEE" STUNT

Hachet, of Royal Giants, Victim of Clever Work on Mullin's Part.

In the game between the Royal Giants and the Tabs, a ground ball was hit to Hatchet. Tommy Mullin was on second at the time and Hatchet, who was playing short, believed that he had an easy job ahead of him. But Mullin, in going from second to third, so timed his dash that he passed Hatchet just as the ball approached. Tommy hesitated an instant and Hatchet fumbled. A few fans were of the opinion that the trick should not have been played. Several others thought that it was not sportsmanlike. But they do it in the big leagues.

Lee Magee executed a play of the nature of the one pulled by Tommy Mullin. It happened in this way and was the means of earning the Yankees a victory. Lee stole second and passed to third just as Packinpaugh's grounder came dashing along. Magee hesitated, and McNally fumbled. No one questioned the play, which was fair in every way.

BASEBALL DECLINE FELT ELSEWHERE

Fans Do Not Believe Game is On Wane in This City.

A gentleman, prominent in the baseball world, says that baseball is on the wane in all towns the size of Plainfield. He points out that in Perth Amboy the national pastime is no longer profitable and that New Brunswick is beginning to feel the effects of the setback. The statement is made that Dave Driscoll made a success of the baseball in this city and in New Brunswick, but that he met with poor response in one or two other cities. Another prominent baseball fan took exception to the statement that baseball is on the wane in this city and pointed out that the large crowd attending the Tab-Royal Giant match on Sunday but proves his contention.

At the contest on Sunday there were fully fifteen hundred fans. Thirteen trolley cars were required to convey these fans to and from the grounds. A large crowd of fans attended the games in Dunellen and it is expected that a large assembly will be present when the coming Sunday series between the Tabs and the Apgarites is begun. In the face of these facts, it is difficult to believe that baseball is going back in this vicinity.

The Three Friends.

Answering the question, "Who were the three friends' mentioned by Whitman in his poem, 'Tent on the Beach,' written about 1887, the Philadelphia Press says:

"The lettered magnate lording o'er an ever wilending realm of books' is certainly James T. Fields, the poet publisher and critic; the 'dream born philosopher is supposed to be Ralph Waldo Emerson and by some Whittier himself, and 'one whose Arab face was tanned by tropic suns and boreal frost is Bayard Taylor."

ITALIAN CHARGED WITH "WIFE" DESERTION

Fifteen Year Old Girl Thought to Be Victim of "Fake" Marriage.

After a preliminary hearing before City Judge William G. DeMeza today, an Italian who gave his name as Frank Jeturmegelo, but who is said to be Peter Angelo, was held for the Somerset county authorities by the local police and will be arraigned at Somerville on a charge that is expected to be wife desertion. The complaint against him is lodged by Barbara Yamneone, a fifteen year old Italian girl, of Bound Brook, who tells a rather incoherent story of his supposed marriage to her and consequent desertion.

According to the girl's story in court this morning she was persuaded by the Italian to go to White Plains, N. Y., last April to get married, but from the story she tells it seems to have been a "fake" ceremony, and will be investigated by the Somerset county authorities. Believing she was married, the girl said she lived with the man she knew as Angelo for several months, when he left her saying they were not really married.

Angelo professed this morning not to understand English and would say nothing. He will probably be taken to Somerville today.

APPLAUD ADDRESSES FAVORING COLGATE

A. E. Warner and W. S. Killenbeck Speak at Garwood for Gubernatorial Candidate.

Two enthusiastic audiences at Garwood factories applauded addresses in favor of Colonel Austen Colgate, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, at noonday meetings yesterday. Arthur E. Warner, of Elizabeth, spoke at the Hall Signal Company. He said that Colonel Colgate was first of all a patriot, standing for preparedness, for progress and stability. He gave an outline of Colonel Colgate's record in the Senate, and said that the Essex county man was the strongest Republican in the field.

"The Democrats have taken their candidate from Hudson county," said the speaker, "and in order to offset this we must have a man who can draw the Democratic votes in that bulwark, Colonel Colgate is the man that can do this. If you want to pile up a big vote for the Republican party, and aid Hughes and Fairbanks, vote for Colonel Colgate."

Wilson S. Killenbeck, of Orange, spoke at the Aeolian plant before more than 300 workmen. He spoke of Colonel Colgate's friendship for labor and of the many ways in which he had aided the passage of legislation for the benefit of the workingmen.

BUY IT IN PLAINFIELD

If YOU spend your money AT HOME with HOME MERCHANTS you get a second chance at that same old dollar; when that dollar goes out of town, it's—"Good-bye Mary."

A dollar is no "carrier pigeon." Send it away and it will never come back. Keep Plainfield made money in Plainfield.

Consider the power of a dollar when it is spent at home. It is like magic. It circulates—it pays off a hundred obligations—it creates business and puts people to work in this community. But the dollar sent away to an out-of-town house does nothing for Plainfield—it is dead to us—out of commission forever as far as we are concerned.

There are only two kinds of dollars—the "Dollar With Wings" and the "Development Dollar."

The "Dollar with Wings" flies away with a value that rightfully belongs to the home community. If spent with a Plainfield Merchant its value would stay with you and help to build up your interests.

The "Development Dollar" goes to build up Plainfield. It stays right here in our own community—it puts people to work here—builds roads and schools and churches and homes.

No matter what your position in life may be, some of its benefits "filter" down to you. "Letting George do it" is poor logic. We want YOU to cultivate the "Try Plainfield First" habit.

ARNOLD ANSWERS REPORT

ligent in doing my duty to those who have long reposed confidence in me did I not protest against the dissemination of such misinformation as the surveyors' report contains.

Statement is Misleading.

The statement as to the receipts is also misleading. The reecipts which are turned over to me come from the Street Commissioner, Tax Collector, City Clerk, Mayor, City Judge and District Court, and the amounts so received can be easily traced.

On page 12 of the surveyors' report this statement appears: "Provides $400 for the care of the city dump, yet the Treasurer's report for that year shows (on page 6) an expenditure of $420." In this case the Council increased the salary of the dump keeper $20.00. The increase was approved by the Council and the bill was audited by the City Auditor, Mayor, President of the Council and the Councilmanic Committee, and presented to the Treasurer for payment. Is there any reason why it should not have been paid?

Another statement of the surveyors, on page 12 of their report, has to do with the maintenance of the District Court. They show that the sum of $2,400 was provided for that purpose, and that the Treasurer's report shows an expenditure of $2,451.26. If the person who undertook to survey the financial department of the city had been sufficiently posted on the laws of the State he would have known that the increase in District Court maintenance was occasioned by the increase in our population, and that the law provides that the salary of the Judge and Clerk of the District Court shall be automatically increased. The Corporation Counsel, Mayor, City Auditor and President of the Common Council all approved the bill, after it had been approved by the Council. Under the circumstances is there any reason why the increase of $51.26 should not have been paid by the Treasurer?

Another statement on page 12, of the surveyors' report refers to the removal of snow and ice. The report states, "$350, provided for the removal of snow and ice, yet Treasurer's report (page 5) shows an expenditure of $847.82."

Snow Fund Explained.

Atfer a fall of snow, the orders of the Mayor are that all sidewalks be cleaned within twenty-four hours or the city will undertake the work and charge the cost against the properties affected. Who can tell in advance the amount of snow that is likely to fall in a season? Why should not the bill for removing the snow be paid by the City Treasurer when properly presented to him, approved by the Mayor, City Auditor, President of the Council and Councilmanic Committee?

This statement of the surveyors is calculated to deceive. Any person who understood the method of doing business in this city would readily understand that while an amount in excess of that provided for the removal of snow was actually spent, the excess is charged against the properties benefitted by the labor of city gangs and funds returned to the Treasurer in the form of a tax assessment and all of this is shown by my report.

Another mare's nest which the surveyors have discovered is also disclosed on page 12 of their report, where this statement appears: "Provided for printing and advertising, $3,600, yet the Treasurer's report (page 5), shows an expenditure of $6,926.79, except that the expenditure is reported as for printing and stationery."

The Mayor, Council, City Auditor, President of Council and Treasurer approved this expenditure. Is there any good reason why it should not have been paid? If ordinances are passed and ordered advertised the payment must be made. The report of the survey which was not to have cost the city anything was ordered printed by the Council and $216.05 appropriated for that purpose.

Th survyors state that the method of paying claims is too cumbersome and complicated. Yet on page 11 of their report they state that the Treasurer handles upwards of three-fourths of a million dollars a year, with no independent control whatever. This statement is contradictory. If the system is cumbersome how can it be when there is no independent control?

Criticism of Report.

On page 15 of their report, the surveyors state that, "The Treasurer's report is open to criticism, particularly in view of the fact that this is the only central financial office of the city, hence his report is the only financial report available, and it is doubtful if the average citizen can obtain an understanding of the city's finaces from the published report."

"In order that there may be a clear understanding as to its defects, the Treasurer's report of 1915 is cited as an example. The report does not contain a balance sheet. One of the essential features of all financial reports of private corporations is a clear statement of what is owned and owed."

Had the surveyor asked to see the statement and trial balance of all departments he could have found it on file in the office of the City Treasurer, together with all vouchers, but it would have required more time than forty-five minutes which was the space allotted by the surveyor to interview the City Treasurer and offer a panacea for the city's financial ills. The average citizen can examine these documents at any time and will experience no difficulty in determining the amount owned and owed as well as cash on hand.

The sureyors state on page 16 of their report that "The Treasurer's report (page 3), shows expenditures for streets, $60,093.56." This is as it should be, and if the surveyor had taken the trouble to look at the "receipts" side of the ledger he would have found the amount received for streets, paid on account by the city and repaid by individuals.

On page 16 the surveyor states that "The report of the Treasurer (page 3), shows, cash balance of both the General and Contingent fund as under the General Fund." What is wrong with this?

Under Head of "Salaries."

The surveyors also state that in reading the Treasurer's report it would be assumed that the amount expended for streets includes all street expenditures, but that such is not the case, for under the "Caption Salaries appears an item of $1,800, the salary of the Street Commissioner."

I might state that the Street Commissioner is an appointed official, and that he comes under the head of "Salaried Officials," and in this regard is distinguished from a "Street Laborer."

This distinction was made by the Common Council which fixed the classification of all officials in the tentative tax budget submitted to the people for approval and many officials in the salaried list appear separate and apart from the departments over which they have charge.

The surveyor also states on page 16, "Also under the same caption of 'Salaries' is an item for 'Flagging and curbing.' Also the Treasurer's report on page 3, contains an item of $1,620.28 for removing snow from streets, and that the average reader would therefore infer that this comprised the year's cost of snow and ice on page 5 under head of 'Salaries.' Also under head of 'Salaries' is an item of $2,989.01 for street macadamizing, city share, which one would expect to find under preceding page under 'Streets.'"

Survey Hastily Made.

Had the surveyor taken the trouble to examine the Treasurer's original report, and not a copy made by some one else, he would have discovered the proper dividing line under "Salaries" ruled off and extended. The average citizen would not have to be told that the thirty-four items extended in the report did not belong under the head of "Salaries."

From the statements appearing on page 17 of the surveyors' report, it is apparent that the person who made the survey of the financial department did not know what he was about, as he did not apparently refer to the ordinances passed on the Sinking Fund bonds.

These ordinances before being passed, were approved by former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, and others, and were verified and the amount order raised to meet the bonds when due, will take care of this item. These various phases of the Treasurer's report could have been fully explained to the surveyor had he seen fit to consult the Treasurer about them. I placed myself and my office at the disposal of the surveyor, and volunteered whatever assistance he desired in gleaning a knowledge of our financial affairs.

I regret the necessity of having to make a statement of this kind, but in view of the fact that I have for several years enjoyed the confidence of a large number of citzens, by whose votes I have been repeatedly elected to the office of City Treasurer, I feel that in justice to them, as well as to myself, I sholud dispel the cloud that the surveyors would have shroud the service I have rendered.

In conclusion I ask that the members of your honorable body have this statement spread in full upon the minutes of the Council meeting of September 5. I am giving a copy of this statement to the local papers, that every citzen may be fully apprised of its contents.

Very truly yours,
WM. F. ARNOLD,
City Treasurer.

MARTINE BELIEVES CABLE WAS DELAYED

Introduces Resolution Calling for An Investigation by the State Department.

Washington D. C., Sept. 6.—Senator Martine of New Jersey submitted a resolution in the Senate yesterday calling for an investigation by the State Department into the circumstances surrounding the cabling to England of the Senate resolution, asking that the execution of Sir Roger Casement be stayed.

Speaking on his resolution, Senator Martine said: "I have stated that it was currently reported and generally believed that the resolution to stay the execution of Sir Roger Casement was delayed in transmission unil after that martyr for liberty's cause had been placed in his coffin. I demand an inquiry into the facts in order that the American people may place the blame."

Senator Martine's resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That the State Department of the United States is hereby yesterday ordered the Griffin club, the exact date and hour that the Senate resolution regarding Sir Roger Casement's sentence of death was placed in the hands of the British authorities."

PERMANENT PAVING CONTRACTS AWARDED

Council Holds Busy Session—Routine of the Meeting.

Contracts for the permanent paving of a number of Plainfield streets were awarded at last night's meeting of the Common Council and work will be started on these streets within a short time. Many bids were received for the macadamizing of the thoroughfares and contracts were awarded as follows: Charles Lentz, Rahway, Ravine road and Lake street; Hickey & Houghton, Somerville, Leland avenue, Sumner avenue, Kensington avenue, Edgewood avenue, and Stelle avenue.

A resolution was passed instructing the clerk to notify all property owners along these streets of the intent to lay permanent paving and of a resolution that the paving could not be torn up for a period of five years. They are given until January 1 in which to make all sewer or other connections.

An ordinance providing for separate sewers and drains on East Fourth street, Watchung avenue, East Front street and Washington street, was passed on its second reading and ordered advertised.

A resolution was passed giving the New York Telephone Company the right to tear up parts of Park, Watchung, East Sixth, East Seventh, Belvidere and Somerset streets in order to lay underground conduits.

A petition from property owners on Arlington avenue asking for a light was referred to the street lighting committee as was a similar one from property owners on George street.

A petition from property owners on South avenue near Central, asking that the city accept and extend East Sixth street was referred to the street committee.

The Overseer of the Poor reported expenditures of $837.14 for last month.

The Building Inspector reported thirty-one permits issued during August.

The Street Commissioner reported eight sewer permits issued during August.

The Treasurer was authorized to transfer $4,000 from the general fund to the fire fund and $500 to the poor fund.

A resolution notifying property owners who had received thirty days' notice to lay sidewalks and had not complied, that the city would do the work was passed.

An ordinance accepting the extension of Stelle avenue was passed on its first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised. Monday, October 2, was set for a public hearing on this ordinance.

Upon resolution introduced by Chairman Bird the bid of the Public Service for street lighting was accepted and the clerk was authorized to sign a five-year contract.

The Public Service Company was also instructed to install two lights on Jefferson avenue and one on the Plainfield end of the Grove street bridge.

An ordinance providing for storm sewers on Grove street, East Fifth, West Fifth, Park avenue and other streets was passed on its third reading.

The sidewalk and curb ordinance was also passed on the third and final reading. The Council adjourned to meet Monday evening, September 18.

Audubon and His Hair.

Audubon, the great naturalist, early in his career wore his hair very long. He wrote in his diary one day: "I wear my hair as long as usual. I believe it does as much for me as my paintings." However, in 1827 his friends succeeded in persuading him to get his hair cut according to the prevailing fashion. On March 19 of that year he wrote in his diary: "This day my hair sacrificed and the will of God usurped by the wishes of man. As the barber clipped my locks rapidly it reminded me of the horrible times of the French revolution when the same operation was performed upon all the victims murdered by the guillotine. My heart sank low." Further to express his grief, the margin of the page on which this entry was made he painted black about three-quarters of an inch deep all around.

The Word "Pester."

When we say we have been pestered by the bill collector and the political candidate we are not indulging in American slang. We are using a word that is more ancient and aristocratic than any of our proudly displayed coats of arms. And it came from the same source as most of the world's aristocracy—from the farm! "Pester" is an abbreviation for "impester," and a pastorium, in classic Latin, was simply a pasture. There were no fences around the pasture, and to prevent the horses and cattle from straying too far in quest of lush grass their feet were shackled. You would think you were being pestered if your feet were tied—that is, impestered—so that you could not run.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Shakespeare's Benefactors.

Of the millions who love to read Shakespeare how many have even heard of Heminge and Condell? Yet to the faithful labors of these two poor players we owe the first attempt to give the world a complete edition of Shakespeare's plays. No collected edition of the poet's work was issued in his lifetime, nor did many of the plays even find their way to print until John Heminge and Henry Condell, Shakespeare's intimate friends and fellow actors, took the task of publication in hand, disclaiming "ambition either of self profit or fame in undertaking the design," and being moved solely by des "to keepe the memory of so worthy a friend and fellow alive as was our Shakespeare."

AMERICAN FARCES BEST

French and German Models Long Since Abandoned, Says Avery Hopwood

"OF course American farce is the finest in the world," says Avery Hopwood, who wrote "Fair and Warmer," "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow" and therefore should be listened to when he talks on farce. "Nothing exasperates me so much as those critics who think it's a compliment to an American farce to be called 'as good as the French.' We contented ourselves for a long time with translations of continental farces. We accepted blindly the assertion of the world that French and German farces could not be improved on. Then, because we are an enterprising people and great on doing things for ourselves, we turned our hand to making our native farce, and in ten years' time we had distanced all competition.

"These are not vain assumptions. You have only to look at the theatres abroad at the outbreak of the war to see that American farces had driven practically everything else into the background. Margaret Mayo's "Baby Mine" and my own "Seven Days" were both in the lead. I could name you dozens of others as successful in the five years previous.

"There are sound reasons for this supremacy. The American farce is more subtle, more varied, vastly more humorous than its rivals. And most important of all, American farce has borrowed the trick of characterization from American comedy. Abroad the line between farce and comedy is sharply drawn. Their comedy may be anything.

Into it they put all their ingenuity, their resourcefulness, their social observation and their rapier-like sense of humor. Into their farces they put only situation—and everlastingly conventional situation at that.

I believe a twelve year old boy could write a French farce.

It is as mechanical as his toys. It is built out of two or three threadbare situations, a bedazzling lot of doors and windows, a smattering of slapsticks, and a group of very old risque lines. All these materials are traditional—and within reach of everybody.

"I think it is not too much to say that the worst American farce will have more spark of vitality in it than the best of the French. And I think all Frenchmen would agree with me in this. They say quite frankly that they save wit, characterization and new situation for their comedies. Farce is their step-child. They long since ceased to take it seriously, and, I imagine, must sometimes have a gentle laugh at our continued regard for it.

"The French abandoned farce in this definite fashion because it was so weighted with tradition that they found it easier to begin a new form than to salvage the old. We, on this side, had no such difficulty. Farce was not one of our regular outputs. We didn't make enough of them to get bad habits. The few farces we did have were spontaneous and amusing. We thought we did not know how to write farce. We just wrote what we thought was funny, following the English model more closely than any other, but following no model to an great extent. Little did we dream of the blessings of our ignorance! We puttered along, half apologetically. We went as we pleased because 'we knew no better.' And, presto, there came the American farce! In it situation predominates, but does not tyrannically drive everything else out. And every situation is a new situation—not an inheritance. We lavish all our comic treasures on our farces. And we are rewarded by having them the best in the world.

"There is a sort of vagueness about our way of describing our farces. That has followed naturally from the fact that we took so freely from comedy. There is no rule that I know of to make absolutely sure of what is farce and what isn't. But I once heard a man say that 'if it was a hit, it was farce, and if it wasn't, it was comedy.' I have often thought that was as good a definition as any, and I shall continue to use it till I can think of a better."

IS FEDERAL OWNERSHIP COMING?

With the passing of the eight-hour bill by Congress last week the threatened countrywide railroad strike was temporarily averted, but not for long. Students of our government are of the opinion that another six months or year will find the country facing the same situation it has just passed through, and then, they fear, there can be no eight-hour bill rushed through to pacify the railroad brotherhoods. The railroad magnates, dissatisfied with the bill, are to wage relentless war against it and that alone will provoke resentment and dissatisfaction on the part of the workers.

While suggestions are being heard on all sides as to ways to prevent a nation-wide strike the popularity of Federal ownership seems to be growing. This country, usually foremost in progress, has not yet tried national ownership of the most important modes of travel. Other countries, or municipalities, have and it is interesting to note some of the results that have been obtained.

Glasgow, Scotland, recently took over all of the surface lines in the city and since then has run them under the supervision of a commission. Whereas before some of the lines were not paying propositions and others charged high rates, the commission has now put the entire system throughout the city upon an equally paying basis. The revenue derived, despite the fact that fares have been reduced nearly fifty per cent., has been sufficient to run the majority of the city's departments, and in a few years Glasgow expects to have the profits of the railways pay the upkeep of the city without the aid of taxes.

This, it is true, is on a great deal smaller scale than would be the Federalizing of the railroads of the United States, but such a thing is not impossible, neither is it impracticable. It is worth a test. With government ownership Congress would be able, in case of need, to take drastic steps to prevent a strike, but who has heard of a strike in any of the affairs controlled by the government?

The interference of the President and Congress in a controversy between the railroads and their employes was a long step toward Federal supervision, which would in turn lead to Federal ownership. One argument of those who have long opposed such a program is that the 2,000,000 employes would never consent, and that they would be able to influence the votes of union labor everywhere. This is not true Union labor is not afraid of Federal ownership. It would even welcome a trial. We have the word of A. B. Garretson, leader of the four Brotherhoods in the fight for an eight-hour day, for this. He says:

"Ten years hence you will see a mighty stride toward governmental ownership and operation of all railroads, as well as other public and quasi-public utilities. I believe in such a program. I take the view that there are deadly dangers in government ownership, but that with the government engaged in regulation, as it must, I feel that we must choose the least dangerous. That is government operation and ownership. The sentiment in that direction has grown steadily. As a bricklayer would say, settlement of the strike is just another course in the structure."

Senator Martine's courage in the face of what most politicians would call unbeatable odds is inspiring, but it is no more than the friends of the Farmer Orator expect. When the Smith-Nugent gang fought him Senator Martine had the support of Wilson. Now he finds both the gang and the President against him, and yet he says, "They can't beat me." His opponents are saying he is too old to serve, but they will find he is not too old to fight.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Despite announcements made by the Fox Film Company some time ago that "The Man From Bitter Roots" would be William Farnum's last vehicle in which he portrayed powerful men shaken by emotion, we have today at Proctor's a typical Farnum picture, entitled, "The End of the Trail." Film fans throughout the land, upon hearing the decision of the Fox Company to feature Farnum in society dramas, requested that he appear in a few more pictures of the type which has made him famous and the Fox Company, after due deliberation, decided to produce two more of this class of Farnum productions, and "The End of the Trail" is the first of the two. It is a strong subject, an intense story well told, produced with great intelligence, and bound to appeal powerfully to its audiences. It shows William Farnum in an ideal part and with most capable support. In addition there are details worked out with artistic care evidently with a fine feeling on the part of the director for his story and his company. Other features today include "The Enchantment," starring Vivian Rich, and George Ovey in a funny subject, entitled "Jerry and the Counterfeiters."

Thursday, by popular demand of local film enthusiasts, Theda Bara will be brought back to Proctor's in "Under Two Flags," the production which created such a furore here last week. This will doubtless mean a capacity business at all performances but not stopping at this scoop, the Proctor management on Thursday will provide Frank Keenan and Charles Ray in "Honor Thy Name," a Thomas H. Ince Triangle play, and one of those side-splitting Keystone comedies.

On Friady and Saturday, in addition to the regular program Charlie Chaplin will be seen in what is acknowledged to be his best effort, entitled "The Count." The regular program Friday consists of a William A. Brady production, entitled "The Summer Girl," starring Mollie King, while Saturday Paramount will offer a masterful picturization of Denman Thompson's famous play, "The Old Homestead."

Our prize delinquent subscriber wandered into town the other day and, all unsuspecting, we lured him to Doctor Trahan's office and tipped the doctor to give him the Twilight Sleep treatment. And say, the Doc is some treater. He had the d. s. in the twilight zone as quickly as you could break your wrist with the crank on a Ford. In two minutes we separated the patient from the money he had been owing since the time when Heinz began making pickles. When he came to he was holding a receipt in full in his hand. Then we told him. He was tickled to death. He said that heretofore he simply couldn't bring himself to pay up, because he dreaded the pain. We turned over all the money to the Doc and told him to invest in it more chloroform. We are going into this business RIGHT.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

The first vaudeville bill of the season completes its engagement at the Plainfield Theatre tonight, and tomorrow an entire new show with several features will be the attraction. Crowded houses at both performances ushered in the initial show yesterday afternoon and evening. Besides the five vaudeville acts, Henrie and Estelle Hanson, novelty acrobats; Mat Jerome & Co. in a one act comedy, entitled "Next Please;" Caroline Meredith, in a scenic song production; Brooks & Wilson in a one act comedy, entitled "Parting" and "The Seven Melody Fiends" in a riot of song and dance, there will be several features for today's bill. "The Girl Who Won," a three reel drama, will be the headliner in the moving pictures, and a Pathe comedy, entitled, "Caught in the Jam" will also be included in the bill.

The bill for Thursday and Saturday includes, besides the usual moving picture features, five high class vaudeville numbers. A distinct departure from the usual is the headliner attraction, entitled "Memovies," an act of singing, posing, comedy and novelty so well blended that the whole act is a success. Wallingham & Botti present a clever one act sketch, "At the Railroad Station," and a comedy sketch, entitled "Some Boy," is a fun maker from start to finish.

The Watson Four in a musical and singing act are better than the usual, while the Wilson and Cecil Sisters are a team of delightful entertainers with their singing and dancing skit.

Friday vaudeville will give away to "Fair and Warmer," a play that has successfully weathered a year in New York.

When Selwyn & Company present "Fair and Warmer" at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday night they will offer to a grateful public the first Avery Hopwood laugh-maker since his far famed "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow," the biggest success in the long and distinguished line of Selwyn successes, and the farce which packed the Eltinge Theatre in New York for just one year.

Avery Hopwood is past master of farce, and in "Fair and Warmer" he has had just the kind of idea he knows best how to handle. Four young and prosperous persons with leisure to take themselves very seriously, are oddly assorted as one very good husband with a giddy wife, and one very good wife with a philandering husband.

The festive two overtax the patience of their respective marriage partners, who, in their turn, for purposes of revenge, vow to be thoroughly wicked.

They do not learn till it is too late to do them any good that wickedness needs a practised hand and that, with amateurs, it is much more apt to be a boomerang than a projectile. The result is three acts of fast and cumulative fun, in which the amateurs struggle ignobly but finally successfully, to get out of the difficulties they had arranged for their spouses. Selwyn & Company have chosen an admirable cast for the proper interpretation here of this merriest and most successful of farces.

Y. M. C. Association Talks

Two men were passing the Y. M. C. A. building one day. Said one:

"I don't think much of that institution."

"Why?" asked the other.

"Just a money making concern," said the first speaker.

"I'll bet that if a young fellow got stranded here and went in there they wouldn't give him anything."

It turned out that this man had an idea that the Y. M. C. A. is a sort of a charitable institution with a big fund handy for giving assistance to wanderers.

It was explained that, while the Y. M. C. A. sympathizes with men in distress, though some may be plain "hoboes," its principal purpose is not to furnish bed and board and financial aid to human flotsam and jetsam, but to give moral, educational and physical training that will prevent the youth of today from becoming wanderers on the face of the earth.

As to being a money making institution: No club of high moral influence could give what the Y. M. C. A. gives for less than several times the cost of a Y. M. C. A. membership.

The annual fees for membership in the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. are $5.00 for boys, $9.00 for seniors and $10.00 for business men (all privileges). There is also a $2.00 fee which entitles the holder to all privileges except those of the physical department.

In the present building it costs more than twice the amount per capita to provide the privileges for members.

Who pays the difference?

The public spirited men and women of Plainfield who believe that money invested in the men of the future is a good investment.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

Numerous inquiries have been received at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters with regard to the published statement of Adjutant-General McCain that the use of liquor in the army is "absolutely forbidden." The corresponding secretary wrote to General McCain, asking him if he had been correctly quoted. In reply he invites attention to paragraph 346 U. S. Army Regulations, which reads as follows:

"The sale of, or dealing in, beer, wine or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange or canteen, or army transport, or upon any premises used for military purposes by the United States is prohibited. Commanding officers will carry the provisions of this paragraph into full force and effect and will be held strictly responsible that no exceptions or evasions are permitted within their respective jurisdictions."

This is the famed anti-canteen law, the passage of which was the initial temperance victory of the twentieth century. It was voted upon by the United States House of Representatives in December, 1900, while the National W. C. T. U convention was in session in Washington, D. C. The Senate passed it January 9, 1901, and it was approved February 2.

The regulation is more far-reaching than the public is generally aware. It applies not only to the post exchange but to all "premises used for military purposes by the United States." "Members of the National Guard," says General McCain, "who may be sworn into the federal service will not be permitted to use liquors, neither will the liquors be permitted to be sent into the army camps." This anti-canteen law has proved so promotive of health and efficiency that military authorities at Washington and at the army camps are now its chief supporters, and officers at the front are barring even the sale of near beer to the soldiers.

Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, national superintendent of our work among soldiers and sailors, is carrying heavy burdens these midsummer days. She remains at her desk through the terrific heat of July and August working often from 7 a. m. to 11 p. m., planning for our boys at the border surrounded with temptations, and for the greater comfort of those in the hospitals. Twenty-four electric fans have already been provided and 2,000 hand fans; also grape juice, lime juice, oranges, lemons and other luxuries, which to the sick in that climate are neecssities. Much more must be done for the moral and physical betterment of the men at the front. Massachusetts and North Carolina are the first to respond to the appeal for funds sent by Mrs. Thacher to the States. The former contributes $75, the latter $28; smaller amounts have been sent by local unions direct to the chaplain of Twentieth Infantry camp at Fort Bliss, Tex. Doubtless by this time many other State and local unions have contributed. This is an unprecedented emergency and our mother-hearted W. C. T. U. women will rise to it with characteristic promptness and generosity.

The delegate to the international quarter-centennial of the Baptist Young People's Union who received the greatest ovation was a Kansas lass, who had never until the time of her arrival in Chicago, the place of the meeting, seen a saloon. As she stood before the great company, while a speaker from Kansas told of the wonderful prosperity of that State under prohibition and of the great company of boys and girls and young people protected from the liquor traffic, the audience cheered enthusiastically.

The incident was worthy of applause, but it ought not to shame any father or mother to think that the experience of the Kansas girl should be an exceptional and unusual one? Isn't it the right and the privilege of every boy and girl in the United States who enters life to be born in such clean, wholesome and uncontaminated environment?

We expect the young people growing up in our households to be strong and healthy, and yet, unless indeed we live in prohibition territory, we permit right in our neighborhoods disease-breeding shops which they are compelled to pass every day.

We think it inexcusable if they grow up inefficient and fail to succeed in some worthy enterprise, and yet, for revenue, we tolerate just around the corner an institution that every business man knows and says is an enemy of efficiency.

We count on the young folks growing up with stalwart characters, but with strange inconsistency we allow them to be tempted at every turn by a legalized character-corrupting traffic which history shows has ruined numberless men who in their youth were as pure and true as the boys and girls in the homes of today.

Ex-Secretary Bryan tells the story of a resident of Texas who all his life had opposed prohibition, but on his death bed made the following pathetic confession: "You will remember that I have spoken against prohibition—I am now for prohibition. Drink has ruined my sons and in my old age I am left alone."

What assurance have fathers and mothers that their children will not be among the thousands of victims of the saloon, unless they use their best efforts to protect youth from diabolically accessible temptation by voting out the liquor traffic in city, State and nation?

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

What Finally Became of a Little Mermaid.

The Little Mermaid Lifted Her Beautiful Arms.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

RIGHT after supper the children climbed into daddy's lap, and this is what he told them: "Once upon a time a little mermaid gave her life for the prince she loved. Then at dawn she turned into beautiful sea foam. The morning sun warmed the waves so that she did not feel any chill. She looked up, and all above her floated beautiful beings so like air that no human eye could see them any more than human ears could hear them.

"Light as bubbles they floated through the air without any wings. The little mermaid soon saw that she had a form like theirs which seemed to come from the foam. 'To whom am I coming?' she asked, and her voice sounded more beautiful than any earthly voice.

"'To the daughters of the air,' answered the others. 'A mermaid has no immortal soul nor can she win one without the love of a mortal. But we daughters of the air can create a soul for ourselves by the good deeds we do. We fly to the tropics, where man is the victim of sickening winds, and there we bring cool breezes. We scatter the scent of flowers all around and bring refreshment and healing in our train. When for 300 years we have labored to do all the good in our power we gain an immortal soul and take pleasure in the everlasting joys of mankind. You, little mermaid, have suffered and struggled as we have till you have become a daughter of the air. By your own good deeds you may now in the course of 300 years work out for yourself an immortal soul.'

"Then the little mermaid lifted her beautiful arms toward the sun and for the first time in her life wept. This gave her relief, you see, for mermaids cannot weep, but must bear their sorrow in their hearts.

"Soon on the prince's ship all was joy and life again. The little mermaid saw the prince and his bride searching the deck for her; saw them look into the bubbling foam as if they knew she had jumped overboard. Unseen by them now, she kissed the bride on her cheek, kissed the prince on his forehead and, with the other daughters of the air, rose into the bright clouds that sailed high in the sky. But I want to tell you something," said daddy to Jack and Evelyn, "these daughters of the air often flit past children, and every time a child is good this takes one day away from the 300 years that the little mermaid had to work for her immortal soul, and every time a child is bad this adds one day to the 300 years. So you children must help the little mermaid."

Jack and Evelyn looked at each other knowingly.

"Thank you, daddy!" they cried.

Training a Husband

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

Marion Shows that She Is Anxious to Help Morris Improve His Disposition.

"Is father sick?" asked Roger, as he stole out of the dining room on his bare toes. The breakfast had been a trying ordeal. Morris Southy had taken his place at the head of the table in solemn gloom, and the joyous chatter of the chidren had died in the heavy air.

"I think he did not sleep very well and is probably tired. We must try and not annoy him today with any loud noise," replied Marian, trying to smile cheerfully, though her heart was sore and aching. Morris had not spoken to her since she left the study the evening before.

"I have made matters worse, I suppose, trying to make him see how unjust he is to the children. Well, I have given him food for reflection. I hope he will grind that grist till it is ready for use. He is not a hard man by nature. He will surely see in time." Marian passed her hand over her aching head. Her anxiety had been so great that she had slept very little. There was little time to dwell on her troubles. The bread was ready to knead and it must be attended to before the baby waked and had his bath. Work is a splendid remedy for heartache, especially if it is work that takes your whole attention. Marian's heart lightened as the day wore on, and the querulous voice of her husband was not heard complaining or petulant. Morris kept himself shut in his study and the children shouted and laughed undisturbed. He marched to dinner as if returning from the grave of his last friend and the children fidgeted uneasily and asked for fresh helpings of food in whispers.

"I believe I had rather hear him scold than to endure this awful silence," thought Marian as she sighed with relief when he disappeared up the stairway.

For three days the black gloom had brooded over the household. Marian was washing the supper dishes with little Roger's help, when he gidled up to her and said:

"Mother, how long will it take father to get rested?"

"Father is worried about something, dear. I hope things will come right for him soon." Inwardly she resolved to assist them to come right by facing him and demanding what was the matter. Accordingly when the children were all safely in bed she tapped at the study door and was coldly told to enter.

"Morris, I have stood this sullen silence as long as I can. I want to know what is the matter." He was sitting by the window with his head resting on his hand looking into the branches of the big maple. He did not turn his head or otherwise notice her presence.

She sat down near him, saying: "I do not intend to leave till you answer my question." The tone was final and her husband turned and fixing her with a stony gaze, said:

"I would not think you would need to ask such a superfluous question if you have any memory, at all."

"My memory does not serve me. I cannot recall anything I have said that should justify your treatment of me for the past three days." Marian was very quiet.

"I did not resent you telling me I was irritable. I know that. A man who does such nervous work as teaching can be excused for irritability, but when you called me selfish I have a right to resent it. I work early and late for my family. I never spare myself and all I earn goes to supply their needs." He drew himself up with conscious virtue.

"Morris, selfishness is hydra-headed. We are all selfish in our own way, I suppose. I meant that you had gotten in the habit of demanding certain conditions for your work that worked a hardship on the rest of us; I thought if your attention was called to the fact you would be the first to rectify your mistake, for you are a just man." Marian rose and laid her hand on her husband's shoulder. He was considerably mollified by this speech, but his next sentence showed that he was in no mood to blame himself for anything.

"You must remember that head work requires conditions far different than farmers need. They are working in the open and their nerves are not on a tension all the time."

"People working with their heads should have power to use their heads; power to control themselves and use their reason. If that is not the case they have no business to do work that will produce conditions that will hinder the development of their children," was the quick rejoinder.

"That is all right in theory, but it would be difficult to put in practice in our case," was the tart answer.

"We must try to help each other in every way, dear Morris." She stooped and kissed his forehead.

BROAD BRIMMED HATS FEATURED.

Brims Wide and Partly Transparent—Metal Lace Used on Many.

By Mary Glynn.

The variety of hats evident would lead one to believe that there should be no question about one being becomingly "garbed" when one's chapeau is concerned. An interesting feature of many of the large hats is the evidence of metal lace either edging the brim or forming an insertion. Fur is also extensively used, though in the form of narrow bands and balls or buttons. One particularly smart hat is shown developed in navy blue panne velvet, in sailor shape. A two-inch border of the wide brim is of silver lace, and is bound on the edge with the velvet. Around the crown there is a narrow band of beaver fur, and this marked at intervals by metal ornaments. Worn in combination with a mohair suit and smart cloth-topped button boots, it proved especially appropriate and smart.

EQUIPPING STATE CAMPS WITH TELEPHONES

How the Telephone Company Was Prepared.

AS QUICKLY AS THE BOYS ENCAMPED THE TELEPHONE WAS INSTALLED.

As a city grows its telephone facilities grow with it, and usually the telephone is a step or two in advance, but when a city springs to life overnight, in response to a telephone call, and a rolling meadow of green grass and yellow daisies becomes suddenly the abode of 15,000 men, the necessary telephone growth which accompanies it requires little less than a miracle of organization and team work. The Telephone Review, N. Y., publishes an account of the feats of telephone engineering and high speed installations that gave adequate telephone service to the militia at Camp Whitman, Van Cortlandt and Sea Girt.

At Van Cortlandt Park, New York City, there were three separate telephone headquarters necessary, one for the First Field Artillery, another for the Second Field Artillery and a third for the Cavalry. No buildings were available in the Park but booths were brought and set up in the field, tents were procured and pay stations erected upon boards within them. Additional instruments were installed as the increasing need for them became apparent. At the camps of the Second Artillery the Chaplain observed a number of soldiers standing unsheltered in the blazing sun waiting for a chance at the telephones, and hunted up a tent to afford shade for the waiting line. No sooner was the tent in place than the telephone company installed more instruments under its grateful shade and everybody was satisfied.

To provide facilities for this sudden and swift development at Van Cortlandt Park, fifteen additional lines were run into the Fordham central office.

From the time the installation of the first instruments was complete, the telephones were almost constantly in use. For fourteen hours two of the coin boxes were literally in continuous service. There was always a number of guardsmen waiting to use the telephones, and the receivers were passed from one to another. The first man when he was through flashed the operator and gave her the number desired by the second, so that no time was wasted.

The customary "Blue Bell" public telephone signs were displayed at each of the telephone headquarters, but in truth no advertising was needed.

At Sea Girt two special switchboards were installed and extensions run to all parts of the main camp and to the Cavalry camp at the Buckelew Farm two miles distant. Telephone men worked all night arranging for and installing telephones. When the order came for the troops to entrain for the border, the telephones seemed to redouble their usefulness. On the busiest day the number of calls handled in the Spring Lake office, through which the state camp lines were working, was 70 per cent greater than the number handled on the busiest day of the 1915 season of this popular summer resort. The increase in Jersey toll board traffic was 25 per cent while that for the Newark toll board, through which the camp connected with most of the men's homes, was 600 per cent. This phenomenal increase was to be expected since the men had been called from their homes so suddenly that the telephone was their only recourse in arranging their affairs for a long absence.

Camp Whitman presented the most difficult problem from a telephone standpoint, as it was situated far out in the country, on a single track branch railroad having one or two trains a day, and the nearest plant gangs were from ten to forty miles from the Camp.

The men were hurried to the scene of action in motor trucks and automobiles, supplies were forwarded on the double-quick from New York and everybody fell to with a will.

Within twenty-four hours after the first order was given a switchboard was installed, two trunks connected and one station at the Officers' Headquarters installed, the only station the military authorities were ready to have installed that day. On June 21 one gang of nine men ran thirty-five miles of wire. The next day the men worked all day in the pouring rain, placing crossarms and running wire. An automobile was sent to the men's homes in Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, and Kingston for dry clothes, and the men were taken to the Camp that night.

Switchboards were added as the camp traffic became greater, till there were five boards with 32 telephones, three direct lines to New York, two to Poughkeepsie and one to Albany, besides the regular local trunk lines to Beacon, Pawling and Hopewell. To provide these facilities it had been necessary to run 200 miles of wire, erect 50 new poles and place 400 cross arms. It was work like this that gave the guardsmen their last word with their homes, and the newspaper men the clear wire for their stories.

On some days there were about three hundred "out" calls. The newspaper men were clamoring for the wires; there were constant rumors regarding the movement of certain regiments to the border, and the troops tried all at once to talk with their homes; the authorities, especially the Commissary Department, kept the wires hot in their efforts to get in enough supplies to feed the vast army which kept arriving; there was constant calling for horses, guns, and clothing. Even recruiting was done over the telephone, captains calling their home towns in the effort to bring their companies up to full strength.

GIVING THE BOY A START.

The efforts of modern business to adjust its material to the machinery of the industrial and commercial world have resulted in a new phase of vocational education little noticed in the extended discussions of how best to relate the individual to his future work. This is the school conducted by the industry itself, in which employees of the business are given instructions directly preparatory to the duties they have been hired to perform. One of the most successful schools of this type is the Training School for Office and Messenger Boys conducted by the New York Telephone Company and described in The Telephone Review, N. Y.

Admission to the school means admission to the employment of the company, and therefore the requirements are such as the standard of the work demands. The first requirement is that the boy be in sound health, the next that he have an elementary school education. Not only does the work demand this much previous training and knowledge, but the character of boys who have completed their school course has been found to be on the whole more ambitious and better material for business development.

When a boy is engaged he is sent at once to an office for the mornings and in the afternoons attends lectures at the school. In the office he gains a practical insight into office routine, answering buzzers, delivering mail, stamping envelopes and doing minor clerical work. At the school he takes courses in principles of business success, the construction and operation of a telephone, and other subjects pertaining directly to the telephone business. In the lectures on principles of business success the importance of such attributes as courtesy, personal appearance, punctuality, accuracy, economy, co-operation, observation, attention, and concentration are instilled.

It is in ascertaining the special adaptabilities and qualifications of the students that the really fine work of the school is done. It is in putting the right boy into the right place that success for the boy and for his work is most surely determined, and to do this, to tell the salient characteristics of a boy when his character is hardly yet formed, is a task of extreme nicety and of such importance as can hardly be estimated.

One guide for the instructor to go by in making the selections is the outline of requirements made by the offices.

When an office boy is requisitioned, the department representative invariably states what kind of boy is wanted. These facts have been tabulated, because they express the leading qualifications of an employee from the employer's point of view and are at the time a statement of the product of his experience. Also, a study of the characteristics of employees who have obtained the stamp of approval by the representative of the department to which they have been assigned has been of considerable value. This method is flexible and permits any form of adjustment that business may dictate.

Again, a proper set of well directed questions, together with careful observations and recourse to records, permits a fairly accurate analysis.

The work of the school brings out these natural tendencies and leads to many interesting cases of effectively placed talent.

One boy voluntarily brought in a diagram of the [illegible] long distance call. Apart from being correct as far as detail was concerned, the explanation was printed in letters of the old English type. They were drawn freehand with such an accurate sense of proportion that only on a careful examination could it be determined they were not stenciled. The boy was complimented on his work, the value of his gift was pointed out, and he was advised where his gift might be developed, free of charge, along scientific lines. A branch of the Engineering Department was later advised of the boy's special qualifications and he was immediately transferred.

In another case a boy evinced a highly developed tendency for mathematics. The instructor quoted a problem of ordinary difficulty, involving simple proportion, and handed the boy a pencil to work it out. The boy looked at the problem for a few moments and said: "Why, Mr. ——, the answer is 346. I don't need a pencil and paper to work that out." Further questioning developed the fact that the boy was mechanically inclined. He is now in his third year in one of the evening schools, where engineering is taught, and he occupies a fairly responsible position with the company.

The boys are encouraged to attend evening schools and the instructor is frequently asked to prepare a schedule of subjects which are most profitable and suitable to their special needs.

A highly encouraging feature of the work is the interest manifested by the parents of the boys. Many have called to inquire as to the progress their boys are making, and evince an eagerness to co-operate.

Cleanliness Contributes Greatly Toward Health

In the New York Evening Sun of August 4th Dr. Josephine Baker, of the New York Board of Health, had this to say, word for word:

—"Dirt and filth are the friends of disease and shelter it unremittingly. Every once in awhile we have a clean-up day. But every day should be a clean-up day."

—It is a great mistake to rely upon the ordinary broom. This crude method brushes the nap of the carpet over much of the dirt, thereby failing to get it. It also raises clouds of dust which contain numerous germs. Your own doctor can testify to this.

—Clean your house in the proper way, with a Hoover Suction Sweeper. This marvelous little machine gets all the dirt because its specially constructed motor driven brush vibrates the adhering particles out of the carpet-mesh, and suction instantly carries the dirt to the dust bag.

—$47.50 will buy a good Hoover. You pay $4.75 down—$4.75 monthly. 5 per cent. off for cash with order.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

BASEBALL AND FOOTBALL TACTICS.

There are a few players in this and surrounding localities who believe that it is considered sportsmanlike to win in the best manner possible, be that manner fair or foul. Fortunately, there are only a few players who hold such views and it is to be hoped that the great majority who favor fair play, without rough work, will so influence their fellows that the practice of always playing on the level will become general. No attack is made on any individuals; nothing is said against any team or manager. But there are guilty parties. These parties will realize to whom these remarks are directed.

CITY LEAGUE CLOSING.

The City League battle is over. The champion outfit is the Netherwood team, composed of baseball players of note and merit. The awards go to Netherwood and were presented at the meeting last evening. Plans for next year were rather minutely discussed and something definite will undoubtedly be done in the near future. It is proposed to have eight teams in the league next year. While to many fans the idea of having eight teams in the league is rather an advanced one, still there are enough players around these parts to make an extension of the league list a pleasing possibility.

• • • • • •

IT COULD EASILY BE DONE.

The business men of this city could do something for Plainfield sportdom—in fact, it is highly probable that they will do a little if they get the hint. And here's where the "hint" comes in. It would be a great medium of advertising, in addition to providing amusement for fans, if the business men would get together and secure a "big league" or "first class semi-pro" baseball team as opponents for a team of local players. The Cuban Giants, the Lincoln Giants, or the Brooklyn "Rookies" could be very easily induced to come to this city. And Plainfield has a team that could give the visitors a fair tussle. The idea is well worth considering.

BOOSTING PLAINFIELD.

The Plainfield Kennel Club is to have a show on September 23. If every citizen would casually mention that fact to at least one of his out-of-town friends, much publicity would be given the plan. And such publicity is valuable. It is difficult to reach everyone through the medium of the newspaper, although a fair majority of the reading public is reached through newspaper advertising and publicity. But if every Plainfielder takes it upon himself, or herself, to boost the show, he or she will boost Plainfield. And this, the Queen City, is looking for plenty of boosting. Other cities are given a lift once in a while and it is only fair that we should give our home town a little notoriety.

• • • • • •

RATHER UNFORTUNATE.

"A good many people outside of Washington would be glad to see the baseball team from that city win a pennant. Washington is one of the oldest baseball towns in the United States. It has had a team for time immemorial and it has never yet shown any front. It would seem that the time spent in the national pastime and the loyalty of the people back of the team ought almost to be enough to warrant a pennant for that city. Unfortunately, perhaps, pennants have to be won in other ways."—Arbiter.

• • • • • •

WE PRESUME SO.

Charles H. Ebbets, Jr., of Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, and interested in the welfare of the Brooklyn baseball team of the National League, has gone into court to question the right of a big industrial plant to so becloud the heavens above with nasty, black smoke as to interfere with the correct fielding of baseball in the aforesaid Ebbets Field to the great dismay and disgust of his fielders and in detriment of the chances of the Brooklyn team to win the pennant.

Here is a novel situation. The owners of Ebbets Field have certain rights that others are bound to respect. Unless they part with it, they have a right to light and air above their grounds and nothing but an act of providence can prevail against them. On the contrary, the industrial plant in question has an equal right to generate power in its plant and in the absence of a restraining ordinance, seems to have a right to make some smoke. That it interferes with the Brooklyn fielders is an unfortunate circumstance. If it becomes a public nuisance, that is different.

We presume Ebbets has a little the edge on equities, but the situation is novel enough to warrant speculation.

ALEXANDER SETS RECORD.

Grover Cleveland Alexander today is the "Shut-Out King of Baseball." When the Phillie phenom dealt out a 3 to 0 beating to the Dodgers the other day he annexed his fourteenth whitewash triumph of the season, which eclipsed all existing records. Two weeks ago he tied the twelve shut-out National League record of Christy Mathewson. Less than a week later he added another to his string, tying the world's record of thirteen shut-outs in one season compiled by Jack Coombs, when he was starring for the Athletics. And Monday he set a new mark.

No team in the National League has escaped the calcimining brush of Alexander. He has smeared each and every one. Brooklyn has been his victim twice, Boston twice, Cincinnati four times and St. Louis twice. The victory scored by Alexander Monday was his twenty-sixth of the season. He got a $1,000 bonus when he won the twenty-fifth game, and is to get another $1,000 if he makes it thirty.

Here is Alexander's shut-out record for the season: April 18, Boston, 3-0; May 3, Boston, 3-0; May 13, Cincinnati, 5-0; May 18, Pittsburgh, 5-0; May 26, Brooklyn, 6-0; June 3, St. Louis, 2-0; July 7, St. Louis, 1-0; July 15, Pittsburgh, 4-0; July 20, Cincinnati, 6-0; August 2, Chicago, 1-0; August 9, Cincinnati, 1-0; August 14, New York, 8-0; August 18, Cincinnati, 3-0; September 1, Brooklyn, 3-0.

If it's advertised today it is likely that it is of timely interest to you today.

You can make your task of "buying for the home" either a very irksome one or a very interesting and pleasant one. A habit of ad-study will make it ALWAYS INTERESTING and always full of ECONOMY POSSIBILITIES.

BASEBALL

The mystery of the season is how the Braves gather in the runs without the aid of hits.

In the words of Connie Mack, leader of the downtrodden Athletics, "First it comes tough and then it comes tougher."

Jesse Tannehill, the old major league pitcher, is doing scout duty in the tall grass for the Cincinnati Reds.

It is now known that the Cubs have abandoned all hope of reaching the front this season. Manager Tinker is telling what his team is going to do next year.

The Kansas City Kaws have been burning up the American Association with only fifteen pastimers on the pay roll, the smallest squad carried by any association team.

Pretty tough on Fred Merkle to be fed to the Robins after years of faithful service with the Giants. The only chance Fred will have in Brooklyn is a chance for a divvy of world's series spoils.

Manager Frank Chance of the Los Angeles team, is showing the Pacific Coast League some "Peerless leader" stuff. The old Cub-Yankee pilot has his "Angeles" going like a windmill.

In settling up the claims of the Norfolk (Va.) players who walked out because of unpaid salaries, it was found that one pastimer owed the club $139.95, instead of the club owing the tosser. Strike! Never again, for this player.

Recent batting averages show that the Western and International leagues are loaded with slugging batsmen, the Western having thirty-one and the International twenty-five players hitting for .300 or better. Of the sixteen teams in the two leagues Newark is the only outfit with a .300 sticker.

The Cincinnati Reds have been floating island and angel cake for the Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia teams. The Reds have dropped 13 out of 19 games to the Braves; 12 out of 18 to the Robins, and 13 out of 18 to the Phils.

The late Feds may have been a weak and misfit aggregation of ball tossers, but the fact remains that two of their pitchers—Cullop, of New York and Allen, of Boston—are the top notch heavers of the big show.

Cleveland scribes declare the Indians are still in the pennant hunt. The Fohlies are every bit of that, and the chances are they will remain quiet during the rest of the season.

Three rookies who own select monikers are to land with teams famous by their namesakes. Wheat goes from Troy to Brooklyn, Wagner from Terre Haute to Pittsburgh, and Milan from Newark to Washington. May they bring something along besides their John Hancocks and keep the grand old names in the limelight for many years to come.

Catcher Ira Thomas, member of the Athletics' old guard, is to forsake the big yard, having signed to coach the William College pastimers. During his big league career Ira was in on the money derived from five world's championship series. He was with Detroit in 1908 and with the Athletics in 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914.

ANOTHER SINGER MEET.

Another free entry athletic meet is to be staged by the Singer Employes' Athletic Association on its field at Elizabethport on Sunday, October 1. Eight events are carded, the special attraction being a discus competition, in which athletes who have never gained a prize in this sport will receive special prizes. The other events scheduled are 100, 220 and 440-yard handicap runs; four mile run, eight pound handicap shot-put, 880-yard handicap relay race and a two mile walk. Entry blanks may be had from H. P. Odell, No. 12 John street.

RED SOX GET JENKINS.

The National Baseball Commission yesterday ordered the Griffin club, of the Alabama-Georgia League, to execute an agreement with the Boston American League Club for the sale of Jenkins, an outfielder of the Griffin club, for $150. Boston claimed that they had entered into an agreement with the Griffin club Jenkins' services and the commission upheld the claim.

MORRISTOWN POLO.

Polo at the Whippany River Club will begin at Morristown on September 11 and continue for five days. Play will be for the Whippany Challenge Cup, presented by S. Harold Freeman, entries for which closed on September 5. The tournament is open to teams whose aggregate handicap does not exceed ten goals. The challenge cup is held by the Whippany River Club.

CITY LEAGUE CHAMPIONS TO RECEIVE THE AWARDS AT RECEPTION IN TAB HALL

Cups Will Also Be Awarded to Dunellen and Tabs—Plans Formulated at Meeting Last Night — Committees Appointed—Reception on September 29.

At the City League meeting last evening, elaborate plans for a banquet and dance to be held in Tab Hall on September 29 were discussed. At this affair the presentation of the pennant and cup to the champion Netherwood team will be made. In addition, cups will be presented to the team finishing second and to the club coming in third. Therefore, Dunellen gets a cup. Whether or not the Tabs will receive the third award depends on the attitude taken by the Hopes in regard to playing off the forfeited game with the Baptists. If the Hopes decide to play the game and succeed in winning the attraction, they will enter into a tie for third place, occupied at the present time by the Tabs exclusively. The plan met with the hearty approval of the league officials and will, undoubtedly, be given plenty of support. A committee, composed of Daniel Randolph, James Scott and Matty Coughlan, was appointed to arrange the details. Duncan Patterson was appointed a committee of one to attend to the securing of the league awards.

The subject of playing off the game forfeited to the Hopes and later ordered re-played, came up for spirited discussion. It was not definitely stated by Manager Britt Martin, of the Hopes, that the game would be played. However, the manager of the Baptists made it clear that he woud have his team on the field and ready for action. If the Hopes fail to appear, the Baptists will not claim the game by forfeit. The matter of paying the umpire for the game originally forfeited to Hope Chapel was taken up and it was agreed that the Baptists should bear this expense.

The next league gathering will be held in the Daily Press offices on September 18, when plans for the "feed," to be held on the twenty-ninth of September, will be discussed.

ALL STAR CITY LEAGUE OUTFIT PICKED BY SPORTING EDITOR IS STRONG COMBINE

But Fans May Differ—Expression of Choice Will Be Allowed —Team Could Defeat Best in State—Other Newsy Items.

Someone has to start something once in a while. Hence, we are going to start the ball rolling, by endeavoring to pick an all-star City League baseball team. We know that many fans will differ with us. And we are open to conviction. Any fan, who believes that he can pick a good all-star City League team and who can assign a reason for each choice that differs from the one we make, will have his thoughts published willingly. Address all communications to the sporting editor of this paper.

On the mound, we, as manager, would like to have Russ Stewart, John Dixon, Fred Mills and Jack Denny. There are other capable pitchers, but our hurling corps would be unusually formidable with these four fellows working regularly. Behind the plate, Johnson, of Netherwood, is our choice. Frank Teeling, of the Tabs and Eddie Bergen, of Dunellen, both look "nifty" also. On the initial sack we would like to have Eddie Hannon, of the Tabs. Pastiming at second station, would be Jim Emery, of Dunellen. At short, we would like to see Benny Rosenson, although we truthfully believe that Lou Brown is entitled to much consideration. At third, Eddie Coughlan is our choice, unhesitatingly. Outer garden workers would be Trust, of Dunellen, Wahl, of the Tabs, and Compton, of the Baptists. Compton is chosen, not so much because of his fielding ability, but because of his work with the willow and his readiness and peculiar fitness to shift about to any position. Well might he be used as general utility man. Joe Morley would also be a very good utility man.

Now the purpose of this listing is to arouse interest among the fans. Reader, pick your team, assign a good reason for each choice, send in your article and we will gladly publish it. Each fan has and is entitled to a different opinion. Get busy, boys, and we will have something to talk about.

League Limelight

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

JACK DENNY.

Interviewing John Denny is vastly different from interviewing any of the prominent motion picture stars. Jack talks but little of himself; the stars talk but little of anything else. Our own personal knowledge, therefore, must guide us in this article.

Fans of Netherwood will remember Jack Denny when he played on various teams in that locality. Those who followed the destinies of the now extinct Manufacturers' League well remember his stellar work on that circuit. In those days, he was a mere player; now, he is the prime worker in a movement that has revived baseball interest in Plainfield. When baseball talk invaded the precincts of the Tab club house about a year ago, Jack Denny thought he had a plan. Today, the realization of what many thought a weird dream is rapidly proving true. The elder Denny is a pitcher and one who, since his days in Plainfield High School has been in many a tight tussle. Just now he bears the brunt of the Tab hurling corps. To enumerate his worthy achievements would require the whole space allotted to these sport topics; to list his defeats, setbacks and reverses would necessitate much less space. Never has it been said, never can it be said and never will it be said that John Denny was not always fair and square on the baseball field and, in fact, in everything he ever undertook. Comment on his ability as a baseball player can best be left to the judgment of the fans. A study of his character demands a resort to the sentimental. Sentiment is back of all that is herein written of him. To depart from the conservative and to give way to a little slang, Jack is the "squarest gent in baseball." Others have said so; so do we.

FOOTBALL GAME OFF.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Ithaca the Cornell-Oberlin football game, scheduled for September 30, has been cancelled.

PRINCETON PRACTICE.

It was announced that Lake Minnewaska, in the Shawangunk Mountains, Ulster county, N. Y., has been chosen by the Princeton football players for early practice. The baseball ground of the Cliff House will be used. The players will assemble there on September 11 and will be under the direction of the coach, John H. Rush. The men will return to Princeton October 1 for the first game, against North Carolina, the following day.

HARVARD SCHEDULE.

The schedule of the Harvard football team for the season of 1916 is as follows:

September 23, Colby; September 30, Bates; October 7, Tufts; October 14, North Carolina; October 21, Massachusetts Agricultural Colleges; October 28, Cornell; November 4, Virginia; November 11, Princeton; November 18, Brown; November 25, Yale, at New Haven.

EXPERT REPAIRING.

At the Traps

By Peter P. Carney.

William B. Ogden, of New York city, won the silver spoon offered for the best score made at 25 targets at the Trap Shooting School on the Million Dollar Pier, in Atlantic City, N. J., every week in July. He broke 25 straight the first week; had two strings of 24 and three of 23 the second week; another string of 25 the third week and three strings of 24 in the final week.

Seven hundred and fifteen persons—forty of them being women—shot over the traps at the school during the month of July; 212 shot at the targets as they flew over the Atlantic Ocean during the first week; 167 the second; 157 the third, and 179 the fourth week. A great many of these trap shooters were beginners and showed great improvement after instruction by "Hank" Stevens and his assistants. The trap shooting school has helped the sport considerably this summer.

Since the school opened April 27, up to August 15, 130,000 targets have been trapped.

Milwaukee, Wis., wants the Grand American Trap Shooting tournament for 1917. So does Toledo, Ohio. By the time the Interstate Association holds its annual meeting to award tournaments, there may be a half dozen other cities in the field for the trap shooting classic.

The Grand American Handicap has always been successful in the Middle West, and as long as it is successful in that section the Interstate Association will hardly move it. There is no good reason why the tournament would not be successful in the East, but none of the Eastern organizations ever bid for it.

Chicago and St. Louis are central points within twenty-four hours' ride of one-half the population of the country, and therefore these cities have the edge on all others who apply for the tournaments.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Gentle reader, we have much to say this day. And we might just as well begin now. Much of our comment will, of necessity, be directed toward the Tabs, Dunellens and Royal Giants, because these were the teams we witnessed in action. Here goes:

Pete Simmons evidently was determined that his team should not want for a pitcher. He had Bradford, of the Philadelphia Colored Giants on the mound. Brad pitched excellent baseball and could have accomplished more had his mates given him any kind of support. The tall twirler said to a fan that he would pitch his "head off" if the fielders were not willing to back him up. Evidently, Bradford was of the opinion that he would have to get busy, for he certainly worked diligently.

Mickey McFadden gave a wonderful demonstration of what he is capable of doing. Time and again McFadden drew the plaudits of the multitude by fanning an opposing player with men on the bags. It was said before the game that "Mickey" would have to go some to keep up with the Royals. We failed to see where he had to extend himself to any unusual degree.

It cannot be said that Frank Teeling, the energetic little backstop of the Tabs, did not do his share toward holding the invading horde in check. Frank was on the job at all times and his timely pegging to second and to the other bags, was gratifying. His handling of McFadden was also faultless and drew the plaudits of the crowd.

Perhaps the largest crowd that has as yet attended a Sunday baseball game in this city was present at the contest at Avon Oval. Thirteen trolley cars were used to convey the fans from the field. Each one of these cars was taxed to its capacity.

Britt Bartin umpired the game and his decisions met with the approval of the fans and players. Britt was called upon to decide some close plays, but he did not make a slip in his work. He will, in all probability, be the umpire when the two teams get together on September 17.

The man who did the catching for the Royals was one Waldorf, who, while a nifty catcher, cannot be compared to Tommy Washington. Tommy did the backstop work for the Royals when they faced Dunellen and demonstrated that he is the superior of his rival, Waldorf.

One of the Royal players will have to learn the difference between Montauk and Mauch Chunk. One of the fans decided that he would like to know the reason why the Royals had to quit so suddenly. He spoke to a Royal player and received a curt reply to the effect that the team was going to "Montauk." Evidently some one has to study his geography all over again. The boys hit the trail for Mauch Chunk, where they played two games.

The Giants made several glaring errors. Hatchett was the chief offender, and Borden was second. Borden dropped an easy throw at second, thereby making a double play impossible. For his offence Borden was shifted to the outfield, where he did much better.

Lou Brown is a coming ball player. In fact, he has arrived. Lou made "Senor" Maiden wish for ice water on Saturday, and by his hitting and fielding kept the Tabs in the running Monday. Lou is, indeed, a valuable gentleman.

Eddie Bergen handled both Dixon and McLoughlin in a clever style on Saturday. Eddie is not hitting the ball to all corners of the lot, but he is showing a lot of "would be" girls how the national game is correctly played.

In this column tomorrow we will discuss another game that we had the pleasure of witnessing. In the future, we will publish any articles by our readers, provided said articles are news and have reference to sporting life in Plainfield.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT,

SEPTEMBER 12

Evelyn and the Simplon Pass.

The Simplon pass was a famous highway of travel long before Napoleon constructed the highroad. Milton came home that way from his grand tour, and so did John Evelyn. The latter traveler went in fear of his life, not only expecting avalanches to fall on him, but being apprehensive lest bears and wolves should assail him. The only actual harm which happened, however, was that his companion's dog killed a goat belonging to one of the peasants and that heavy compensation had to be paid—"a pistole," says the diary, "for the goat and ten more for attempting to ride away."

Just Three Things.

In the American Magazine a Chicago business man tells how he regained his health after a nervous breakdown when he was forty-eight. He says:

"Just three things are absolute necessities for the smooth running and longevity of these human machines of ours. They are pure air, pure water and plain food. Food alone has a price. Both air and water are God's free gifts. And yet not one person in ten thousand breathes enough pure air, not one in a thousand drinks enough pure water, and nearly all of us eat too much."

Long Journeys Made by Whales.

The whales that swim about the islands which lie off the coast of Norway and Finland in March and April travel immense distances. In May they turn up at the Azores or even at the Bermudas and sometimes pay a visit to the Antilles. They swim fast, for in June they are back again off Norway. Some of these whales have been known to bring back evidences of where they have been, for harpoons of the peculiar kind used off the coast of South America have been found stuck in them.—St. James' Gazette.

Albinos.

The human species offers frequent examples of individuals attacked by albinism. It is found oftenest among men of the black race. White albinos have skin of a peculiar paleness, blond hair, white or colorless beard, pink iris and red pupils. The negro albino has skin of variable aspect. In some cases it is white as milk and in others it is like wax or, rather, resembles the hue of a corpse.

Natural Curiosity.

They All Do Then.

"Tell me, is there ever a time when you feel that you really hate your husband?"

"Yes. The times when he telephones me at the last minute that he won't be home to supper."—Detroit Free Press.

Going Out.

"I live in the country."

"Do you provide railroad fare?" asked the prospective cook.

"One way."—Kansas City Star.

JERSEY TROOPS TO RETURN SOON

Predicted That All Will Be En Route for Home Within Fortnight.

BRIGADE IS REVIEWED

6,000 Guardsmen Show That They Are Ready for Service of Any Nature and Are Highly Complimented by Officers.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 2.—"In the pink of condition and ready for service of any nature," was the comment of General T. F. Davis, commander of the Arizona district, after he had reviewed 6,000 Jerseymen here this afternoon. It was the initial turnout of the entire New Jersey brigade and all units showed to perfection, executing commands with a preciseness that indicated that they had profited wonderfully from the two months of training they have received here. The raw recruits and untrained units that left the home State early in July are now finely trained and thoroughly prepared soldiers, as evidenced by the flawless exhibition of today. General Davis was highly elated and also surprised at the demonstration and he was not backward in expressing his opinion of the Jersey boys and their official personnel.

Brigadier General Edwin W. Hine was in command of the troops after they had been brought to formation by Major Alexander Grey, chief of his staff. A feature of the drill on the big parade ground was the execution of a "double quick" order—the artillery, cavalry and infantry racing up the field in perfect formation. Scores of regular army officers from Camp Henry Jones as well as hundreds of prominent Douglas residents turned out to witness the exhibition and their generous applause and personal congratulatory remarks to officers was evidence of the reception accorded the guardsmen.

Earlier in the day General Hine was the guest of Colonel Glenn, in command of the regulars at Camp Henry Jones, and who was chief of staff for General Wood at Governor's Island during mobilization. The general reviewed the regulars in the morning and was profound in his praise of that exhibition.

Tonight General Davis and his staff are the guests of General Hine and his staff at a dinner to be given in the brigade headquarters here.

General Hine and his staff admitted this afternoon that every indication now points to an early withdrawal of the troops, and the probabilities are that all of the Jerseymen will be on the way home within a fortnight. Issuance of orders today to stop all applications for dependency and college entrance discharges lent credence to this belief. Every man in camp will admit today that he is anxious to get home the preparations for the departure of the First and Fourth Regiments being largely responsible for the creation of a general feeling in this direction.

Bunker, of 322 East Front street, and Robert Barnes Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, of West Fifth street, will be married Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride-elect's parents. HORSE THIEF STILL MAINTAINS SILENCE

"Charles Hale" Remains Unidentified When Taken to County Jail Today.

Maintaining that stolid silence which characterized his arraignment in city court yesterday, on a charge of horse stealing, Charles Hale, who says that is not his right name, but good enough for the occasion, was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth today to await the action of the Grand Jury in default of a $600 bond. Despite rigid questioning by Chief Kiely, the man, who was caught at Bound Brook Tuesday after he had stolen a horse and wagon from Den Gavin, has refused to say anything about himself other than that he does not want to bring disgrace on any one else. He is a slight man, about 45 years of age, and before he was taken to Elizabeth was "mugged" and had his measurement taken. The police are still trying to establish his identity.

Thomas Harvey, who was also arraigned on Wednesday and held for the Grand Jury, was taken to jail today. He is charged with stealing leather from the factory of Fred Harrington, and since he was arraigned more evidence has been obtained against him. He could not obtain a bondsman for $200.

W. de La Roche Anderson Announces Retirement at Enthusiastic Rally

Presidential Candidate Charles E. Hughes and the Republican platform were enthusiastically endorsed last night by the Republican voters of North Plainfield township at a meeting called by Richard Moldenke, executive committeeman of the township. The session was held in the Improvement Society's Hall. Mr. Hughes' name was greeted with loud cheering and unanimous approval as the next President.

John S. Ammerman was endorsed for the office of Assembly because of his well known and approved business ability, party loyalty and effort as shown in his twelve years' service as executive committeemen and because of Mr. Hammond, his opponent, having had the customary two years' term. Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic City, was sanctioned for Governor, because of his proven proficiency in handling the affairs of the State on a business basis, and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen's name was approved for the United States Senate as the Somerset county candidate on the Republican ticket.

During the meeting Harry MacDonald was named for the Township Committee to succeed W. de La Roche Anderson, who will not be in the running this year. A vote of thanks was expressed to the latter at the gathering for his activities durng his term. L. B. Woolston was endorsed for sheriff, and Dr. Richard Moldenke will succeed himself as executive committeeman.

JUMPS ON AUTOMOBILE, FRACTURES HIS LEG

Joseph Lewis, aged 12 years of 494 West Fourth street, was taken to Muhlenberg Hosital shortly after noon yesterday, suffering from a broken leg sustained when trying to steal a ride on the automobile truck of A. M. Griffin at Liberty and Fourth streets. Julius Whiting, driver of the auto, said the boy had tried to jump on the running board of the machine without his knowing it and was thrown to the roadway. No arrests were made.

KNAPP FOR HUGHES, COLGATE AND FOWLER

Edgar A. Knapp, vice-president of the Progressive State Committee and one of the foremost figures in the Progressive party in New Jersey, has come out in favor of Charles E Hughes for President; Austen Colgate for Governor; Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for United States Senator; Charles N. Fowler for Congressman, and Colonel William B. Martin for county clerk. In a statement last night Mr. Knapp sharply criticised the "reactionaries" in the Republican ranks and declared that his support of the five men named above was based largely upon the fact that they were opposing the regular Republican machine.

The only candidate about whom Mr Knapp is lukewarm is Hughes. He echoes the disappointment of the Progressive party in general when he says, "I am sorry Roosevelt is not in Hughes' place." He said that while he intended to vote for Hughes, because he believed in the principles of Republicanism rather than those of the Democratic party, it is not impossible that his mind may change before election.

GENERAL RUSH TO FILE PETITIONS

Democrats Fail to Name Mayoralty or Councilmanic Candidates.

G. O. P. WARD CONTESTS

No License Faction Will Attempt to Get Control of Council and Make City "Dry" Next Year—Complete List of Local Candidates.

A general rush to file petitions by local candidates for election to various offices developed yesterday afternoon and last night with the result that contests will be had in nearly every ward. The Democrats did not attempt to place candidates in the field for the Mayorality or Councilmanic offices and the Republicans will have a clear field. The petition of Leighton Calkins was the only one to be filed for the candidacy as Mayor, and James F. Buckle will have no opposition for election to the Chosen Board of Freeholders. City Judge William G. DeMeza will have no opposition.

The petitions of three out of the seven candidates for Councilmanic berths were filed at a late hour yesterday. Those of both A. D. Edgar and Fred S. Cutter in the First Ward have been filed for some time. Charles Loizeaux was alone in the field in the Second Ward until Christie P. Hamilton filed his last night. G. Herbert Condict was the only one to file a petition in the Third Ward for the Councilmanic nomination, his also being turned in at the last moment. In the Fourth Ward, Chauncey L. Hight filed his petition at a late hour in opposition to Francis J. Blatz.

Petitions for the county and city committee were scarce until they began coming in yesterday. The Democrats entered candidates in the Second, Third and Fourth Wards, but not in the First. In the First Ward the Republicans are: County and city committees, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and A. A. Prudhon for both county and city committees.

In the Second Ward the Republicans are represented by J. Henry Crane and Louis Wilson for county committee, while William R. Townsend filed petitions for both city and county committees. Charles R. Banks filed one for city committee in the Second district. The Democrats are represented by L. J. Ellis for county committee, and James E. Prindle for city committe in the Second distrito. The Democrats are represented by L. J. Ellis.

Frank H. Smith for county committee and Frank S. Power for city committee were the only Republicans to become candidates in the Third Ward, while the Democrats have William F. Taliferro for county committee and Richard A. Claybrook for county committe in the same ward.

In the Fourth Ward John Bowman filed petitions for both the county and city committees on the Republican ticket, as did William Newcorn. The only Democratic candidate is John Hawkyard for county committee.

The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, in the presence of a small gathering of relatives and friends of the couple. Following the mariage, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll left for a brief honeymoon spent in the Catskills. For the present the young couple will reside with the bride's mother, on West Front street.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Carroll are popular with the younger set of the west end. Mr. Carroll is employed by the Public Service Company at Westfield. He is an active member of the T. A. B. Society of St. Mary's church and has appeared in their annual minstrel shows as one of the end men.

WILL ADMINISTER BROTHER'S ESTATE

Marie DuFlou, of This City, Granted Papers by Brooklyn Surrogate.

Brooklyn, Sept. 7.—The application of Marie Du Flou, of Plainfield, to be appointed administratrix of the estate of her brother, William A. Du Flou, who died at Kings Park, L. I., February 1, 1914, was granted yesterday by Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham.

In her application the petitioner declared under oath that her brother lived at 381 Sixth avenue, that since his death a small interest in real property which through a sale became personal property in a partition action is now in the hands of a referee ready for payment, that the said money totals $357.84, and beside herself the following are entitled to share in the estate:

Aletta Borchers, of Brooklyn, and Gesina Fox, of Hillside, N. J., children of a deceased sister, Katherine Westfall and Maud Grant Camp, of Phalinfield, child of a deceased sister, Anna E. Guest.

FOUR REPUBLICANS SEEK CO. CLERKSHIP

Fordham, Martin, Bauer and McLeod to Contest for Primary Nomination.

The Republican county clerkship race in Union county has been further complicated by the entry of Richard B. Fordham, of Rahway, who filed a petition. He has frequently been aspirant for various offices. Neil McLeod, Jr., Edward Bauer and Lieutenant Colonel William B. Martin, all of Elizabeth, are the other candidates and all of them filed petitions. County Clark Abram P. Morris, of Hillside, also filed his petition for renomination, as did his rival, William A. Leonard, of Elizabeth.

Among the petitions filed is one by Hamilton F. Kean, of Union township, for Republican State committeeman; also one by General Dennis F. Collins, for Democratic State committeeman. General Collins found opposition in the person of John Feehan, of the First Ward, Elizabeth, who filed a petition.

The three Republican Assembly candidates, all of whom served last year, have no rivals. They are William N. Runyon, of Plainfield; Charles N. Morgan, of Elizabeth, and Arthur N. Pierson, of Westfield. There are five Democrats seeking the Assembly nomination. They are Thomas F. Hueston, Edward A. McGrath and William Mayo Atkinson, all of Elizabeth; Walter H. Taverner, of Westfield, and Hugh F. Treacy of Plainfield.

General Collins' opponent for State committeeman designates himself thus "Will serve democracy—not special interests."

The candidates for Union County Coroner are John F. Mair, John F. Martin, Elizabeth, Republicans; Robert J. Mitchell, Elizabeth, Democrat; Dr. George E. Galloway, Rahway, Republican.

The Socialists have also filed petitions for a full county ticket.

STRIKE NOT YET HURTING TRAFFIC

Subway and L Trains Operated as Though Nothing Had Occurred.

SHONTS IS DEFIANT

Says Trouble Will Be Over in Day and a Half—Union Men Ready for a Long Fight—Little Disorder Reported.

New York, Sept. 7.—Although more than 2,500 of the elevated and subway employes are out and practically all the motormen and conductors on the "Green cars", the Interborough Transit Company has succeeded in operating most of the subway and L lines and the attempted tie-up is not really felt.

The strike will be broken by tomorrow night, according to a statement given out by President Shonts, of the I. R. T., at 11:30 this morning. Mr. Shonts said that enough strike-breakers had been employed to operate the subway and L lines and that ample police protection had been furnished to protect the operators.

The attitude of the Interborough Company is expressed in the following statement made by J. L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the company:

"If enough nightsticks are used the strike wont last long."

The company has strike headquarters at the Belmont Hotel. President Shonts, Attorney Quackenbush and General Manager Hedley are directing operations of the cars from there.

So far but little disorder has occurred although the police have detailed 5,000 men for strike duty in anticipation of rioting.

Union men promise that the strike will spread to all the surface lines in the city and they predict a long tie-up.

Mayor Mitchel is hurrying to the city from the Plattsburg camp, and at midnight he telephoned his secretary, Theodore Rousseau, from New Hampshire, that he would be at his office this afternoon.

Chairman Oscar S. Straus, of the Public Service Commission, again came to the front in an effort to bring about peace, and early today subpoenas were served upon James L. Quackenbush, the Interborough attorney, calling for the appearance before the commission at 11 o'clock this morning of President Shonts and General Manager Hedley, of the two systems. Subpoenas were also served upon William B. Fitzgerald, the union organizer, and William Conway, president of the Interborough's employes' local.

With the exception of the surface car lines, which were paralyzed during the early morning hours, the strike had little apparent effect on the subway and "L." This was due in a large part to the small number of trains in operation in the early morning hours, and union leaders predicted the real fight would begin when the rush hour starts.

Every train on the subway and elevated was guarded by three uniformed patrolmen. Each station platform on both systems was also guarded by three patrolmen and on every surface car rode a uniformed man.

The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

PRESENTS ROSEWOOD GAVEL TO MRS. CATT

Mrs. E. F. Feickert Honors National President at Opening Session.

The largest convention of suffragists ever held in this country was called to order this morning at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church in Atlantic City. Mrs. Chatman Catt called the session to order and Mayor Bacharach cordially welcomed the delegates in the name of Atlantic City.

The suffragists gave him specially warm applause, for they remembered that his brother, Congressman Isaac Bacharach (following the lead of Mr. Hughes) recently entered the ranks for Equal Suffrage and pledged his support to the Federal amendment in Congress.

Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Suffrage League also greeted the delegates in the name of the State association, and presented a beautiful rosewood gavel to Mrs Catt, the presiding officer. Mrs. Feickert believes that the work in this State will, unquestionably receive tremendous imetus from the inspiration gained by the 140 New Jersey delegates and alternates present at this convention.

There is much general interest shown in the New Jersey supper to be held at the Hotel Dennis this evening. More than 200 women from all parts of the State will be present, and there are numerous prospective speakers, including Mrs. Catt, the national president; Miss Mary Garrett Hay, chairman of the Woman Suffrage party of New York city; Miss Esther G. Ogden, of Elizabeth, third vice-president of the national association; Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, of New York, the well known author of "Are Women People?" Mrs. W. J. Morgan, wife of Lieutenant Governor Morgan, of Kansas, who toured New Jersey for the cause during the recent campaign.

White, president of the Plainfield League; Mrs. A. B. Jones, Miss Kathryne Sminck, State press chairman; Mrs. R. S. Huse, of Elizabeth, Union county chairman; Miss Anna Blauvelt, of Elizabeth; Miss Gertrude Prirs, of Rahway; Mrs. F. H. CANDIDATES FILE PETITIONS IN BORO

Several Democrats Will Oppose Republicans in Coming Primaries.

The political bee is buzzing in the borough and the coming primary and election is beginning to attract considerable attention. Petitions have been filed with Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin and these indicate that a hotly contested battle iis to be waged across the brook.

The terms as councilmen of J. G. Tingley and Alexander Milne expire this year and these two men have filed their petitions, seeking re-election on the Republican ticket. John Wolf, on the Democratic ticket, also seeks election to the Council. E. P. T. Smith, of the Fourth district, has filed his petition for county committeeman on the Republican ticket. A. Gibby Spencer is out for collecter on the Democratic ticket.

Howard Woolston seeks the office of county committeeman on the Republican ticket and Andrew E. Kenney is out for the same office in the Democratic primary. Guy D. Peck has filed his petition for the office of freeholder on the Republican ticket, with George Kirch running on the Democratic ticket. Justus H. Cooley is out for assessor on the Republican ticket. SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD

ALLOW $100 TO FIGHT DISEASE

After Considerable Discussion Fanwood Decides to Curb Expense.

STATE AID FOR ROADS

Council to Ask for Help in Rebuilding Martine Avenue—Three New Lights for Terril Road—Charles Sheelen, Delegate at Convention.

After considerable discussion at the meeting of the Fanwood Borough Council last night it was voted to appropriate another $100 for the use of the Board of Health in case an emergency should arise. Opinion was rather varied as to whether or not the Council had any right to allow the Board of Health more money after the regular appropriation had been expended. Besides spending the money originally set aside the board got an appropriation of $100 last month to be used for debts incurred in fighting paralysis. It was decided to ask the board to name a sufficient sum needed for the coming year to enable them to do everything necessary without returning to the Council for money.

Following the reading of a letter from the commissioner of public aid relative to the part the State is to take in the repair and upkeep of various roads throughout New Jersey, it was voted to ask State aid in fixing Martine avenue. That thoroughfare is the connecting link between South and Springfield avenues, two of the State roads, and it is the most important in the borough. The excessive travel on it keeps the borough in constant expense to keep it passable, and it is thought that with State aid the road could be built with amesite.

A petition signed by thirty-five residents, mostly of the western end of the town, was presented to the Council, asking for three additional lights on Terrill road, south of the New Jersey Central. Because that thoroughfare marks the boundary between Fanwood and Plainfield, and because Plainfield already helps light that street, it was decided to have the proper committee get in touch with Plainfield. It is thought by the Council that an agreement can be reached whereby Fanwood will install two lights and Plainfield one. Fanwood now pays for three on that street and Plainfield for four and the new arrangement would make the apportionment even.

Charles Sheelen, of North avenue, was appointed by Mayor W. H. Hoar to attend the annual convention of the League of American Municipalities, which started yesterday and lasts until Saturday. It was also voted to pay the dues for the ensuing year. Collector Charles Sheelen made his report on the annual tax sale and reported cash on hand amounting to $1,759.58. Routine bills amounting to $273.57 were audited, and bills amounting to $79.-95 incurred by the Board of Health, were passed upon.

J. MADISON HARE HOMEWARD BOUND FROM THE BORDER

The Rev. J. Madison Hare is on his way home from the border. Entraining with the Fourth Regiment, N. G. N. J., at Douglas last Saturday, he may reach home in time to conduct the services of the Baptist church, Sunday, September 17. It is probable the regiment will be sent to Sea Girt.

Mr. Hare, as chaplain in the Fourth Regiment, has done much good since he left Sea Girt in June for the border, and had to leave for home without seeing the completion of several things he had started. During his stay at Douglas he raised the funds for and directed the building of a library and rest tent for the soldiers, and a hospital, as well. He was postmaster for the regiment and on a number of occasions conducted the services in the Douglas Baptist church.

PETITIONS ARE FILED BY LOCAL OFFICE SEEKERS

Yesterday was the last day candidates for political offices in the borough or township had to file their petitions. The only ones filed with Township Clerk Edward L. Hand were William L. Ward for Township Committee, and George Johnson, for county Republican committee. Both men are seeking re-election and have no opponents in the field.

In the borough three petitions were filed with Borough Clerk S. W. McAnneny. Dr. F. M. Wescott filed his for the Republican county committee and Fred W. Creesy and Luke A. Pandick filed theirs for the Council. The filing of Mr. Pandick's petition caused a little surprise, as it was not known that he was in the race. He will, however, have no opposition, as Offley Brown, whose term expires this year, did not file a petition, which would indicate that he does not care to run again. Mr. Creesy has served two terms in the Council and is seeking re-election for the third time.

RECREATION NOTE.

Champlain L. Riley, chairman of the Recreation Committee, has secured Roland Haynes, Commissioner of Recreation of New York, to make an address at the Plainfield High School tonight on "The Value of the Community Centre." Mr. Haynes is a well known speaker on community subjects.

LITTLE EXCITEMENT IN COMING ELECTION

Two Councilmen and One Committeeman Will Cause No Local Fight.

As far as the local election goes, there will be but little excitement at the polls this fall in either the township or borough. Of course the county, State and national elections will create a certain amount of interest, but as for the local situation, there will be but three changes, two in Fanwood borough and one in Fanwood township.

In the borough, two of the Councilmen, Messrs. Brown and Creesy, will have completed their terms. So far they have not said whether or not they will seek re-election, but it is said that there will be at least one candidate in the field. So far there has not been any petitions in circulation and there is only a short time remaining before they have to be filed.

In the township the term of William Ward as a member of the Township Committee and treasurer and secretary expires. It is practically certain, however, that Mr. Ward will seek re-election and will have no opposition.

LOCAL TEACHERS TO REPORT ON TUESDAY

Will Hold Institute Until Opening of Schools on October 2.

Infantile paralysis has caused the postponement of the opening of the local schools for the fall term until October 2, but the entire corps of teachers will report for duty on September 12, the original date. Acting upon the suggestion of the Board of Education, the supervising principal of the local schools, S. Dana Townsend, issued instructions for the teachers to be on hand on September 12, and from then until the opening of the schools preparations for the year's program will be made.

Beginning with next Tuesday and continuing at least three times a week through the month the teachers will meet with Mr. Townsend and discuss plans for the school year. The two new teachers will be given a chance to get accustomed to things, and it is probable that lectures will also be featured. Several new courses of study will be discussed and some changes may be made as a result.

TWO TEACHING VACANCIES.

The teachers in the local schools are beginning to return from spending their vacations at their homes and are preparing for the institute to be held beginning next Tuesday and continuing until October 2. Principal S. Dana Townsend has two vacancies to fill in the staff, and when the addition to School No. 1 is completed there will be four or five more.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

A notable "theological wedding" which took place this week at Boston was that of Misses Ruth and Evelyn Upham, sisters, of Guthrie, Oklahoma. Miss Ruth was married to James Coy Watson, and Miss Evelyn to Horace F. Patton, both young men being students at the Boston University Theological School, where they are working for the degree of doctor of divinity. All four were classmates at the Methodist University of Guthrie, and were graduated in 1914. Now the two grooms will not only continue their studies at the Boston University Theological School, but the two brides will enter the school in the fall and pursue theological studies by the side of their husbands.

Should the trial of Oliver A. Howard, of Marlinton, Va., prove him guilty of the murder of his wife, Frances Robertson Howard, then we shall have to record what will be known as the "first suffrage murder." Dr. Howard and his wife, having, it appears, disputed with great bitterness on the subject on the morning of her death. The matter was known among the neighbors to have been a source of unfriendly feeling between the two. On the day of her death Mrs. Howard made her first public speech for the cause.

The devotional exercises at the Suffragists' Convention at Atlantic City this week are led exclusively by women, a fact which has given many of the clergy food for thought. What effect will the advance of woman's suffrage have upon the ministerial profession? Will it mean that women in larger numbers will apply for entrance into the ministry? These and like questions are agitating clergymen of various denominations and form the basis of discussion at summer colonies where the clergy and their families congregate. Marked changes in the churches in that respect are expected by many of the clergy within the next fifteen years, at the end of which period, they believe, women seeking ordination will have increased four-fold. From England comes the interesting news of a similar wind in the air. A prominent London clergyman, Rev. Percy Dearmer, has joined the advocates of a proposal that women be allowed to preach in the Anglican church. The proposal has already once been voted down by a majority of the bishops. Many other denominations in England, however, already accept women preachers, and the barrier set by the more conservative Anglicans is expected to crumble down in time also before the onslaught of modern tendencies.

The Women's Trade Union League has made a notable step forward toward securing the establishment in the United States Department of Labor a division to be known as the Women's Division. The advocates of this proposal drafted a bill last spring which was introduced in the House and Senate, but upon which it was impossible to secure action. The bill was made necessary because of the virtual dissolution by Commissioner of Statistics Royal E. Meeker, of a non-statutory division devoted to the interests of women in industry. There was a good deal of friction at the time and a considerable outcry against Dr. Meeker, for it was the belief of many women that certain special investigations should be handled by a special branch of the service. Secretary of Labor W. B. Wilson recently gave out a formal endorsement of the bill in question, considering that "there is a vast field for investigation and study which specially and peciliarly affects women in industry which could be more effectively handled under the immediate direction of women than under the direction of men." The women therefore confidently expect success for the bill at the short session of Congress next winter.

A monument to the memory of the members of the various orders of Sisters of the Roman Catholic Church who gave their services to America on the battlefields and in hospitals during the Civil War, is planned for Arlington National Cemetery by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the largest organization of Catholic women of Irish descent in the United States, and whose membership is 70,000. Already a bill giving permission for the erection, and championed by Senator Broussard, of Louisiana, has passed the Senate, and a similar piece of legislation, promoted by Representative Kennedy, of Rhode Island, is being pushed in the Lower House. The nuns of six religious orders served as army nurses during the Civil War. The cost of this memorial to the "Nun of the Battlefield" will be $50,000, in which expense the government will have no share whatever, the fund being raised by a small per capita tax on the large membership of the organization.

Mrs. C. A. Rugg, of New York, has founded the Sunset Club, the purpose being the "stimulation of elderly women to be up and doing." Too many women, says Mrs. Rugg, who is herself a bright refutation of the case, are growing old before their time and need some one to "stir them up." But why "Sunset?" Mrs. Rugg's intention is to keep the brightest of luminaries working overtime.

STAY OF NEW JERSEY TROOPS IN ARIZONA CHARACTERIZED AS A "BLOODLESS BATTLE"

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 2.—Members of the First Field Hospital corps with representatives from every unit in camp as their guests, last night heard a remarkably graphic account of Mexican characteristics and conditions of the Mexican nation in a lecture delivered by William L. Jaeger in the corps' mess tent. In introducing the speaker Captain David A. Kraker, of Newark, described him as a native Jerseyman who came to this region thirteen years ago to seek his fortune in the mining industry in which he has been successful.

During the course of his address Mr. Jaeger referred to the stay of the Jersey troops in Arizona, as a "bloodless battle," and classed the guardsmen as the saviors of Arizona. He said in part: "The Mexican people as a whole are heathens. They think every American is possessed of a 'yellow streak,' and honestly believe that one Mexican filled with calesin (whisky) is the equal of five Americans. They invariably follow a winner and stick to a leader as long as things are coming his way. If he begins to lose they desert his cause and flock to the winning side.

"The night before the Jersey troops dropped along the border here the city of Douglas was in a state of terror. White men were packing up their belongings and preparing to send their families to the East. We banded together and paraded the streets each night with shotguns. No one slept and we believed that the city would be wiped out any minute. In twenty-four hours it could have been reduced to a heap of ashes by the thousands of Mexicans who could be seen across the line preparing to claim the town.

"It is generally believed in the East that Mexico is unprepared for warfare. This is a mistake. Mexico's fighting equipment is far superior to that of the United States, and it has guns such as we have never seen on this side of the border. Mexico's one drawback is the class of men who defend it.

"You soldiers are anxious to go home, but we Americans in Douglas or other border towns want to see you stay. While you are here we rest easily at night, but just as soon as you are recalled the outrages are going to begin once again. The Mexican candidly believes that Uncle Sam has dumped every available man along the border and he further believes that you have all been forced into military service.

"The Mexican as an individual cannot be blamed for the present unrest. He has been made a heathen by the government and religious creeds of his country. When the United States ran a railroad into Mexico the Mexican government demanded that this government sign a document agreeing that no Mexican laborer should be paid more than one dollar a day. In Mexico the average pay for labor is thirty-seven cents a day, and the government does not want to see its natives get any more. They are taught to burn cities and loot homes and they think of little else.

"Until this government goes into Mexico and teaches the heathen nation a lesson in humanity this spirit is going to prevail. Our border will never be safe unprotected. Douglas business men realize this and for this reason they are demanding that you or some other unit be kept there."

Mr. Jaeger's talk left a great impression on his listeners, and they were brought to realize for the first time the seriousness of the situation. The corps had hired a Mexican band to disperse music during the evening, but the lecturer refused to deliver his address until these men were removed from hearing distance. Since the troops arrived here Jaeger has acted as an adviser for the officers of the units, and he has become a great friend of all, especially Major Harold D. Corbusier's hospital corps.

Fleas Deadlier Than Tigers.

I read an official report when in Bombay that during the preceding year tigers had killed 1,000 persons in India. You shudder at the fearful ravages of this king of the jungles. But at the very time I was in Bombay the fleas were killing 200 persons every week in that one city alone.

Those fleas were riding upon the backs of rodents and depositing the devastating bubonic plague in thousands of homes throughout India.

The insignificant and negligible thing called a flea yesterday has today replaced the tiger and the deadly cobra as the vast menace to 300,000,000 souls in India.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Jack Sheppard as a Text.

Jack Sheppard had a great hold upon the imagination of the people of his time. The fact that 200,000 people witnessed his execution at Tyburn on Nov 18, 1724, is some witness to his grim popularity. But one of the strangest tributes ever paid him was the sermon preached upon him in a London church.

"Oh, that ye were all like Jack Sheppard!" began the preacher, to the stupefaction of his flock. He went on to draw a parallel between things of the flesh and those of the soul and to point out that the genius shown in house breaking might have been bestowed upon "picking the locks of the heart with the nail of repentance."

SOON TO TRAIN ARMY AVIATORS

War Department Will Announce Reorganization Plan.

WILL MAINTAIN SCHOOLS.

Civilians as Well as Officers Will Be Eligible—Instruction Begins With Easy Flight, In Which Pupil Encircles Field at Comparatively Low Altitude and Tries to Land.

In a short time the war department will announce the plans which have been approved by the general staff of the army for the reorganization of the aviation arm of the regular service, a reorganization which contemplates the training of about 1,000 aviators, half of whom will be in the active and the other half in the reserve service.

These plans call for an equipment which will include aeroplanes of all the various military types, for a thorough system of training, for the mobilization and so far as possible the standardization of the various industries which can be utilized in the manufacture of aeroplanes or their equipment for military purposes, and, lastly, for means by which any young man who can pass the mental, physical and moral test of the regular service may obtain the practical and theoretical instruction necessary to equip him for a commission as an officer of the aerial reserve service.

There will be established a system of training schools which are expected to be second to none in the world. The machines manufactured especially for training purposes will be of types to fly from thirty-eight to sixty miles an hour and designed with the idea of obtaining a machine easy for a novice to operate.

Flying With Instructor.

During the preliminary stage of his education as an aviator the pupil always flies with an instructor until he is able to pilot the machine alone under very good air conditions. The instructors in this preliminary stage are civilians, of whom there are now three at San Diego, where there is the only military aviation school now in this country. Only officers of the regular service are now eligible for the training, a condition which will cease as soon as the new scheme of aerial organization goes into effect in the next few weeks.

After an officer has completed the preliminary stage of his training and is certified as able to operate his machine without the assistance of an instructor pilot, his training passes under the control of an experienced army officer, who is a veteran pilot.

The San Diego instruction begins with very easy flights in which the pupil simply encircles the field at comparatively low altitudes and receives instruction in landing. After he has mastered the simpler problems of aerial navigation the instruction gradually leads up to the most difficult of maneuvers which are made under all possible weather conditions. No pilot is permitted to go into the air unless he has some definite maneuver to make. After landing from each flight he reports back to his instructor and together they go over every detail of the flight, the instructor pointing out mistakes and indicating how they are to be obviated.

Requirements For Certificate.

This system of progressive instruction is continued until the student is able to make all the flights which are enumerated in the government requirements for a junior military aviator's certificate. These requirements are as follows:

Five figure 8's around pylons 1,000 feet apart, keeping all parts of the machine inside a circle whose radius is 300 feet.

Climb out of a square field 1,200 by 1,200 feet and attain 500 feet altitude, keeping all parts of the machine inside of square during climb.

Climb 3,000 feet, cut off motor, spiral down, changing direction of spiral—that is, from left to right and vice versa—and land within 150 feet of previously designated mark.

Land with dead motor in a field 300 feet by 100 feet, assuming said field to be surrounded by a ten foot obstacle.

From 500 foot altitude land within 100 feet of previously designated point with dead motor.

Cross country triangular flight without landing of approximately sixty miles, passing over previously designated points, at a minimum altitude of 2,500 feet.

Straightaway cross country flight without landing of about ninety miles from previously designated points at a minimum altitude of 2,500 feet.

JOKE STARTS OIL RUSH.

Campers Poured Kerosene Into Pump In Pennsylvania Village.

Kerosene oil poured down a pump in front of the home of Jerome Hawkins at Clarksville, Pa., started a wild rush to obtain oil leases at almost any price.

The kerosene was poured down the well following publication of the report of the "oil strike" in a newspaper. Leases were sought of all the land in the vicinity of the well. Many credulous persons, having visions of fortunes, secured leases and paid big bonuses for land adjacent to the well.

The hoax soon became public, and the campers left.

Only Flattened.

Helen Stanley Produces Not Only High Notes But In An Emergency Very High Notes.

HELEN STANLEY

A 200 mile motor trip on which she was compelled to act both as chauffeur and mechanician did not deter Helen Stanley from filling an engagement in Madison Square Garden on Aug. 22. The prima donna was enjoying an outing at her camp in the Adirondacks when a belated telegram arrived asking if she would sing the following day at one of the Civic Orchestral Concerts, a series financed by influential New Yorkers as a means of providing the masses with good music during the summer. The enterprise is one in which Miss Stanley and other distinguished artists like Madame Gadski have taken a special interest. Early in the summer she had offered to appear, and now that she was suddenly called upon she was eager to keep her promise. To do so, however, presented difficulties. There was no one in camp but her woman companion and their guide, the latter an excellent cook, but no chauffeur. The nearest railroad was twenty miles away, and there was no train until the following noon. Miss Stanley was equal to the emergency. With her companion she set boldly forth, making a third of the trip that night and completing the journey—after two breakdowns which she herself repaired—in time for a rehearsal the following day. In the evening she sang before 3,000 persons.

HUGHES IN BOSTON EN ROUTE TO MAINE

Boston, Sept. 7.—Charles E. Hughes, Republican nominee for President, arrived here today for a brief stop on his way to Maine, where he is to deliver several campaign addresses this week. After breakkfast, as guest of local Republicans, it was planned that he should resume his trip.

Speeches were scheduled for today at Hampton Beach, N. H., where a carnival was in progress at Portsmouth, N. H., and at York Harbor, Me., with an address at Portland tonight.

Hughes will be in Maine tomorrow and Saturday, visiting several cities. He plans to spend Sunday in Boston.

BEGIN MOVE TOWARD A FREEHOLDER PROBE

The first move in t[illegible] investigation of the B[illegible] holders of Union cou[illegible] today when notice [illegible] investigation that [illegible] demanded will be served on the Board at its meeting in the Courthouse, Elizabeth.

According to Freeholder Elias Applegate, sponsor of the petition, nothing but commendation has been heard for the step he has taken. Funds for carrying the fight to a finish are on hand, it is claimed, and the examination will be as sweeping as the powers of the Board itself.

Mr. Applegate, whose activities resulted in the framing and circulating of the petition, denied yesterday that any political motives or quarrels were behind the movement. The majority of the forty-one signers of the petition which asks for the investigation are Republicans, he said. In fact, he declares, he refused to permit certain Democrats to sign the petition, or to contribute to the necessary fund, because they wanted to make political capital out of any discoveries that may be made.

GROCERY CLERKS HERE WILL NOT STRIKE

Reported Today That All Are Satisfied With Local Conditions.

As a result of the grocery clerks' strike in "chain" stores in New York, rumors have been current in this city yesterday and today that the clerks of the local branch of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company are preparing to walk out tomorrow. Inquiries of the local manager, however, have set all these reports at rest, nothing being known of any discontent among the Plainfield employes.

In the metropolitan district nearly two thousand retail grocery clerks are out on strike. Of these who struck yesterday morning about one thousand have returned to their posts, their employers granting the union's demands. It was estimated last night that about five hundreds stores in the city were either closed or were being operated with depleted staffs.

The grocery clerks demand an increase in pay, a regular schedule of working days, a percentage of the receipts of the stores, which is customary in many stores, and recognition of the union. Among the firms who have not conceded the demands of the union include, The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, 1,000 men; James Butler, 500 men; Arctic Grocery Stores of New York and New Jersey, 150; and the National Grocery Stores Company, 100 men. R. D. Smith, general manager of The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, said last night that none of the company's stores on the West Side had been closed.

MARTINE HEARD BY RAILROAD UNIONS

Mystery Surrounds Meeting in Elizabeth Saturday Night.

Elizabeth, Sept. 7.—Despite a veil of secrecy which had ben thrown about it, news leaked out yesterday concerning a hastily-called joint meeting of Elizabeth branches of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Firemen, Conductors and Trainment, which was held Saturday night at the Burkely Hotel, and which was addressed by United States Senator James E. Martine, who hastened to Elizabeth from Shadow Lawn in order to be present at the railroad men's gathering.

The brotherhoods meet, as a rule, in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, 206 Broad street. Apparently the suddenness of the call for a meeting Saturday night made it necessary to engage the banquet hall in the Burkely, and thither Martine was seen wending his way in the evening.

Special interest is attached to the meeting on account of the recent threatened strike of the railroad brotherhoods and the passage of a law by Congress at the President's dictation, forcing the railroads to accede to the demands of the men.

Whether Martine made a political speech before the trainmen, or whether he received the assurance of their support for himself or President Wilson or both, or for the Democratic ticket as a whole, is not known. It is reported, however, that the Senator told the men at the meeting that Wilson and the Democratic party as a party had the interests of the railroad men at heart, witness the recent action of Congress and the President, and related to them some of the incidents connected with the passing of the bill.

Senator Martine was very much in evidence at the notification ceremonies at Shadow Lawn, and his hasty trip to Elizabeth caused some comment, although his object was not generally known at the time. Whether he was specially invited by the trainmen, or whether he asked to be allowed to address the meeting is not known. The story is, however, that the meeting was called for the express purpose of giving an audience to Martine, either by his request or on the brotherhoods' own volition.

Some of the members of the brotherhood are reported to have been not entirely pleased with the meeting and some of the incidents which surrounded it.

Indians and Time.

Certain of the reservation Indians still cling to the calendar of their ancestors. The Indian method was to compute time by sleeps and moons. A sleep is twenty-four hours, and a moon is a month. There is also a midmoon, when the sun is at 12 o'clock meridian. This hour is indicated by pointing overhead.

When an Indian pointed quarter way up the sky he meant 9 o'clock; when he pointed quarter way down he meant 3 o'clock. Sunrise was the eastern horizon and sunset the western.

When there was a moon the time was indicated in the same way as by the sun. Were an Indian asked the distance to a certain place or how far he had come he would say so many sleeps, or days' travel. A sleep, as describing distance, was about thirty-five miles when walking deliberately or from fifty to seventy-five miles if going in haste with a message.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The First Atlas.

The first modern atlas was the work of Abraham Ortelius, a Dutch geographer, who died 318 years ago. His monumental treatise, entitled "Theatrum Orbis Terrarum," was first published at Antwerp in 1570 and was revised and reissued five times during the author's lifetime. It was a folio volume containing nearly a hundred maps, representing the different countries and continents as they were then known. Although this atlas was a momentous achievement, yet a bright schoolboy today could draw maps from memory with a better approximation to correctness. Even England and Scotland appear in this pioneer volume with amazing distortions of coast line and relative area, and many other maps in the volume bear only a slight resemblance to those of today.—New York World.

An Ant That Spins.

The spinning ant is found in India, in Ceylon, in the islands of Malacca and in Australia. This ant weaves its nest between two leaves of a tree, preferably the mango. It begins to build or to weave by drawing two leaves together. To do this it runs a line of its working material—material similar to the spider's thread—the length of the leaf and around it. While at work it clings to the leaf with its nails and at the same time draws on the leaf nearest to it with its mandibles. Sometimes the two leaves suitable for nest building are too far apart; then the builder calls in its fellow ants, and they help to form a chain. Each ant clings to the waist of its neighbor by its mandibles. Thus enchained, they work to build the nest of their comrade.

That Indefinite Article.

The rule dealing with the indefinite article preceding words commencing with "u" (when pronounced "yu") does not appear to be an adamantine one. Like Macaulay, with his fondness for "an" university, many of our best writers and speakers prefer to ignore the rule and back their fancy in this little question of euphony. As for the man in the street, the matter has long ago been settled in favor of "a" in all cases where the initial "u" has the "yu" sound, partly no doubt because such phrases as "an united people" do not come trippingly off the tongue and have an old fashioned, pedantic flavor. And there are sensitive ears that will prefer "a unique" to the more studied "an unique."—London Chronicle.

One View of the Study of Latin.

If one does not study things because they "train the mind," why, then, should one study them? The answer is extraordinarily simple. One studies things because they serve a purpose. I do not say, mark you, a useful purpose, but a purpose—a valid purpose, a genuine purpose, not a make believe purpose.

Mental discipline is not a valid or genuine purpose—it's a make believe. Meanwhile the number of purposes, of genuine, valid purposes, is simply infinite. Learning to read Vergil is, of course, just as valid a purpose as learning to play a symphony or learning to bake a pumpkin pie. The test is, however, not, Did the student get mental discipline? but Can he read and enjoy Vergil? Can he play the symphony? Will some one eat the pie?

And because people rarely care to read Vergil, because almost none of the thousands who study Latin ever can or do read Vergil, therefore, in so far as they are concerned, studying Latin has no purpose and cannot be defended as mental discipline.—Abraham Flexner in Atlantic Monthly.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

In grinding valves should the valve be rotated in only one direction, or should it be rotated back and forth without changing its position on the valve seat very materially?

Since the object of the grinding is to make the valve seat tightly and smoothly on its seat around its entire circumference, the valve should be rotated in both directions with a uniform motion and from time to time during the process should be lifted and shifted on the seat so that all points will be ground evenly.

My car is equipped with a double ignition system, and I am using one storage battery for starting on battery, electric horn, rear lamp, two dash lamps and one lamp inside of the car. As I have another battery, will you please tell me how I can wire up these two batteries so that when one runs down I can switch on the other without taking one out or changing over any wires?

Presumably one terminal of your battery is grounded by a wire connecting it to the frame. In fitting the second battery it will be necessary to see that the corresponding terminal is grounded—that is to say, if you ground the negative terminal on the first battery it must be the negative terminal on the second battery that is also grounded. You can then readily use one battery or another by shifting over the wire attached to the positive terminal. To introduce a switch take the present battery wired to the middle point of a two way switch and bring two wires from the two batteries, attaching them to the other two contacts of the switch. Then by throwing the switch either one way or the other you can use either battery. The connections are precisely the same as these employed for an ignition switch which gives you either battery or magneto.

In lubricating the spring leaves of a car how far can they be spread before danger of breakage?

To lubricate spring leaves the car should be jacked up by the frame and not by the axle. Lifting the car by the frame will cause the spring to expand, and when the wheel is off the ground the weight of the axle will tend to pull the spring open. Under these conditions the leaves can be spread apart quite wide. Exactly how far apart it is safe to spread them depends upon the design of the spring and a great many other factors. The best way to lubricate the leaves is to use an old steel table knife which can be dipped in the grease and then rubbed between the leaves and you will find it is only necessary to spread the leaves a very small amount to allow the knife to be inserted. The less the leaves are spread the better it is for the spring.

Will you please describe the operation of burning carbon out of cylinders?

The carbon which is deposited in the cylinders will not burn in air, but it will burn in pure oxygen gas. The operation of burning out cylinders is to direct a jet of oxygen gas into the cylinders. At the commencement of the operation a little ordinary gas is injected also. This burns in the oxygen and quickly heats the carbon to a point where it begins to burn by itself. The gas is then turned off and oxygen alone is fed, the carbon continuing to burn until it is entirely consumed. As soon as the carbon is burned off the cylinder or piston, combustion ceases, so very little heat is generated.

How does a dual exhaust operate?

You are probably thinking of the design of an exhaust manifold fitted to a few four cylinder engines. In these the four exhaust ports are connected alternately to a pair of pipes which are often integral in a single casting. The two passages become one at the point where the exhaust pipe is attached. The idea is that if cylinder No. 1 has just exhausted and cylinder No. 3 is the next in order it is an advantage to prevent the exhaust from No. 1 from interfering in any way with the exhaust from No. 3. If No. 3 exhaust passes into a separate passage the effect of the exhaust from No. 1 passing down the exhaust pipe may actually exert a suction on the exhaust from No. 3, whereas with the ordinary manifold it can create a back pressure. Thus a dual exhaust consists of dividing the manifold so that the four cylinders exhaust alternately first into one passage in the manifold and then into the other. The same system is sometimes used on six cylinder motors, using an exhaust pipe for each block of three cylinders.

Is rainwater better to use in the radiator of a car than hard water?

Yes; rainwater is better because, containing no lime, it can throw down no deposit in the cylinder or in the radiator.

I have a tire without a size marked on it. How can I tell the size?

Measure the interior diameter from the point where the two beads come together up to the inside of the top of the tire. This will give the small dimension. The large diameter is obtained by adding twice this dimension to the diameter across the inside of the beads.

Can you tell me something about the most popular methods of engine lubrication?

There are seven common forms of motor lubrication. The simplest is the full splash system, in which dippers on the lower ends of the connecting rods splash oil from pools in the bottom of the crank case into the cylinders and bearings. Part of the oil is fed to the crank shaft bearings through bored holes above the dippers, part is splashed on to the walls of the cylinders and lubricates the cylinders, pistons and piston rings, and another part is splashed into the hollow pistons where it collects under the piston heads and drops through slots cut in the upper ends of the rods and lubricates the wrist pins. The cam shaft bearings catch the oil in pockets and feed it through holes bored in them to the bearings. Another system is the splash with circulating pump. The oil is drawn from the reservoir in the sump of the motor or from a separate reservoir sometimes employed by a circulating pump and delivered to a trough extending the full length of the crank case. From the trough the oil overflows into separate depressions in the trough, and the dippers on the connecting rods splash the oil from these depressions. Lubrication is gained in the same way as in the full splash system described above.

In the pump over and splash system the oil is drawn from a reservoir in the pump of the motor by a circulating pump and forced through tubes leading to pockets from whence it feeds by gravity to the main bearings. Part of the oil circulated by the pump is sometimes discharged over the distributing gears for their lubrication. Another part of the oil is forced by the pump into a trough such as is used in the splash with circulating pump system described above, and lubrication is brought about in the same way. After having passed through the various bearings the oil is returned to the sump, through a strainer, where it enters the circulating pump and travels its route again.

The force feed and splash system is similar. Oil is forced from the sump under pressure through tubes to the main bearings. Another part of the lubricant is forced into a trough under the connecting rods, and lubrication is carried on as described in the two systems just mentioned.

In the pump over system splash is entirely done away with. Oil is fed from the circulating pump through tubes into pockets, from whence it feeds by gravity to the main bearings. Oil from the main bearings is thrown by centrifugal force through ducts bored in the crank shaft to the crank pin bearings. The oil escaping from each side of the crank pin bearings is thrown off in all directions, thus lubricating the cylinders, pistons and rings. Another part is thrown into the hollow pistons, where it collects under the piston heads and drops through slots cut in the upper ends of the connecting rods, thus lubricating the wrist pins.

In the separate force feed system a lubricator, driven by chains or gears, is attached to the side of the crank case. The oil is forced under pressure through tubes leading from the outside lubricator to the main bearings, and the motor is oiled in the same manner as in the pump over system. The oil is fed at its rate of consumption and is not returned to the lubricator.

In what is known as the force feed system oil is forced from a circulating pump under pressure through tubes to the main bearings, and part of the oil from the front main bearing feeds into a basin in which the crank shaft gear dips. This gear splashes oil on to the other distributing gears. The surplus oil in this basin overflows and returns to the pump. The oil under pressure escapes from each side of the crank pin bearings and is thrown off in all directions, lubricating the cylinders, pistons, rings and wrist pins. In this system the connecting rods do not dip in the oil.

The full force feed system is the type where every bearing is lubricated under pressure from the circulating pump. Wrist pins are hollowed, and oil is forced to them through tubes on the sides of the connecting rods or through the center of the rods. This same tube forces oil to the cylinders, pistons and rings.

To have carbon removed from an engine, is it advisable to have it burned out, or is this injurious to the motor?

There is no harmful result in burning carbon from a motor. The job cannot be as thoroughly satisfactory as having the motor torn down and the carbon scraped, however.

How can I tell if my connecting rod bearing is all right? Is it possible to do this with a hammer? Should it run somewhat tightly when testing by hand—that is, when I turn the crank shaft over?

With a little experience you should be able to tap the bearing cap lightly with a hammer and tell if there is any play. It should not run too tightly, but snugly, so that the shaft can be rocked by hand when the compression is relieved by opening the petcocks.

Campaign Managers Now Cover the Country by Telephone.

Who will be our next president? President Wilson and Mr. Hughes are the men most directly concerned in the answer, and each has chosen a manager to conduct the campaign for him. It has been asserted that the candidates are very much alike in character. There is a striking similarity in their campaign managers also in one respect at least. Both Mr. McCormick and Mr. Willcox are firm believers in the telephone as a vote-getter. Our pictures show these two men "in action," and from now until Election Day the telephone wires will hum in the greatest contest by telephone that has ever been waged.

country, which have come within the past four years, will enable these two astute and able political managers to direct their respective lieutenants, receive reports, and gauge public sentiment more quickly and accurately than has ever been possible heretofore. Every important city in the country is now within easy voice communication, and a word over the wire may save a situation which otherwise would possibly cost a State's electoral vote.—The Telephone Review, N. A Voice Across the Telephone.

A voice across the telephone
May make or mar the day,
Be careful of the tone you use,
And think on what you say.
Your pleasant smile cannot be seen
Or known your kindly heart,
For people on the telephone
Are often miles apart.

The girl who answers, central,
Has a score of lines to mind,
Mistakes are sure to happen,
So be patient and be kind.
For life is like a garden,
Where our daily acts are grown,
And as nature has ordained it
We shall reap as we have sown.

Then sow a smile and reap a smile,
And in the end you'll find
That nothing pays more interest
Than the art of being kind.

BUY IT IN PLAINFIELD

If YOU spend your money AT HOME with HOME MERCHANTS you get a second chance at that same old dollar; when that dollar goes out of town, it's—"Good-bye Mary."

A dollar is no "carrier pigeon." Send it away and it will never come back. Keep Plainfield made money in Plainfield.

Consider the power of a dollar when it is spent at home. It is like magic. It circulates—it pays off a hundred obligations—it creates business and puts people to work in this community. But the dollar sent away to an out-of-town house does nothing for Plainfield—it is dead to us—out of commission forever as far as we are concerned.

There are only two kinds of dollars—the "Dollar With Wings" and the "Development Dollar."

The "Dollar with Wings" flies away with a value that rightfully belongs to the home community. If spent with a Plainfield Merchant its value would stay with you and help to build up your interests.

The "Development Dollar" goes to build up Plainfield. It stays right here in our own community—it puts people to work here—builds roads and schools and churches and homes.

No matter what your position in life may be, some of its benefits "filter" down to you. "Letting George do it" is poor logic. We want YOU to cultivate the "Try Plainfield First" habit.

COL. COLGATE VISITS NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

Gubernatorial Candidate is Conducting Whirlwind Campaign.

Newark, Sept. 7.—That Colonel Austen Colgate is endowed with the qualifications essential to a whirlwind campaigner is evidenced by the strenuous work he has been doing during the last few weeks in the various counties. With the aid of that invaluable modern adjunct to campaigning, the automobile, he has jumped from county to county with surprising alacrity, having visited as many as eight counties in a single day.

This week he is confining his activities to the northern part of the State, addressing noonday and evening meetings and handshaking all along the line. On Monday he reviewed at the City Hall, Newark, with Mayor Raymond and Franklin Murphy, chairman of the Newark Celebration Committee of One Hundred, the biggest Labor Day parade ever held in New Jersey. Later in the day he made a brief tour in Bergen county, reviewing with Mayor Philip Obenhuber, a parade of Bergen and Passaic county firemen at Carlstadt. This evening Colonel Colgate will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given at Krueger Auditorium, Newark, by the Italian-American Republicans of Essex County.

In his talks to voters Colonel Colgate has taken up with considerable attention to detail various important questions in connection with State affairs. He has dwelt particularly upon the necessity of adequate development and proper maintenance of the State road system as of especial importance to the rural districts and to the automobilists, as well as to all who are interested in the promotion of trade, commerce and industry, the improvement of channel and harbor facilities; the desirability of early steps being taken to insure the construction of the proposed ship canal from the Delaware river to Raritan Bay; the urgent need of a concerted popular demand for an equable system of freight rates for points in northern New Jersey as compared with Greater New York, and the proper conservation and development of the State's natural resources.

"It goes without saying," Colonel Colgate has said in different speeches "that I am for business administration."

In most of his talks he has dwelt upon the necessity of electing the National Republican ticket in order to safeguard the country from possible disaster following the European war. He characterizes Hughes as "an ideal candidate, who combines all the virtues of all the Presidents."

"What a Splendid Collar!" Was the First Thing a Women Said of One of Our Suits

Her next exclamation was at the low price, $35.00.

We are proud ourselves of this suit, which is of soft velour, the coat cut along the new Russian lines, falling quite to the knee. At the waistline the fulness is shirred on straps, which appear at front and back and turn themselves into narrow belts.

The wide collar is of beaver. You may wear it spread over your shoulders or crushed up about your ears, as the thermometer dictates.

On the cuffs are bands of the same popular fur.

And buttons in self tones give an effective finish.

One of a very clever group at $35.00.

Two Days More of the Summer Sale of Furs

A beautiful Hudson seal coat with its broad coachman collar of genuine skunk, is one of the sale's great items.

It costs $115.00.

You have two more days in which to buy it at this price.

It is a becoming style, the pelts splendidly put together, with a brocaded silk lining that every woman will approve.

A very low price for so much worth.

Hudson seal coats, full flaring, of good skins, well made, $79.50.

Hudson seal coats with large "Rialto" collars, priced at $99.50.

SOLITUDE.

NOMINATE COLGATE TO WIN.

Contests between candidates for the Republican nomination for Council in the four wards will be watched with more than passing interest this year because of the introduction of the prohibition question. It is probable that the liveliest primary fight for local offices that has ever been held will be the result. In making the fight, however, we hope that the local issues will not become so prominent that the anti-license advocates will forget to look into the record of the Republican candidates for Governor. We sincerely hope that they will fully understand what Walter E. Edge has stood for in the way of open Sundays and similar legislation. He is being hailed along the shore as the "man who knows what the shore resorts want," and if we are to have a Republican candidate for Governor who favors a letting down, rather than a tightening up, of the bars in the handling of the liquor gambling, and similar traffic, the resulting situation will be one which will be of more serious moment than the mere question of whether this one community shall or shall not have saloons.

The Daily Press is opposed to the nomination of Mr. Edge. It does not believe that if he is nominated he can be elected against H. Otto Wittpenn. He comes from a county which has been notorious because of the flagrant disregard of the law in times past, and during all those years, through his newspapers, he has never declared in favor of law enforcement, but has defended the rotten conditions which existed, as being necessary to a resort community such as Atlantic City.

George L. Record, who also seeks the Republican nomination, declares that if he is chosen he will drive the railroad and corporation interests and the brewers out of politics. Just how he proposes to do so he fails to state. In all his long political career he has been quick to get on what he considers the band wagon of popular approval, regardless of whether he believes in what he says or not, so long as he gets the votes. He has run for office time and time again in his home county of Hudson and has always been decisively defeated. His presence in the campaign this year, or next year, or any other year, can be traced to his desire to promote some "ism" or other in which he may be interested for the moment, and not because he has any thought that he will be successful. He represents the ultra-radical element.

Colonel Austen Colgate, the third candidate for the Republican nomination, is the strongest man that the party can put forward, and the only one who has a chance of being elected against Mr. Wittpenn. He is the only candidate who can get a big vote in Essex and Hudson counties, and he has the support of a large part of the independent element in the Republican party who would not vote for Edge or Record under any circumstances. That much is admitted by men who are avowedly in favor of the nomination of either of the latter. His experience in legislative matters is fully as extensive as that of Mr. Edge, and greater than that of Mr. Record, the latter never having been chosen for any office by the vote of the people.

Although always progressive in politics, Mr. Colgate did not leave the Republican party in 1912. He was one of the original Colby, or "new-idea" assemblymen, when the first insurrection came in the Republican party, and he will receive the vote of practically all of the returned Progressives in the primary, because they look to him as the one candidate who can best administer the office of Governor in case he is elected.

Colonel Colgate is a clean man personally. His work in charitable and church organizations, in helping all worthy causes, and the fact that in all the years he has been in business in Jersey City his firm has never had labor trouble or dissatisfaction of any kind among its employes, all testify to his worth as a man. We sincerely hope that our good friends who are advocating prohibition here will not stop with councilmanic candidates, but will take fully as active an interest in the candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. The State of New Jersey needs a man of the Colgate type to succeed Governor James F. Fielder, who, by the way, has made an excellent chief executive.

THE WAYS OF AN "EXPERT."

We hope that every taxpayer in the city of Plainfield has read the statement of City Treasurer William F. Arnold printed in the local papers of yesterday in which Mr. Arnold answers criticism directed at his office by the "experts" who recently made a report on the municipal government. While it is probable that only a few will ever read the report of the "experts" others will hear of the misstatements made concerning his work and it is only fair to him that the explanation be heard by all, for the handling of the people's money is the most vital question that can concern a citizen. The man who investigated Mr. Arnold's office probably reported on conditions with an honest desire to be of service, but it was a case of bunglers rushing in where financiers would have feared to tread. No competent municipal expert, with practical experience in handling the finances of a city of any size, would have dared criticise on such a scale without a complete and thorough examination of the methods used as adapted to local conditions. Treasurer Arnold says the "expert" spent forty-five minutes in his office. If he had been worthy the title he would have hesitated before making such a positive report at the end of a week. Plainfield is not like Elizabeth, Newark, Albany, Scranton or any other city in the world and its ways must suit its people. An official of the fire department here once asked New York's greatest fire chief what kind of apparatus would give the best service at a local station. The New York fire-fighter, recognized as one of the best in the world, said he would not dare express an opinion until he had spent a month in the engine house studying conditions to which the apparatus should be adapted. A municipal financier would not need so much time, perhaps, to study local financial conditions, but one would hardly presume to criticise after forty-five minutes of asking questions.

• • • • • • •

Those who are offering odds that Plainfield will vote "dry" this fall have overlooked the fact that no positive expression of sentiment will be recorded unless there is some change in the campaign plans of the anti-saloon leaders who are seeking to gain control of the Common Council. This element now has a candidate for the Council in each of the four wards of the city, but the candidates are all entered in the Republican primaries. If each should win it would prove that the Republicans of Plainfield are opposed to the renewal of saloon licenses, but unless the majority should be large enough to counteract any possible expression of the Democratic voters it could not be truly stated that the result represented the sentiment of the entire people. This point will hardly have any influence on events which are to follow the election, because it is merely a technical correction of a misunderstanding that is general just now. Perhaps there will be a prohibition contest in the general election so that Democrats will have an opportunity of expressing their sentiment too.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Disconsolate.

I care not how the robins sing,
Their songs mean naught to me;
I care not for the beauteous thing,
It holds for me no glee.

I care not for the green, green grass,
Nor for the balmy breeze;
Nor for the zephyrs that do pass
Among the trees.

I am forlorn as I can be
The future grim and dire;
There is no joy on earth for me,
I've got to buy a tire.

Uncle Abner

Miss Pansy Perkins has gone east to see a beauty specialist. It seems that Miss Perkins was helping with the family washing last Monday and being quite near-sighted stooped over to see if she was feeding a peek-a-bood shirtwaist through the wringer properly. Her nose was caught in the wringer and consideraby flattened out before she stopped turning the crank.

Mr. Ansel Hanks has bought a new home and lot in the last year on his salary of $10 per week in the feed mill and has paid cash. The board of trustees of the Hardshell church has asked him to relinquish his position, which is that of passing the collection plate. The board passed a resolution praising Mr. Hanks' integrity and regretting that his services must be dispensed with on account of his health. Hereafter Rev. Hudnutt will pass the plate himself.

I never yet see a feller that could do his own sewing who amounted to a hill of beans in the business world.

There is only one worse feller than the one who is so radical that he bumps his nose and that is the feller who is so conservative that he falls over backward.

The wise man always agrees with his wife, whether he does or not.

For pure unadulterated nerve nobody has got anything on the feller who takes a cigar out of your vest pocket, lights it up and then tells you where you can get a better one for the same money.

Another prominent contribution to current fiction is the new time table of the railroad that runs through our midst.

Those Street Car War Experts.

"I hope that the Germans whip Austria soon," said the Short Fat Man. "I am getting sick of trying to read the names of those victories to my wife."

"Yes," said the Conductor, "and the guy that dragged Russia into this war against England ought to get a life sentence. The only names in Russia that I can pronounce are Sofia and Nish, and I ain't dead sure about them."

"I learned how to pronounce Copenhagen in school," said the Tall Thin Man, "and I ain't never forgot it, but it is just my luck that Copenhagen ain't in the war."

"Bo, it ain't," agreed the Short Fat Man. "Spain is still out of it."

"Copenhagen ain't in Spain," said the Tall Thin Man. "It is in Greece."

"Copenhagen is in Greenland, up near the north pole, said the Conductor. "That's where Doc Cook discovered all them medals."

"These Indians with the French army seem to be raising a lot of trouble," said the Tall Thin Man. "I thought all the Indians had been killed off excepting them at the Carlisle School."

"What the Kaiser ought to do is to send over here for Buffalo Bill," replied the Short Fat Man.

"End of the line—all out," yelled the Conductor.

No doubt her dress cut very low,
Would seem to be built just for show,
Our modesty, she would not shock it,
So round her neck she wears a locket.

Plainfield Theatre.

Now that the public has had a chance to get an idea as to just what kind of vaudeville shows the Plainfield Theatre is going to run for the benefit of their patrons, the management of the theatre expects to have even larger crowds at the new show today and Saturday than it did for the first part of the week. Although the bill for Tuesday and Wednesday was an excellent one, the five acts for the latter part of the week include a variety of entertainment that should satisfy the majority of local theatre goers. Comedy and drama are varied with feats of skill and strength, with an excellent "movie" program, including a three-reel drama and a comedy, as a finish. Something that savors of the unusual is the act entitled "Memories," that proves entertaining with a little singing, posing, dancing and novelty blended skillfully into one sketch. Wallington & Botti are the principals in a clever little sketch, entitled "At the Railroad Station," while "Some Boy," is a scream from a comedy point of view. The Watson Four combine excellent playing with a skill for entertaining in a musical and singing act. The Wilson and Cecil Sisters wind up the bill in a singing and dancing act.

"Fair and Warmer," that Avery Hopwood farce of infinite fame which ran so long and so successfully at the Eltinge Theatre in New York that every other part of the country was clamoring for it a good six months before Selwyn & Company were able to put it on tour, will be presented tomorrow night at the Plainfield Theatre.

It was by all odds the outstanding success of its season on Broadway, and it had the distinction of having been advertised, during that season only by its audiences. All the advertising which was planned for it before its opening, was left on the shelf when "Fair and Warmer" made such a tremendous success on its first night, that its second night and all nights thereafter were sold out well in advance. It was not till "Fair and Warmer" was put on tour that it became necessary to advertise when it would appear and where.

Mr. Haywood is the author of "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow," and his achievements entitle him to first rank as a farce writer. In "Fair and Warmer" he has taken just the material he knows best how to handle—the farcial complications into which four young persons of widely assorted temperaments and money and time enough to take themselves seriously, pitch themselves headlong because two of their number have been unduly imposing upon the other two, and the latter undertake an unwise scheme of retaliation.

A very good husband discovers that his charming young wife is by way of being a philanderer. A very adorable wife, who lives nearby, finds at about the same time, that her young husband is more gay than domestic. The ill-used pair make common cause of their misery, and vow to be wicked enough to revenge themselves. Since they know so pathetically little about the business of being wicked, they involve themselves in endless woes, and have these woes itensified by seeing their would-be victims airily go free. The three acts of "Fair and Warmer" have not a slack moment.

BREAKING UP THE GAME

- Proctor's Theatre -

At Proctor's, Today.

Theda Bara, acknowledged to be one of the foremost screen stars now before the public and who appeared at Proctor's last Wednesday to capacity business in her latest success, "Under Two Flags," again returns to that popular playhouse today in the same production. The management received innumerable requests for a return engagement of this feature and ever on the alert to please their patrons, arranged for the re-presentation of this production today in addition to the usual big program. The latter consists of Frank Keenan, Charles Ray and Louise Glaum in "Honor Thy Name," one of those finely produced and excellently acted Thomas H. Ince productions. The locale of the story is in the South and centers about a Virginian who holds his family name above all else. Frank Keenan admirably plays the part of the Colonel who sacrifices his own life to the honor of the name of Castleton. The scenario by J. G. Hawks presents some rather novel situations and it is a well devised plot. In addition today an uproariously funny Keystone comedy is presented.

At Proctor's Tomorrow.

Tomorrow Charlie Chaplin inaugurates a two days' sojourn at Proctor's in his latest effort to provoke wholesome hilarity. This new Chaplin comedy is entitled "The Count," and is acknowledged by the majority of critics to be the best Mutual-Chaplin yet produced. Charlie of late has evidently been doing some remarkable research work, for in this latest creation of his he introduces a number of new and novel stunts that will doubtless produce spasms of mirth. Tomorrow the program will include a William A. Brady production entitled "The Summer Girl," starring Mollie King, and the latest Mutual Weekly will also be shown. On Saturday Paramount presents a masterful picturization of Denman Thompson's immortal success, "The Old Homestead," the leading role being assumed by Frank Lossee.

DISEASE SCOURGES CHECKED BY BIRDS

Audubon Society Point Out Value of Swallows as Fly Catchers.

"Don't permit the killing of swallows, chimney swifts or flycatchers, including the common, well known phoebe and kingbird in fact practically all the birds are well worth saving," says the New Jersey Audubon Society. This summer's outbreak of that little understood and baffling malady, infantile paralysis, emphasizes anew, the importance of birds to man, in a channel to which little attention has been paid. Recently indications have pointed to flies particularly the so-called "bluebottle" and carrion-eating flies, as carriers of this disease, and the established record of flies as known sources of spreading other contagious diseases lends probability to the suggestion.

Many birds are greedy feeders on flies of all sorts, those above named being pre-eminently so. The nighthawk, too, and the whip-poor-will, with bats, take up in the growing twilight of evening and the pre-dawn morning hours, this fly catching labor so successfully pursued by their diurnal fellow hunters.

"While we have State laws protecting all of these birds," says the secretary of the Audubon Society, at his office in Demarest, "and although such laws are well enforced in the main, and the society has succeeded in stopping the use of bird plumage for millinery purposes, and has done much educational work, much still remains to be done. Right here in Demarest, only a few days ago, two boys were throwing stones at the swallows on the telegraph wires and succeeded in knocking one of the birds down. This was not a peculiarly exceptional occurrence. It goes on, more or less, everywhere. Very many of these immensely valuable birds, that save our foliage and crops, and act as a check on the spread of disease, are annually killed. Laws alone, and the best possible enforcement of them, will not prevent a great deal of such killing. What is necessary is constantly continued and increased education, and in this work the society greatly needs a more active and appreciative support on the part of the intelligent people of New Jersey. Natural checks alone must, of course never be expected to prevent disease, but if we conserve rather than destroy such checks, it stands to reason the results will be appreciable."

INTERESTING NOTES CONCERNING MILLINERY.

Modified Pokes Shown in Variety. Close Fitting Models Also Good. Untrimmed Sailors Bounded With Braid Favored.

By Mary Glynn.

It is not surprising that a storm of new ideas in the world of millinery has suddenly come to light after the lapse between seasons which is almost traditional. It is during this time that the sailor comes to light in slightly varied line, then gradually is replaced by newer and more authentic styles. This season seems to be no decided or set style, for already there are fascinating pokes, tam-o-shanters, medium and large hats, and each has a special feature that makes it fashionable and attractive. In the semi-tailored styles the Continental and Marquise shapes are exceptionally smart, and the fact that they are trimmed with bindings of braids adds to their trim smartness. The panne velvet hats are well represented, these being in small medium and large shapes, according to the degree of dressiness evident. The trimmings used on these models vary from novelty, buttons, braid lace, to fur, feathers of either the barnyard or ostrich types. Distinctly novel are the striped felts that Paris has just originated and the deep crowned and broad brimmed models. There's a type of hat for every face, consequently there is a great possibility that most women will be becomingly garbed as far as her hat is concerned.

VOILE GOWNS FOR AFTERNOON.

Plain Colors Brightened Only by a Soft Yoke of Cream Lace—Bindings of Self Material an Interesting Note.

By Mary Glynn.

The vogue for dark and sombre-toned gowns is steadily growing, and this, no doubt, is due to the fact that so often these garments can be adapted for any occasion. For street and restaurateur wear they are both smart and appropriate. The suburbanite can come to town and do her shopping and then attend the afternoon bridge party feeling that she is suitably garbed in one of these garments. Especially smart are the voile gowns that may be had in navy, brown, and plum shades. The foundation is usually taffeta or soiree silk in matching tone. Particularly attractive is a gown of navy blue voile which is featured with rather short skirt, the bottom of which is looped up in pocket effect. These pockets are edged with a ruffle of navy soiree silk, this lending a curious rippling trimming which is most attractive. The bodice is extremely simple with deep "V" neck relieved by the cream lace yoke. The sleeves are long and are deeply cuffed with soiree silk.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Why Six Mermaid Sisters Cut Off Their Hair.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

JACK and Evelyn clapped and clapped for daddy, so he told them a bedtime story about a young prince who married a land princess instead of a mermaid princess who loved him very dearly. "The night of the wedding the bridal party all made merry," daddy began, "all but the little mermaid. When all became still and only the helmsman stayed awake she stood with her white arms on the gunwale looking east, for well she knew that the first strip of pink meant dawn and her own death. The old sea witch who had granted her wish to become a land maiden had willed that the prince's marriage to any one but the mermaid would turn her into sea foam, you see.

"Well, just before the first sunbeam began to gleam, what did the little mermaid see but her six sisters rising above water. They were as pale as she was, and their beautiful long hair no longer floated on the waves, for it had all been cut off.

"'We gave it to the sea witch in order to get help for you!' they cried to their sister. 'We did it so you may not die tonight. The witch gave us this knife. See how sharp it is! Before the sun rises you must plunge it into the prince's heart, and when his warm blood sprinkles your feet they will join together and become a fish's tail again. Once more you will be a mermaid. You will be able to come back down to the bottom of the sea and live out your life of 300 years before you are turned into dead salt sea foam. Make haste! Either you or he must die at sunrise. Our old grandmother is so full of grief for you that her white hair fell off as ours fell under the sea witch's scissors. Slay the prince and come back to us. Quick! Do you not see that rosy streak in the sky?' They sighed and sank into the sea.

"The little mermaid crept back to deck and drew aside the purple tent where the beautiful bride slept with her head on the prince's breast. She bent over and kissed him on his forehead. She looked at the sky where the dawn was fast spreading, and she looked at the sharp knife. Then she looked again at the prince, and even in his sleep his lips whispered the name of his bride.

"For a moment the knife quivered in the little mermaid's hand, and then she threw it far out among the waves now rosy with morning light, and where it fell the water bubbled up like drops of blood. Once more she glanced at the prince. Then she dashed overboard, and as she fell her body changed into foam."

"Oh, daddy, what a beautiful mermaid!" cried the children.

Training a Husband

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

For the First Time in Twelve Years Morris Admits a Mistake.

[illegible] after Marian had her talk [illegible] husband the atmosphere [illegible] more endurable in the [illegible] household. The wind seemed to [illegible] veered and a thaw was noticeable in Morris' icy demeanor. Marian heaved a sigh of relief and congratulated herself that her efforts had not been in vain. The machinery of living seemed better oiled.

"Now is the time to speak about the boys' shoes," thought the anxious mother.

"Morris I believe I had better take the boys down to buy some school shoes. I have a little time this afternoon." Marian stood in the open door of the study. Morris looked up from his writing and a spasm of exasperation crossed his face.

"Please do not interrupt me now; I am very busy," he begged.

"I will not interrupt you long. I only want the money to pay for them. It is nearly the opening of school and of course the superintendent's children cannot go with shabby shoes. That will never do."

"Of course not." Morris passed his hand wearily over his forehead. "It seems as if there was a couple of pairs of shoes to buy every week or two," he groaned.

"Yes, shoes are our biggest expense," agreed Marian. "I cannot make over their shoes," she smiled bravely.

"Our moving and settling expenses have drained me dry, and it will be the first of October before we have any more money. We simply cannot get shoes until the first check comes in." Morris turned to his writing. The thing was settled.

"There are two alternatives then," persisted the practical mother. "Either they must stay out of school the first month, or we must run a bill for shoes." She sat down on a chair by the door, for the conference threatened to be a long one.

"If this is not enough to drive a man crazy," Morris sprang to his feet and began to pace the floor. "We can't begin to get things charged. We simply can't. It looks so—so like what it really is—dire poverty."

"Oh, we are not so bad off, Morris. Your salary is not large, but we can live on it. We will not have moving expenses every year. I do not see much disgrace in getting the shoes and having them charged. It certainly is better than having the boys out of school for a month. Besides it will be too cold to have them go till October barefooted." The cheerfulness was mostly assumed, for Marian knew that it would take all of September's salary to pay the bills and get the children ready for winter; then there was the winter's fuel to pay for.

"Well, shall I get the shoes charged?" she asked, rising.

"Oh, I suppose so. You insist on running things your own way anyway," he blurted out.

"Morris, that is not fair. I came here for advice in an emergency that I did not create and I will not be talked to in that way." Marian had faced around to her husband.

"That was unfair." He reached out his hand to her. She took it and bent and kissed him. Her heart gave a bound of happiness. This was the first time he had owned himself in the wrong in the twelve years she had known him.

"You are very tired; just worn out. Can't you stop now and rest awhile? You must get yourself in shape for the year's work." She pushed the thin hair back from his hot forehead. "Half of your trouble comes from pushing yourself too far."

"I know it, but how can I help it? I am not earning enough to properly keep my family as it is," he sighed.

"Keeping up this high tension endangers your health. Go and rest a little while; then you can work enough better to pay for the lost time." Marian smiled over her shoulder as she left the room.

GEOMETRY ON THE BROILER.

As a Study It Is Pretty Well Roasted by This Caustic Critic.

Euclid is a gentleman from whom credentials ought to be required. He has long held a prominent place in education as a matter of tradition. "Just why should John and Sally study plane geometry, and indeed how does it come about that they are studying it?" That is a question which cannot be put too plainly to teachers of mathematics.

I shall consider for a moment two possible answers: Geometry is useful, you may be told, or geometry affords excellent mental discipline. Geometry is useful. Well, how useful and in what ways? Professor David E. Smith, professor of the teaching of mathematics in Teachers' college, tells us, "Not more than 25 per cent of the propositions (in geometry) have any genuine applications outside of geometry." And a distinguished physicist has assured me that the 75 per cent of propositions that are of no use are not even needed to prove the 25 per cent that are of some use. The teachers of plane geometry have therefore a very considerable task if they are going to justify the time spent on geometry on the ground that geometry is useful.

Nor is their task easier if they take the other horn of the dilemma. Suppose one did get "mental discipline" from geometry. Is it the sort of mental discipline that life calls for and gives?

Geometry as taught is a deductive science. That is, from certain assumptions called axioms and postulates a long series of propositions is developed. If the study of geometry really developed that kind of thinking, whom would it help but lawyers? For practical life calls for a very different type of thinking.

In actual life people observe, or they should observe, and on this basis make a limited inference which leads to action. If the action taken fails, they observe further, construct other hypotheses and act again. It is the method of trial on error.

If there is to be any mental discipline, ought it not to be of the type represented by science rather than the type represented by the conventional treatment of geometry? — Abraham Flexner in Atlantic Monthly.

All About Ships.

Here is a boy's composition on ships: "Ships are useful for going to foreign countries to teach savages how to dress. If there were no ships people would not go to the museum to see models. Sailors are very busy men and are always chewing tobacco to prevent seasickness. Poets get a living with writing about ships." — Chicago News.

THE IDLE FOOT WAS TIRED.

A lady, according to a recent writer was watching a potter at his work. One foot was kept with never slackening speed turning his swift wheel around, while the other rested patiently on the ground. When the lady said to him, in a sympathetic tone, "How tired your foot must be," the man raised his eyes and said, "No, ma'am, it is not the foot that works that is tired, it is the foot that stands. That's it."

If you want to keep your strength use it. If you want to get tired, do nothing. As a matter of fact, we all know that the last man to go to for a helping hand for any new undertaking is the man who has plenty of time on his hands. It is the man and woman who are always doing most who are always willing to do a little more.—The Nurse.

RESTLESSNESS.

"Don't you understand that children ought to be restless? That if they are not active and troublesomely alive you ought to call in an expert to know whether their brains are normal? Don't you know they grow both mentally and physically through their incessant bodily motion? Have you never been told that by the constant repression of children the brain centres are paralyzed? A fresh idea drops through the senses into the mind of a little child. The brain seizes upon it and assimilates it. Then the impulse comes to do something with it—put it to use—and so complete the thought. But here comes in the older person who is incommoded by the child's activity. 'Don't,' he says. The impulse is arrested, the thought never completed, the brain centre injured for life. This happens to most children daily, hourly sometimes, and then we complain that our older boys and girls have no mental power, no originality."

"MOTHER AND SON."

But the greatest means of all in the mother's bringing of the son into real largeness of life is personal association. The boy grows like those with whom he constantly is, to whom he looks in admiration and love, and who gives themselves unstintedly to him. The way in which a child plays "grown-up," is often a most suggestive commentary on the quality of the personal life by which he is surrounded. But the law of personal association, like the law of habit, should be an encouragement to mothers rather than a discouragement. It is a great power put in their hands. For it means that if the personal associations of the home are what they ought to be, and if reasonable care is taken concerning other personal associations, the boy is not likely to fall below the level he has known. But the mother must be willing to pay the price of the genuine giving of herself to her son. And the spirit of her own life must be as worthy as she wishes her son's to be. If she hates sham and pretense, he will respond to that ideal.—Delineator.

CONCENTRATION.

There has been a good deal said, first and last, in pedagogical circles about concentration through desire—that is, getting interest and attention through doing what you want to do—and there is much to be said for this idea. But concentration which is based upon desire fails when desire fails. Concentration which lasts is based upon a disciplined will, and a trained will is acquired, so far as I have observed, by one process only, namely, the constant facing of matters which have both the imperative of interest and necessity behind them. With children's minds the imperative, sufficiently developed, causes intellectual cravings which amount to a necessity by and by, and almost automatically compel attention and concentration upon the things which are before the mind.

Concentration through the trained will is the secret of all successful self-organization. A. A. BERLE.

PHILADELPHIA AND PENNANTS.

In the National League a three-cornered race for the flag is on. The Brooklyn Dodgers, who led the league for some time, now seem to be cracking under the strain, although they exhibited wonderful ambition and ability in their tilt with the Giants on Tuesday. The Boston Braves are by no means out of the running and content themselves with battling blindly upward. But Pat Moran and his Phillies are proving the sensation. Pat is leading his boys to the top in great fashion and expects to carry off the bunting. Alexander has been doing the brunt of the pitching, being ably assisted by the Rixey, Demaree, Chalmers trio. Joe Oscheger, who has been recently recalled from Providence, can be counted on to add his mite to the pitching treasury. Joe is a man who can be depended on and possesses, in addition to curves, a well trained mind. Fans are rapidly coming to the conclusion that, if the Phillies do win the pennant, they will show up exceedingly well in the World Series. That they would be favorites over any one of the American League teams cannot be true, because there is a standing belief that every American League team is stronger than the corresponding National League aggregation. Perhaps this belief had its origin from the fact that American League teams have been more or less successful in their tilts with the National League outfits. But it is hard to believe that should the Phils and Red Sox get together in the coming World Series the Red Sox would be the favorites—or the winners, either. Still, the race is comparatively young yet. Perhaps the Superbas, the Braves and even the Giants may upset the well-formulated plans of one Patrick Moran.

THE MERKLE DEAL.

Fred Merkle, after serving the New York Giants faithfully for years, is now the property of Brooklyn and will be forced to sit on the bench and wait for another accident to befall Jake Daubert. True, Merkle will probably get some of the World Series money, but there is no certainty to the statement that the Dodgers will be in the series. It would appear that Merkle is being neglected by baseball in general. Jake Daubert is back on the job and poor old Fred will have to watch the games from the side lines. Meanwhile the Giants and Johnny McGraw plod along with a recruit on the initial sack.

JUST TY COBB.

The greatest baseball player in the world is Tyrus Raymond Cobb. To the fans he is just "Ty Cobb;" to the magnates he is a source of wealth. Cobb is one of the greatest drawing cards there is. He is almost as well known as Miss Mary Pickford, although he has not been in the habit of employing publicity agents. But the fans do not treat Cobb kindly. At least the fans of New York city do not treat him in the manner that they should. He is often "hooted" and is never wished luck. The fact that he has been guilty of several imprudent stunts in New York has made him disliked by the fans. Even the kids are beginning to think "Ty" a joke. But still Tyrus Raymond is the greatest player in the world and is one of the best drawing cards. What's the answer.

R. NORRIS WILLIAMS WINS.

"Again the national singles tennis title comes back to the East, but strange to say, there is no joy in making the announcement, no thrill, no triumphant exultation over the successful ending of a sectional rivalry. There is no sectional rivalry, no local pride, as in baseball, football, soccer—in fact, as in nearly all sports. Tennis is a game of personalities, it would seem—a game in which the crowd picks its favorites—a redheaded, dashing, smiling McLoughlin; a quiet, unobtrusive, pleasant Williams; a handsome, jolly, blond Murray; a stocky, good-natured Griffin.

"A cold, distant Church, even with his wonderful agility and superlative skill, cannot capture the crowd, and the scarcely concealed hostility of the gallery is a handicap. Kumagae, the dark-skinned Japanese, had this to contend with. So did Washburn and others in a lesser degree. They were personally agreeable fellows, but they couldn't get the crowd and were victims of the crowd's partizanship.

"This gripping, personal feeling which abounds in a big tennis tournament explains why some of the women wept the other day when McLoughlin's hopes were dashed to bits. It explains, too, why there was a tense concentration in yesterday's long struggle between Johnston and Williams, a series of thrills, a constant fluctuation of expressed emotions that the referee couldn't control by repeated cautioning."—Newark News.

BILL SHOULD WORRY.

Bill Carrigan has less to worry over than Wilbert Robinson, for his two strongest contenders, St. Louis and Detroit, are to lock horns in Detroit. One of these clubs is likely to be counted entirely out of the race in this series. In Chicago, also, the White Sox and Cleveland Indians will go to the mat, and one of these clubs will stand the chance of taking a death wallop.

FULTON TO BATTLE FLYNN.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 7.—Twin City fight fans are looking forward to seeing a lively setto at the Minneapolis Boxing Club tomorrow night, when Fred Fulton, the big Minnesota battler, and Porky Flynn, the Boston heavyweight, come together for a scheduled ten-round bout. Fulton and Flynn are regarded as two of the best heavies in the American ring today. The meeting tomorrow night will be the second time they have faced one another in the ring. Their first encounter took place in New Orleans last spring. After a gruelling battle of twenty rounds in which honors were fairly even, Fulton was awarded the decision by Referee Tommy Burns.

HARVARD STARTS PRACTICE.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 7.—Varsity football practice started at Harvard today. This is the earliest start the Crimson gridiron clan has ever made. The early date was decided upon by Field Coach Leary in view of the fact that the Harvard schedule for the coming season is one of the heaviest in many years. There is also the necessity of filling many positions on the team, owing to the withdrawal of so many of the prominent stars of last year's eleven.

ROYAL GIANTS SET CONTRACTS ASIDE

But Then, Paper Makes Good Fuel for Civic Furnaces.

Very few fans are aware of the fact that they have in their midst a baseball player who has turned down several good offers to play in fast company. Such is the case, however, although the announcement was made in private. To make the fact public will not injure anyone. Hence, we begin.

"Tune" Kline, a pitcher and outfielder of the Royal A. C., of this city, has performed with the Newark and Jersey City Colored Giants. He was too fast for each of these teams. But while playing with one of the clubs, his work was witnessed by a scout for the Royal Giants of New York City. "Tune" was offered a contract, which he declined to sign. It's just like this. Baseball is a summer sport. And, gentlemen, we have to eat in the winter. Hence, Mr. Kline could not see where he would profit by giving up an all year position to accept a baseball offer covering a few months in the summer. Sam Houston, the manager of the Philadelphia Colored Giants, also offered the local lad a contract. But Mr. Houston's team plays only on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. "Tune" Kline, evidently is a player of recognized ability.

"HUB" STINE SIGNS AS AN INSTRUCTOR

Will Coach Westfield Athletes in Various Branches of Sports.

This year an athletic instructor will be added to the teaching staff of the Westfield High School and the Board of Education has engaged Herbert ("Hub") Stine, of North Plainfield, to fill the bill.

In regard to the matter a Westfield paper says that Herbert "comes with the highest credentials." Which is every inch a fact. "Hub" is a football player, and performed on the Springfield Y. M. C. A. Training College team. He is a baseball player, having played on North Plainfield High School and the First Baptist teams. As a basketball player he earned quite a reputation. In fact, he is one of the best all around athletes in this city. When his Westfield teams meet Plainfield and North Plainfield, Herb's talent will be put to the test. Believe us, he will survive.

(By Peter P. Carney.)

Spirit Lake, Ia., doesn't begin to compare with Los Angeles, Cal., in size, but Spirit Lake has a trapshooter that Los Angeles or any other city would be proud to boast of. He is none other than Fred Gilbert, known in trapshooting circles as the "Wizard of Spirit Lake." For 21 years he has been a professional shot, winning the professional championship on his debut in Baltimore, Md., in 1895. He has won the professional championship at single and double targets more often than any one else since that time. Incidentally he has averaged better than 95 per cent. of his targets for 15 years. Gilbert and W. R. Crosby, of O'Fallon, Ill., have a little engagement at the Grand American Handicap each summer. In 1914 and 1915 they broke the same number of targets. This year Gilbert put it over on Crosby. At singles Gilbert broke 48 to Crosby's 49. At doubles Gilbert broke 44 to Crosby's 42, therefore won by one target in 100. "Fritz" has a sunny disposition, a willing instructor, and no one knows the sport of trapshooting better than he. Nearly all professional trapshooters are popular, and Gilbert stands second to none in this respect.

League Limelight

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

LOU BROWN.

The young man who robbed "Mike" Brown, of the Royal Giants of a sure two-base hit at Avon Oval on Sunday is none other than Lou Brown, of the Dunellen City League baseball team. Introductions are in order.

Unfortunately, we do not know just when Lou began to play baseball, but we understand that he was interested in the welfare of the national pastime from infancy upward. Living in the West End, he was given plenty of opportunity to play the great game. When the City League was organized the Clinton Avenue team entered. With the team came Lou Brown, pitcher, shortstop and all around man. At once Brown began to demonstrate his superior ability and won the admiration of the fans. Although his athletic reputation had been earned on the Holy Cross football team, his sudden rise and splendid work on the baseball diamond did much to add to his popularity. He certainly can hit the ball and stellar plays, particularly fancy leaps into space, are his specialty.

Of late, he has been playing the best baseball exhibited in the City League. His services are wanted by each and every team. What better sign of his ability and popularity could be desired? Yes, Lou Brown is one of the best baseball players ever developed in this vicinity. That he is bound to rise, is more than certain. Time will tell. Keep up the good work, Lou.

In the "League Limelight" for tomorrow, a short sketch of Tommy Mullin will appear. These stories are not chronicles of events. They are merely appreciations for things accomplished.

AMERICAN SOCCER TEAM WINS OVER SWEDES

The all-American socker football team defeated a team composed of players of the Allmenna Drottsklubben and Djurgarden Club by a score of 2 goals to 1. This game was the last to be played and the Americans will leave for home on board the Oscar II. on September 8. The trainer, Harry A. Davenport, of Newark, and C. H. Ellis, of the Brooklyn Celtics, will stay in Stockholm, Davenport remaining to assist the Swedish team, which will meet the Denmark federation in games in October.

The Americans scored both goals in the first half, their first goal coming after a penalty kick, and the second being the result of fine passing. The Swedish team was able to score only ten minutes before the end of the last half.

ARMY FOOTBALL DRILL.

The army football squad got a two hour drill yesterday afternoon under the direction of Lieutenant Charles D. Daly, Harvard, 1901, and West Point, 1905, who arrived here Tuesday night from Honolulu and has taken up his duties as head coach of the team. Lieutenant B. F. Hoge, captain and star end of the army eleven of 1913, also joined the staff of coaches yesterday.

KNIGHTS OF ST. PETER MAY PLAY APGARITES

Series of Games May Be Arranged in a Few Days.

Negotiations are under way, whereby the Knights of St. Peter, of New Brunswick, may play a series of Saturday games at Dunellen, the first game to be staged next Saturday. Nothing definite has been done as yet, but it is understood that the Middlesex manager is just as anxious to play in Dunellen as Tommy Apgar is.

According to the sport writers of New Brunswick, the Knights have a nifty team, with two of the most promising pitchers in the country on the staff. Jake Deinzer, who needs no introduction to the fans of this vicinity, is one of the hurlers, while Hugh Geoghan, another stellar artist, is Jake's assistant. A series of games between the Knights and the City Leaguers would prove a financial as well as a "social" success. Financially, it would add much to the Dunellen treasury; socially, it would cement the bonds of friendship between the two cities.

TENNIS TOURNEY ON AT WESTFIELD

Play for Championship Commences Saturday Afternoon.

The second annual tennis tournament for the championship of Westfield, for which the Leader Cup, is the trophy, will be staged at the Westfield Golf Club courts on Saturday of this week.

Entry blanks have been mailed to all the tennis players in Westfield known to the tennis committee of the club and additional blanks may be had by application to F. G. Smith, 675 Boulevard.

The event created considerable excitement last year and John E. Nitchie, of the Westfield Golf Club, took home the cup. The affair is an annual one and the cup must be won three years in succession to become the property of the holder. Each year the winner of the former year must enter the tournament. The entry list closes Friday, September 8.

Insurance a Luxury.

To an old darky haled before him a southern judge put this question:

"Why did you burn your house down just after getting it insured?"

Whereupon the darky replied:

"Yo' honah, a pore man like me can't afford to have a house and insurance too."—Case and Comment.

Alligators' Eggs.

Alligators often lay from thirty to sixty eggs in a single nest. The eggs are similar in shape to those of a duck and about three inches in length. When they first appear the young alligators are about the same size as lizards and almost as lively.

Ambiguous.

When Bilkins was away from home on a long business trip he got a letter from his wife that still puzzled him. It ended thus:

"Baby is well and lots brighter than she used to be. Hoping that you are the same, I remain, your loving wife."

ALL PLAINFIELD BASEBALL COMBINE COULD EASILY DEFEAT SEMI-PRO NINE

Ci' ens Should Get Together and Arrange a "Big Game"—Could Be Played on Columbus Day—Brooklyn "Rookies" Could Be Secured to Play Here.

If the merchants and fans of this city would get together and appoint a committee to arrange a baseball game between a purely local outfit and one of the fest "semi-pro" combinations, there would be many grateful hearts in this vicinity. The people of Plainfield are entitled to a little treat and those in power here could gain much favor by arranging a match of this sort.

That Plainfield could produce a purely local baseball team, the ability of which would be worth recognizing, is a fact worthy of the name. With Cliff Randolph, of the Perth Amboy Pacers, on the mound, and with Frank Hand, of Scotch Plains, behind the bat, the battery work would be well taken care of. Jack Garretson would, undoubtedly, be chosen for the work at the first station, while Tommy Mullin would be quickly secured for second. Jack Martin, shortstop and manager of the Milwaukee American Association baseball team, would be very willing to play at short, while Eddie Coughlan could be secured to play at third base. In the outfield three men of ability could be easily picked. That each one of the men chosen would be willing to play is a certainty. It is now up to the fans to demand a little action. If someone else fails to start things, we might do it ourselves.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Well, Manager Warden certainly made a success of his "big game." While there were not over "a dozen stars" on the baseball field, still things were pretty evenly matched and a rattling good game was played. It is reported that Manager Warden is negotiating with the Tabs and that a series will be played in a short time.

Congratulations, Mr. Compton! Congratulations! When a left fielder and catcher resolves to ... a little pitching and is successful in his efforts, it is time to pass the cigars. Mr. Compton is, evidently, endeavoring to upset traditions.

"Box" Apgar, who is employed in Bethlehem, Pa., returned home for the two games with the Royal Giants. The former P. H. S. captain was used in one game, but was held on the bench in the other attraction.

There is a report in circulation to the effect that Bradford, the Philadelpia Colored Giant pitcher, who hurled for the Royals against the Tabs, would bring his own catcher a week from Sunday, when the Royals and Tabs get together again. "Brad" believes in doing things correctly and it is highly probable that he will bring Stewart, one of the best colored catchers in the business out here. Tommy Washington may be used, however. Tommy has a team of his own and, therefore, it was impossible for him to remain in this city last Sunday.

If Bradford brings a new catcher, Waldorf will be used in the outfield. Waldorf is a fairly clever catcher, but he is not as clever as Washington. Bradford worked well with Waldorf, but it is said that he would do much better with a more experienced man behind the bat.

Pete Simmons did a pinch hit stunt that will go down in history. "Tune" Kline should have done the batting, but Manager Pete thought he would try. Pete did his best. Unfortunately, his best happened to be a strikeout for Warry McLaughlin.

Sid Butler, a Plainfield boy and a splendid baseball player, performed in centre for the Royals. Butler did just as well as any of his mates. He singled and caught everything that came his way. Better keep him in the game, Pete.

The Knights of St. Peter may play the Dunellen team on Saturday. The Knights have a fast baseball combination, and have acquired the habit of winning. There are lots of ways to break up both good and bad habits, however.

Joe Morley should be congratulated. He is one of the best players in the City League, but unfortunately has been pastiming with a rather poorly constructed outfit. It is reported that Joe will become a member of the Baptists next year.

There is a rumor afloat to the effect that the Farmers will not be entered in the City League next year. It is said that the Farmers are not "fast enough" as a whole, although, individually many of the members of the team are very capable.

AMATEUR BASEBALL.

Pitcairn, representing Pittsburg, defeated Johnstown by a score of 6 to 1 at Pittsburg yesterday in the elimination series for the amateur baseball championship of the United States. The second game will be played in Johnstown next Saturday.

TYPHOID FEVER, PERHAPS.

Arthur Nehf, one of the left hand pitchers of the Boston Nationals, was under observation in a hospital yesterday with symptoms which created fears of typhoid fever. He has been ill since the Braves returned from the West last Friday.

—Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

WESTFIELD TEAM VISITS.

Dunellen will play Westfield on Maurer Oval Saturday. McLoughlin and Bergen will be in the points for Dunellen, while George Gottlob and Hunt will work for Westfield.

STITES OUT OF GAME.

Harry Stites, premier pitcher of the Plainfield A. C., is out of the game for the rest of the season. He sprained the ligaments in his left side in a recent game.

Widows' Dolls In Servia.

Talking of Servia's curious marriage customs, Mrs. Gordon in her book, "A Woman In the Balkans," speaks of a queer looking doll she sometimes saw hanging up in cottage windows:

"To my astonishment and amusement I was informed that the doll was the coy evidence a widow shows when she desires to enter the bonds of matrimony again. Some of them were hideous, others of as pretty a kind as the circumstances or taste of the 'lone widow' would permit, and it was by this mute appeal intending suitors were made aware of her intentions and invited to 'inquire within.' Wreaths of corn marked the houses of a marriageable girl."

The Servians are a singing peoples, and the women, who are very poetical, sing as they spin during the long evenings. They sometimes compose music to the old ballads as they sing them. The country is called "the poor man's paradise," and Mrs. Gordon thinks the title appropriate, "for one rarely sees the poor or the beggar, and, though there may be smells, there are no slums and no unemployed."

Confession of a Contributor.

I wish I might never have to dangle my profession on a label. I am always embarrassed when I am forced blatantly to expose it—for example, to the frank questions of the doctor's secretary or of a customs official. "Profession?" they ask, and I cringe before the admission, "I am a writer." I don't feel ladylike when I say the words. On such occasions I could give my entire remuneration for an Atlantic essay to be able to say, "I am a laundress."—Winifred Kirkland in Atlantic.

Inquisitive Girls.

Bessie—I almost hate Carrie Dyer! She asks such impudent questions, you know. I was telling her if Frank Barnes had asked me to marry him once he had asked me twenty times, and she had the impertinence to ask me if he had asked once. Minnie—The idea! But has he, Bessie?—Exchange

Welcome Joy.

Ef you ain't got manners ter tell Joy good mawnin' when you meets him how does you expect him ter call roun' by de place you live at? You better be mighty keerful, fer, while he is allus in a good humor, he sho' do expect you ter meet him halfway.—Atlanta Constitution.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

"That man's laugh is like a tonic."

"I don't deny that it has a cheerful ring," the cynic said, "but hearing the same loud laugh all day long is like taking a dose of medicine every hour—it gets to be monotonous."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

URGE RETENTION OF JERSEY UNITS

Residents of Douglas Want Protection and Will Oppose Withdrawal of Troops.

FEAR THE MEXICANS

Reports that Villa is Moving North Adds to Troubles of Americans Who Fear an Invasion—Soldiers Are Anxious to Return.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 3.—That border towns, particularly Douglas, will fight for the retention of certain units of New Jersey militia as a percaution against Mexican invasions is a foregone conclusion and a campaign to force Uncle Sam to leave at least a portion of the Jersey guard at this point is already under way. Ever mindful of the attacks launched by Mexicans and the unpleasant experiences before the arrival of the border guard the Douglas Chamber of Commerce and business men are determined that the United States War Department shall not withdraw all of the Jersey units. Rumor has had it during he past few days that all of the soldiers would be recalled within a fortnight and reports from headquarters make this seem probable.

It is a conceded fact that the soldier element has done considerable to build up Douglas' commercial interests, both as spenders, as aides in warding off looting and breaking down forces, and the merchants of this place are loath to see the uniformed men withdrawn. Residents claim they are entitled to such protection as the Jerseymen can give and a general migration to the east is threatened if orders come to move all of the 6,000 sodiers home.

The Douglas Daily Dispatch says editorially this morning "Just what is meant by a movement that appears to be a gradual withdrawal of militiamen from border service is difficult to fathom for Woodrow Wilson 'moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform.' This spell of quiet along the whole frontier, due absolutely to the show of force made by the United States, soon will be but a memory if the strength which brought it about is removed; and the lax conditions which obtained during the long period of 'watchful waiting' will be restored. Perhaps it is the idea of the administration that if the guardsmen are permitted to return home before election time they will be so grateful for the privilege accorded them that they will vote for the man whose policy and shortsightedness sent them to the border in the first place.

"Incidentally it might be added that 'Pancho' Villa, once favorite of Wilson's, is also moving north, probably to be ready for another raid when sufficient troops have been taken away to enable him to cross the line with a degree of safety. Perhaps, too, Washington officials hold the opinion that all is well in Mexico, but not being sure they are willing to jeopardize the border's safety in an effort to find out if their belief is true."

This topic is daily growing more serious in Douglas and other nearby towns and a united protest will probably go forth to Washington if the War Department insists on a return of troops. The subject is being discussed on all hands and the eagerness of the Jersey troops to return to the east is aggravating the feeling considerably. Reports from over the international line indicate that Villa forces are awaiting just such an opportunity as will be afforded by a withdrawal of troops to renew attacks and those familiar with conditions before the Jerseyites landed here fear the worst. When the weekly train from the Mexican interior arrives here it always leaves an American or two at the Douglas depot who has some alarming tales to relate of riotous conditions across the line.

CHANGE OFFICE HOURS.

Tomorrow it will be open until 5 o'clock, but on Sunday will not be open after 12 o'clock at noon. BOARD OF HEALTH ORDER

Parents are hereby warned not to take sick children on the public street for any purpose whatever.

If a child is sick, call a physician. The Health Department has learned that a child from out of town was brought to Plainfield on the trolley car, the child at the time showing the beginning symptoms of Infantile Paralysis.

KEEP YOUR CHILDREN HOME.

INSIST THAT CAR STRIKE IS ENDED

Street Railway Officials Believe Men Have Lost All Hope.

SUBWAY THREATENED

Police Guard All Stations—No Disorder Reported—L and Subway Schedules Are Being Maintained by Officials.

RIOTING BREAKS OUT.

New York, Sept. 8.—Serious strike riots broke out in the street car strike at noon today. While noon crowds filled Twenty-third street about fifty strike sympathizers attacked a crosstown surface car at Ninth avenue endeavoring to pull the conductor and motorman from their post. The police attacked the rioters, using their clubs for the first time since the strike began. The strike sympathizers immediately scattered. Twenty minutes later there was another riot call from Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. Two men were battered by the police but no arrests were made.

New York. Sept. 8.—New York's street car strike is ended, according to the statements of railroad officers this morning, who point out that all L and subway trains are running as usual, and that many of the strikers have applied today for reinstatement. Service on the green cars is still badly crippled, but the number of cars in service is being increased each hour.

Reports that explosives were to be placed at three different points on subway lines have caused the police to detail strong guards for all stations, but it is not believed that there is any truth in these reports. Bricks and bottles have been thrown at L cars as they passed streets in the uptown sections, and one train was fired at four times last night. Several arrests were made. No further disorder has been reported.

Opening plans to spread the traction strike to the Third Avenue lies, the Bronx, Union system and the trolley systems of Queens and Staten Island were launched today by the leaders of the Amalgamated Union of Street and Electric Railroad Employes.

Alleging that there exists a plot among the traction interests of the city to wipe out the union by forcing strikes on one system after another, Organizer Fitzgerald and his associates have formulated and will present without delay to the managements of the companies mentioned above a demand for a pledge that the agreement of August 7 will be respected and that none of the roads will attempt to follow the lead of the Interborough and demand an individual "master and servant" contract with each employe.

The union leaders will also demand some other pledges. They anticipate that the request for a reaffirmation of adherence to the agreement of September 7 will be refused and that the company managers will also refuse to repudiate the individual contract system.

In the event of such refusals the union leaders would consider themselves justified in calling a strike on all the trolley lines in Manhattan, Bronx, Queens and Richmond not already affected.

HERMINA ACKER DISAPPEARS FROM WATCHUNG HOME

The disappearance of Herminia Acker, the ten-year-old adopted daughter of Ephraim Acker, of Watchung, was reported to the police of this city and North Plainfield early this afternoon. Thus far no trace of the girl has been found.

This is the second time the child has been reported as missing. Not long ago the child disappeared from her home and a posse, composed of prominent citizens of Watchung, was sent out in search of her. She was found in the apple orchard at the Acker home. It is said that the child's home is at 105 East 22nd street, New York city. When last seen she wore a blue slip dress, black shoes and stockings. She has dark features.

SERVICES TO BE RESUMED.

The Congregational Church at Madison avenue and West Seventh street will be reopened Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, with the pastor, Rev. Edward E. Clarke, preaching. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at this service. The Sunday-school will not be reopened until further notice, but a meeting of the officers and teachers will be held after the morning service.

JOHN P. WOLFE.

The John Wolfe who is running for councilman from the Fifth district, North Plainfield, is John P. Wolfe, of 249 Somerset street. His name, as it appeared yesterday, was confused with that of another borough resident.

Candidates Frelinghuysen, Fowler and Martin Are Endorsed at an Enthusiastic Meeting Held at the County Seat.

Elizabeth, Sept. 8.—Colonel Austen Colgate was endorsed by the Union County Progressives, at a largely attended meeting held last evening. Not since the days of the formation of the party has there been so much enthusiasm as was shown by the delegates from every part of the county. In accordance with the resolutions passed at the State Committee meeting in Newark, a committee on candidates was appointed. This committee consisted of Harwood Fish, of Roselle Park; Edgar A. Knapp, Elizabeth; Theodore Van Dyke, Summit; John H. Dahl, Plainfield, and Edward A. Leach, Elizabeth.

The first action taken was to enter the Republican primaries and to urge the Progressives throughout the State to take similar action.

The report of the committee on candidates, which was adopted by a rising vote, was as follows: "We have examined the records of the several candidates seeking the nominations for the office of Governor, United States Senator and member of Congress from three angles: First, character and achievement; second, personal effort in behalf of constructive legislation; third, voting strength in November.

"For Governor, our unanimous choice is Austen Colgate, a native Jerseyman, a graduate of Yale University, a trustee of Peddie Institute and of Colgate University, a successful manufacturer. He has found time and energy to serve three terms in the Assembly and two terms in the Senate. As an employer of labor, he has given such good account of his stewardship that his employes of their own free will in meeting assembled, have unanimously endorsed his candidacy. They have done even more than this. They have organized an employes' Colgate & Co., campaign committee, and are making a special effort to place before the industrial workers throughout the State the facts and figures that prove it is possible for capital and labor to live together in unity, for there has never been a strike in the Colgate plant.

"He has always favored and worked for progressive and constructive legislation, for laws to ameliorate the condition of the unfortunate, for social and economic betterment of the community as well as the individual, for the minimum wage, for all great labor reforms, for the limiting and safeguarding of child labor and the workmen's compensation fund. He has always been in the forefront for efficiency and economy in the management of the affairs of the State, a staunch fighter for better roads, in short we find Colonel Colgate to be a man fully measuring up to the progressive ideals, and believe that his voting strength in November will be a revelation to old time politicians, should he succeed in securing the Republican nomination."

Others endorsed were Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, for United States Senator; Charles N. Fowler, for Congressman from the Fifth district, and William B. Martin for county clerk.

PLAINFIELD ELKS PLAN FOR CONVENTION PARADE

Final distribution of the paraphernalia necessary for the local Elks' participation in the Newark B. P. O. E. convention parade to be held next Tuesday will be made at the Watchung avenue clubhouse tomorrow night, when the secretary of the committee will take care of the members between the hours of 8 and 11 o'clock. Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, will probably have one hundred uniformed men in line in the monster parade and will undoubtedly make a strong bid for at least one of the scores of prizes to be offered.

The local delegation will leave here on the 8:36 train and will arrive in Newark at 9:26 to be met at the Broad street station by a band and float. From the latter place they will proceed to the parade formation streets.

John H. Cose is chairman of the reunion committee, assisted by the following: C. F. Stout, secretary-treasurer; Dr. C. L. Crist, William C. Mulvey and Lewis A. Bellis.

BRAKEMAN KILLED AS CAR OVERTURNS

Walter Diamond, of Elizabeth, Dies on Way to the Hospital.

Walter W. Diamond, a brakeman on the New Jersey Central Railroad, was almost instantly killed this morning, when a freight car on the train he was riding was derailed opposite the roundhouse at Dunellen. The accident happened at 3:20 a. m. A broken drawhead caused one of the cars to leave the track and overturn. Diamond was thrown from the train and when two other cars piled up on the derailed car he was caught underneath. When other members of the crew had pulled him from under the wreckage it was found that his head had been crushed. He died before reaching Muhlenberg Hospital. Diamond lived at 1036 Grand street, Elizabeth. Members of his family have made arrangements for the shipping of the body there this afternoon for funeral services and interment.

TROOP EXPECTS TO START HOME MONDAY

Officers Say They Have News From Those High in Authority.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 8.—Officers of Troop D are authority for the assertion that the Plainfielders will leave here Monday. They refuse to give their season for expecting to be ordered home on that day, but say they have been informed by high authority. Of course the men believe them, and the entire camp is living in hope of shaking the dust of Arizona's desert sands from its feet in four more days.

Private William Ising, of Troop D, received a discharge yesterday, granted under the depenednсy clause. He left for home last night, but will report at Fort Dupont, Delaware to be mustered out. The discharge of Sergeant Donald A. McGee has been granted, it is said, and should reach the camp some time today.

TWO PARALYSIS CASES FOUND NOT REPORTED

Parents Let One Child Die and Another Suffer From Dread Disease.

Two cases of infantile paralysis that were not reported to the local Board of Health and about which no physician had knowledge became known today when Dr. Raphael Yood determined the death of Francis J. Reiss, the seventeen months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Reiss, of 329 Lee place, as due to the plague. At the same time Dr. Yood found that Mary Reiis, the seven year old daughter, had been suffering from the same disease, but had practically recovered, although still paralyzed in one leg.

That nothing was known about the two cases is laid to the fact that the parents did not immediately report them but tried to doctor the children themselves. It is probable that they did not know it was paralysis, as the girl was ill for several weeks and on the road to recovery when the boy was taken suddenly ill. It was when the boy's condition became dangerous that Dr. Yood was called.

Funeral services for Francis Reiss will be held tomorrow afternoon from the home, and interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town. INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES DISCUSSED

President D. T. Kenney, of Chamber of Commerce, Alleges Discrimination.

URGE FURTHER ACTION

It is Shown Plainfield and Somerville Pay Same Rates, Although City Has Paid Department — Chamber Favors Advance on Motor Tonnage

That Plainfielders are paying exactly the same fire insurance rates as the people of Somerville, despite the fact that this city has a full paid fire department with the most modern fire-fighting equipment, while Somerville has a volunteer department, was forcibly presented to the members of the Chamber of Commerce last night by the president, David T. Kenney, who has been making a thorough investigation of the matter. Mr. Kenney's remarks aroused unusual interest among those present and all favored action that would result in the proper adjustment of rates.

Mr. Kenney, in addressing the members of the chamber on the subject, said:

"It will no doubt be of interest to all owners of either real or personal property in the city of Plainfield to know that as conditions stand in respect to the large amount of tax that is being paid for the equipment and maintenance of the several branches of the city government, and more particularly that paid for the equipment and maintenance of a full paid fire department and streets on which the fire apparatus is conveyed, together with water facilities such as fire hydrants, that we are not getting in return the benefits that I believe we are entitled to and that some one or somebody is lax or at fault.

"There has been filed with the commissioner of banking and insurance rules and requirements for the various classes of fire protection in the State of New Jersey.

"Plainfield has been placed in Class C. Somerville has been placed in Class D, and yet residential property owners in Plainfield pay as high insurance as Somerville.

"Somerville has a volunteer fire department with horse drawn apparatus. The horses are out at various kinds of teaming during the day. Somerville has a water pressure, I am informed, of 30 pounds.

"Plainfield has a full paid fire department with automobile and horse drawn apparatus, ever ready for action. Plainfield has a water pressure of 70 pounds in the business centre of the city.

"The loss in insurance amounts from 2 per cent. to 5 per cent. on the hundred. Consider the enormous loss on several million dollars of insurance which is placed on Plainfield property.

"East Orange, Hoboken, Camden, Trenton and other places are in Class B, all of which are entitled to still better rate of insurance than Class C. Remember the size or population of a city has nothing to do with the classification as long as the requirements are met. The city of Newark is in Class A, the best.

"Now, why are we not in Class B with the above named cities? and it would appear from reading the rules or requirements we should be I am told in a letter from the insurance expert, Atlee Brown, that Plainfield has been placed in Class C. Yet, on investigation, I find that insurance rates are being paid under Class D.

"What's wrong?"

The above remarks by Mr. Kenney were partly based on correspondence he had with Atlee Brown, of Newark, the fire expert of the Schedule Rating Office, in which he sought information regarding rates in this city. Mr. Kenney in writing Mr. Brown stated that he understood cities, boroughs or towns having well organized fire departments are entitled to proportionately better insurance rates. He then called attention to the fact that Plainfield and Somerville are paying the same rates on a large portion of insurance, emphasizing the fact that this city is not getting as good rates as it should.

In reply Mr. Brown stated that there has been filed with the commissioner of banking and insurance rules and requirements for the various classes of public fire protection in the State. He said that Plainfield was placed in Class C, while Somerville is in Class D, the requirements calling for a volunteer force with paid engineers and drivers. He added that all risks rated specifically that are located in Class C towns have a town charge of .02, whereas if such risks were in Class D towns the charge would be .03. A detailed schedule accompanied the letter.

In answer to another letter from Mr. Kenney Mr. Brown referred to the tabulation of rates sent with previous letter, explaining that if he would call at his office in Newark he would be glad to give further information.

The chamber also discussed the question of highways and adopted a resolution favoring the taxation of motor trucks according to tonnage.

CHURCHES WILL TAKE UP FIGHT

Union Service for Sunday to Discuss Question of Saloon Licenses.

GAVETT WILL PRESIDE

Dr. Strong, Dr. Anderson and George Batchelor Will Address Meeting at Trinity Reformed Church—All Are Invited.

Pastors and churches in the city of Plainfield will begin an active part in the coming campaign for the election of four new members of the Common Council next Sunday evening, when a union service of all local churches will be held.

The service will be in Trinity Reformed church. It has been called by the Church Co-operative Society, of which Joseph W. Gavett is president, and Mr. Gavett will preside. The meeting will be called at 7:45 o'clock and all church members, as well as others who are interested in the campaign to rid Plainfield of the saloons are invited to attend.

The Rev. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church; the Rev. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, and George H. Batchelor will be the speakers, in addition to Mr. Gavett. All who own Biederwolf song books used in the recent campaign are requested to bring them.

The speakers are to confine their remarks to a discussion of the issue of no-license in Plainfield. A movement to bring about a refusal to renew saloon licenses when this question comes before the Common Council in January was started some time ago by the Church Co-operative Association, and already a candidate has been put in each of the four wards of the city. In one ward, the Third, the no-license man is without opposition in the Republican primary. The candidates of the Church Co-operative Association are: First ward, Frederick S. Cutter; Second ward, Charles E. Loizeaux; Third ward, G. Herbert Condict; Fourth ward, Chauncey L. Hight.

Already the fight for these candidates has become lively in each ward, and the meeting of Sunday evening will publicly identify the movement as one of the churches. It is expected that the church auditorium will be filled.

Mr. Leonard's friends here assured him of their support at this end of the county. The candidate is well-known throughout the county through the fact that he served one term as an Assemblyman.

SAY ALLIES HAVE LOST A MILLION

Germans Report on Killed and Wounded in New Drive.

ROUMANIANS DEFEATED

Town and 20,000 Men Taken by German-Bulgar Army — French Stop Bore Assaults Along the Somme.

Berlin, Sept. 8.—The Allies have lost more than a million in killed, wounded and missing since the grand offensive against the Central Powers opened with a Russian attack three months ago.

This estimate was made today by German military experts, who said they thought it conservative.

Against these losses the Allied armies have only the conquest of Bukowina and some Galician territory by the Russians, the capture of Goritz by the Italians, a shallow thrust into the German lines on the Somme and the occupation of mountainous Transylvanian territory by the Roumanians as positive military achievements.

The armies of the Central Powers, keeping their lines intact everywhere under tremendous pressure, at the same time struck back with successful blows at the Balkans. The Bulgarians advanced on both flanks to positions menacing the Allies in Greece. German and Roumanian forces struck a severe blow against the Roumanians by occupying Tutrakan fortress, one of the bridgehead positions defending Bucharest.

The Allies' losses as conservatively estimated here follow: Russian, 600,000; British, 230,000; French, 150,000; Italian, Serbian and Roumanian combined, 50,000. Some Austrian experts and a number of Germans have estimated the Russian losses at more than 800,000 and the combined British and French losses at more than 400,000. Official casualty lists given out at London show British losses of about 125,000 for the month of August alone.

20,000 Roumanians Captured.

London, Sept. 5.—The Roumanian Legation has not yet received any official report of the capture of Tutraan, along with 20,000 prisoners by a German-Bulgar army.

Alpine Troops Take Trench.

Rome, Sept. 5.—Austro-Hungarian troops delivered violent attacks in the Sugana Valley on Wednesday, but were repulsed. The assaults were made at Civarve, on the Trentino front. Alpine troops captured by storm an Austro-Hungarian trench on the slope of Monte Tofana in the Delomites.

Artillery Duels in Balkans.

Paris, Sept. 5.—Violent artillery duels have taken place within the last 24 hours in the sectors of Dorian, the Sturma River and Beles in Greek-Macedonia, says the War Office, in a report today dealing with operations in the Balkans.

British Take Two Officers.

London, Sept. 8.—Artillery duels and combats with bombs took place on the Somme front last night, says a statement issued by the War Office today. The British have captured two more German officers and fifty men.

Two Steamers Sink.

London, Sept. 8.—The Ellerman liner Tagua, 937 tons, has been sunk by a submarine. A despatch to Lolyds also carries a report that the British steamer Hazelwood, 3,192 tons, has been destroyed.

French Still Hold Lines.

Paris, Sept. 8.—Another series of counter attacks was launched by the Germans south of the Somme River last night, but all were repulsed, according to a sattement issued by the French War Office today. These assaults were delivered in the sector of Berny en Peterre and Chaulnes, and they not only broke down but the Germans left 200 prisoners in the hands of the French. North of the Somme there was a severe artillery duel. On the Verdun front the French made further progress on the line of Vaux Chapitre and Chenois Wood, attacking with hand grenades.

Russian Biplane Shot Down.

Berlin, Sept. 8.—The Admiralty announced today the shooting down of a Russian biplane over the Poland-Russia Coast. The occupants were made prisoners.

Kill Women and Children.

Berlin, Sept. 5.—During the month of August the Allied soldiers and aviators killed 31 men, 27 women and 17 children in Belgian and French territory, held by the Germans. This information was given out today by the Overseas News Agency which added, fifty-two civilian men, 90 women and 39 children were wounded since September, 1914. 1,963 French and Belgian civilians have thus far been killed.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Dangers of Bad Teeth.

A bad tooth should never be tolerated, and the danger of cancer is only one more good reason for having it attended to. Cancer of the tongue may occur at any age, but it is most common between forty and sixty. As one-third of all cases investigated have been shown to be definitely associated with jagged or decayed teeth or imperfect plates, it would seem that here is one method of preventing cancer.

It is probable that other conditions occurring in combination with bad teeth increase the likelihood of cancer of the tongue as a result, but the removal of this form of irritation is so simple a matter that deaths in cases of this kind must be charged to pure negligence. If the removal or treatment of the tooth does not relieve the situation and the ulcer continues, prompt operation is necessary, for this form of cancer is quickly fatal.

DOCTORS AND LAWYERS ENJOY ANNUAL DINNER

Forty local business men, including all the doctors, with the exception of Drs. Murray, Van Horn and Pittis, together with a number of lawyers and merchants, held their annual shore dinner at the Highland House, near Atlantic Highlands, yesterday afternoon. The affair was a success in every way and was better attended than ever before.

The majority of those present made the trip by automobile and reached there shortly after noon. About the middle of the afternoon they sat down to an excellent dinner. The return home was made in the forepart of the evening.

2 CIVILIAN AVIATORS IN FALL OF 200 FEET

New York, Sept. 8.—Charles D. Wiman and J. Walter W. Struthers, civilian aviators flying from the Aviation School on Governor's Island, fell to earth this morning in their tractor Curtiss biplane and were seriously injured. The machine was a complete wreck. Both men had been in the air about fifteen minutes at a height of about 700 feet when the biplane fell vertically, pinning both men underneath. It took some time to extricate the injured men from the wreckage. Wiman as far as is known is suffering from a dislocated hip and a broken nose, but may have sustained internal hurts. Struthers had both legs broken, one with a compound fracture, and his head badly cut, according to surgeons at the Post Hospital.

SUFFRAGISTS PROVE THEY KNOW HOW TO VOTE

Atlantic City, Sept. 8.—Delegates to the National American Woman Suffrage Association, who say they expect to be enfranchised before many years have passed, are taking time by the forelock and are learning how to vote.

In electing their national officers the delegates are following much the same plan of States where there are State-wide primary laws. The candidates first filed petitions duly signed by a certain number of persons, to have their names placed on the primary ballot. The time for filing nomination papers closed late last night and today a primary election was held. The two candidates receiving the highest vote for any one office will be placed on the election ballot and wil come up for election tomorrow.

In carrying out the election the women are using voting machines and for the last two days delegates have been practising on the machines in order to be able to vote without making a mistake. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, National President of the organization, tried on in New York a week ago and voted a full ticket in seventeen seconds. Others are trying to break the record she has established.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL OPENING

Plans for the school year soon to open were made at a meeting of the Union County Principals' Association in the office of the county school superintendent in Elizabeth, this week. It was decided to hold a one day institute of all the teachers in the county September 22. Battin High School in Elizabeth will be the probable place of meeting.

A canvass of the county disclosed the fact that all but districts have decided to call their teachers home a few weeks before the opening of school for final instruction and institutes. Elizabeth, Plainfield and Cranford have made no provision for this.

PETITION SIGNED FOR PROBE OF FREEHOLDERS

The Board of Chosen Freeholders were notified yesterday afternoon that forty-one taxpayers of Union county had annexed their affidavits to a petition for "a summary investigation" of the expenditure of county money. In that petition the belief is expressed that "county moneys are being or have been unlawfully or corruptly expended."

The signers of the petition for the investigation have based their belief, as stated in their petition, on the report of Francis P. Smith, the expert road engineer hired by Freeholder Aplegate to determine if the county was getting full value for the money appropriated on its roads. Mr. Smith, after stating his qualifications as an engineer, swore that contract specifications were not being observed. In several cases, he claimed, he found too small an amount of tar, not enough bitumen covering and no screening on the roads he examined.

RECALL ELGIN DISASTER.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 8.—Some of the older residents of Milwaukee, including several of the survivors of the disaster, recalled today that this was the fifty-sixth anniversary of the wreck of the steamboat Lady Elgin, one of the most notable catastrophes in the history of navigation on the great Lakes. More than three hundred persons were drowned when the vessel sank in Lake Michigan, after being run down by the schooner Augusta ten miles off the shore of Winnetka, Ill. The steamboat was on its way back to Milwaukee from Chicago with a big load of excursionists. Nearly all of the victims were residents of Milwaukee or orther parts of Wisconsin.

In accordance with her custom she has passed the summer at her home at Lawrence, L. I. It is the cottage in which Mrs. Sage died, and is one of the favorite houses maintained by Mrs. Sage.

DOMESTICS NOW MAKE MUNITIONS

Better Wages In Factories Than For Housework.

BIG HOTELS ARE HARD HIT.

Decrease In Immigration Since War Adds to Scarcity—Employment Agents Can't Fill Orders, and Many Quit Business — Increased Earnings of Farm Workers.

The scarcity of domestic servants, which has been growing constantly since the European war halted the tide of immigration to the United States, has begun to cause housewives much anxiety. Employment agencies hold out little hope for an early solution of this vexing problem.

The decrease in the number of women seeking housework has been marked by an advance in wages ranging in some instances from 50 to 60 per cent. Employment agencies have been considering plans to induce country girls to come to the cities and undertake domestic work. They have also discussed among themselves the practicability of offering this kind of work to office girls receiving lower wages than generally are earned by domestic workers.

W. E. Kruesi, superintendent of the public employment bureau, said a large stack of orders for domestic servants had been received by the bureau, which was unable to fill them because there were comparatively few applicants for the jobs. He attributed the shortage in domestic labor to the lure of the munition factories and other industries offering more attractive industrial conditions if not better wages.

Factory Work Attractive.

"A representative of a munition factory in Bridgeport, Conn., drops into this office every day to see if there are any women who will take work in the munition plants," said Mr. Kruesi. "The company furnishes women munition workers with rooms at $2 a week in the company's dormitories and, in addition, advances to each woman a meal ticket for two weeks. The meal ticket is paid for in installments, the company making four semimonthly deductions from the wages of the worker. The women start at 15 cents an hour, and on an average the unskilled workers earn from $14 to $15 a month clear, while the more experienced are paid as high as $40. In addition, we are receiving requests for workers from munitions factories in Jersey and from other industries near New York city.

"The best feature of the scarcity of help is that domestic and farm workers have at last come in for a little increase in their earnings. The most urgent demands we receive usually are from hotels, restaurants and institutions of various kinds. They have to procure women servants in order to continue operation, whereas the housewife manages to get along without her servants when unable to obtain them and therefore shows much more patience while waiting for her order.

"The wages earned by immigrants and girls range from $18 to $25 a month, whereas a year ago the same class of help could be obtained for from $16 to $18. It is useless now to offer an experienced servant $20 a month, because there are too many persons who will pay $30 and $35 a month.

"While hotels and restaurants do not pay much more than private households, they are able to procure help more easily because they require of their help definite duties and regular hours and impose certain other conditions which the women laborers find more to their liking."

HUSBAND CAN CHOOSE HOME.

But the Wife Wears the Trousers In It, Court Rules.

Over the home the wife may be the boss, but to the husband alone belongs the privilege of deciding where that home shall be, according to an opinion expressed in the Gates avenue court of Brooklyn by Magistrate Dodd. Mrs. Loretta Schllemann had an altercation with her husband, Lester, which resulted in the arrest of the latter.

Called upon to explain the difficulty he had with his wife, Schllemann said: "Your honor, my wife wants to live in Ridgewood, and I want to live in South Brooklyn, where I am employed."

"The right is with you," returned Magistrate Dodd, "in this argument. Your wife should be satisfied to make her home wherever you decide. This is one situation of family life where the wife should not wear the trousers."

SALE OF WEST INDIES.

Danish Parties Agree to Avoid Election Over the Plan.

A Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says the Danish political crisis arising out of the proposed sale of the Danish West Indies shows signs of collapsing suddenly.

"Although a general election seemed inevitable," the dispatch adds, "it now appears to look as if the sale of the islands might still be accomplished without an election. The fact appears to be that all parties are beginning to feel that an election would be a calamity at the present time and should be avoided if possible."

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences
It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

COLONEL MAY PUT "PEP" INTO HUGHES' CAMPAIGN

The Colonel has been asked to put a little "pep" into the Hughes campaign, it is understood, and may become the real boss of it. He is not expected to take a desk at committee headquarters, but from now on his views and wishes will play an important part in the campaign.

The Colonel yesterday sent for Frank H. Hitchcock, former chairman of the National Committee, and George W. Perkins, former Progressive leader, and keeper of the checkbook, to take luncheon with him at Sagamore Hill. This they did. When Messrs. Hitchcock and Perkins got back to the Hughes headquarters in Fifth avenue there was more activity than has ever before been seen there.

Calendars of the Aztecs.

Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their counterpart among the most ancient known races. The Aztecs, for example, were well supplied with calendars, and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were published in stone and set up in public places.

REPUBLICANS: Do you want to elect a Republican Governor this year ,or will you permit the Democrats to capture the State?

If you want a Republican Governor nominate your strongest candidate. If you don't nominate your strongest candidate, you are playing into the hands of the Democracy.

The Democrats will select their candidate from the County of Hudson. They are banking on 30,000 plurality in that county to insure his election.

Austen Colgate is the only candidate who can cut down that plurality to a minimum. He is at the head of a great industrial plant in Hudson and is more popular in that county than any other Republican.

Backed by a united party in his home County of Essex, he is assured of an overwhelming plurality there. He will poll the full party vote in the State. His high business standing and clean record in public office insure him a larger support among the independents than any other candidate, Republican or Democratic.

The following poem was composed by Private Frederick A. Earle, of Troop D, First Squadron New Jersey Cavalry.

JUST ACROSS FROM MEXICO.

We are camped along the border,
Just across from Mexico,
On the sands of Arizona
Where the sage and cacti grow;
And the heat it makes you dizzy,
And the sand it makes you blind.
When some evil Indian spirit
Takes it in his heathen mind
For to start a little rumpus
And the storm begins to blow,
And you're camped along the border
Just across from Mexico.

Oh, it seems a hundred devils
All begin to pull and tear,
And they fill your eyes and nostrils
And they settle in your hair,
In the whirling and the swirling,
Well, you ought to see it fly!
They grab your tent—and zingo!
It goes up into the sky!
Then those devils laugh and holler,
"O, you soldier boy, ho, ho!
What you doing on the border,
Just across from Mexico?"

What we're doing is no puzzle,
And you take it, man from me,
When your back is aching, breaking,
And the callus you can see
On your hands grow big and harder,—
Why, it's work you're doing then!
Digging trenches, cleaning horses,
Then you'll drill and work again.
But we're happy for our Country
Sent us here, and sure 'tis so,
We are needed on the border
Just across from Mexico.

'Tisn't fun to be patrolling
Up and down this wilderness
Watching for the Villistas,
Or some other foe to press.
'Cross the line to rob and murder
People born in Yankee-land.
But the flag we love to follow!
And we'll make them understand
They must quit or there'll be fighting!
And you bet they'll eat some crow,
If we find them on the border
Just across from Mexico.

Don't you 'spose we get a longing
For our homes and those we love?
And at night get kinda lonesome
When the silent stars above
Seem to light you back to Jersey
And you seem to see the face
Of the one who missed you mostly
When you left her for this place?
Oh, it's sad your heart grows sometimes,
But you're not supposed to show
You've been dreaming on the border
Just across from Mexico.

We're here to do our duty,
And we do it with a will;
'Tis a solider's life, and with it
Comes the good and comes the ill.
So if fever, or if fighting
Should get any one of us here
'Twas a-serving of our country,
And to tie we didn't fear.
We'll just wrap us in our blankets.
And if anyone would know,
Say we're sleeping on the border
Just across from Mexico.

PACIFIC LEAGUE TRUST?

An action charging that the Pacific Coast League is a trust and that it has conspired to monopalize baseball in California to such an extent that players outside the league are unable to make a living was on file in the United States District Court in San Francisco yesterday. Mrs. Esther Jacobs, the complainant, seeks to recover $31,500, three times the amount she claims to have lent the defunct Sacramento club, whose franchise was sold to the Salt Lake City club. The action is brought under the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

KENNEL SHOW ENTRIES CLOSE AT MIDNIGHT

Local Fanciers Should Enter Their Pets as Soon as Possible

Those in charge of the coming show of the Plainfield Kennel Club wish it understood that Plainfield dogs are especially welcome as entrants in the coming show. Entries close this evening and may be filed with Superintendent Wilbur Purcell, of Broadway, New York city, or with Secretary John J. O'Donohue, of this city.

It is hoped that local dog fanciers will take advantage of the local show and that they will file their entries at once. Any entry, mailed before midnight, will be accepted. Plans for the affair are being rapidly completed and the members of the club feel sure that the show will be a success.

"PLAINFIELD" OUTFIT AT ELIZABETH

"Million Dollar Mystery" Surrounds Identity of Local Manager.

This clipping is from an Elizabeth newspaper and does or does not speak for itself:

"The crack Plainfield team will be guests of the South Elizabeth nine Sunday afternoon. The visitors have lost only one game this year and that was dropped to the Ironsides of Newark, who are considerable ball players. The Plainfielders have clashed with some of the best aggregations in this section.

"It is a long time since a baseball team came here from the Queen City, and for that reason a large crowd of fans is expected. Some of the best men in the upper county city will be seen in action, and there is little doubt that they will give the local crew a first-class argument.

"No word has been received as yet from the Plainfield manager regarding the battery. A pitcher who has worked for the club all summer will twirl for the visitors, however, according to a report which floated down this way today. A regular catcher also will be seen on the job."

We wonder who is at the head of this team?

FORDHAM STARTS FOOTBALL.

Football practice at Fordham started yesterday afternoon on Fordham Field with a squad of eleven candidates. Frank Garrigan, captain of Fordham's 1909 eleven, who has been appointed head coach, was in charge of the practice. He was assisted by Moriarity, a former Georgetown player and All-Southern tackle.

The candidates were put through a two hours' drill in catching and kicking the pigskin.

The squad will be increased daily when the other veterans arrive. The members of the 1915 team in harness were Conklin, Treanor, Delehanty, Grace and Ryan.

The opening game of the season will be played with Lafayette at Easton on September 30.

H. A. Weber, of West Front street, has returned from spending his vacation at Ocean Grove.

BUILD THE CITY HALL FIRST.

Bids submitted on the construction of the new City Hall may have shocked a few citizens, but those interested in building of any kind felt no surprise when they learned that the appropriation of $150,000 would hardly be enough to erect and furnish a new home for municipal departments. The Council can be trusted to handle this matter with intelligence, but it is going to require no small amount of courage for those who are now candidates for office to vote a special appropriation on top of what has already been provided. If the low bids submitted Tuesday evening are found to come from responsible contractors, and it is proven that the work cannot be done at a lower price, then there is nothing to do but award contracts. That will mean that more money must come for furnishings. It would be false economy to reduce the building cost. Plainfield has waited long for a new city hall and when the building is ready for occupancy its people desire that a structure be provided that is complete—one that will serve for many years. No matter if it is not fully furnished on the day of dedication. The desks, rugs and other articles incidental to occupancy can be bought month by month, if necessary, once the building is ready, but the adding of rooms or wings planned in the complete structure during the coming years would be unsatisfactory, expensive and foolish. Build a city hall that will be a credit to Plainfield.

When City Judge William De Meza slapped a fine of $50 onto a "masher" in police court Tuesday he sounded a warning that should be heeded by the men, young and old, who frequent street corners in many parts of the city. It is difficult to persuade young women that they should suffer the embarrassment of appearing in court to punish a contemptible loafer who annoys them, and for this reason complaints are not frequent. Judge De Meza is helping a great deal when he fines the limit in these cases. So few that are guilty come before him that he must make the punishment severe.

The New Jersey Liquor Dealers' Association, in session in Newark, passed resolutions yesterday insisting that the liquor industry be absolutely and completely divorced from all forms of gambling and that a license shall not be granted to any hotel or cafe which caters to the dissolute or disorderly element and declared "unalterable hostility" to the sale of liquor to minors. Such a platform may be original for the Liquor Dealers' Association but the saloon men are robbed of any credit for good intentions by the simple fact that the criminal statutes of the State beat them to their reforms.

Plainfield Theatre.

The "cocktail scene" is what the major part of its admirers describe as the most excruciatingly funny of all the funny parts of Avery Hopwood's "Fair and Warmer," the widely heralded farce which Selwyn & Company will present at the Plainfield Theatre tonight. Following its year long run at the Eltinge Theatre in New York to packed houses and half-hysterical audiences.

This scene put the critics to their wits' end for suitable similies, when it was first presented. One of them said, "It would make the lions laugh on the steps of the Public Library," and another said, "It would make even Horace Greeley's statue laugh."

"Fair and Warmer" is insiduously the brilliant Avery Hopwood at his best. His "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow" had run the standard of American farces to the very top—in fact, it was the first of these which first displaced the foreign farce from its post of honor. In "Fair and Warmer" he settled once and for all any question of his supremacy.

Two upright and respectable persons, the one a husband far too good for human nature's daily entertainment, and the other a little wife whose experience with life has been largely got from the end of mother's apron string, to their astonishment, find that their respective spouses have been deceiving them, and having more joy out of life than can be found at the family hearthstone.

The second bill for the first week of vaudeville at the Plainfield Theatre is as well patronized as the first one and is, if anything, an improvement over it. Five excellent acts of comedy and drama are included in a bill with some excellent moving pictures. Besides the regular three-reel drama and a comedy there is Pathe Weekly and other educational pictures.

"Memories," a big act embracing singing, posing, dancing and other novel features, is the headliner attraction for tomorrow afternoon and night. Wallingham & Botti present a clever little sketch, entitled "At the Railroad Station," while the Watson Four, terming themselves as the harmony kings in vaudeville, are entertaining, to a degree. "Some Boy" is a comedy sketch that is a twenty-minute scream, and the excellent singing and dancing team of Wilson & Cecil bring up at the end of the show. Vaudeville is temporarily discontinued today while the show that has weathered two years in New York, entitled "Fair and Warmer," holds the boards. After tonight until September 18, when "The Merry Rounders" will be the attraction, vaudeville will reign supreme with some excellent shows booked.

HELPING OTHERS.

Every day might easily be made a happy day for some one. Even into the depths of misery happiness can penetrate, and a kindly act, a cheerful word or a little bit of timely assistance often works wonders and brings joy where all was gloom before. You can help each day by making at least one person happy.

Note on a Certain Lady.

I'm acquainted with a lady fair,
I think you've met her, too.
She "never has a thing to wear,"
Does that sound strange to you?

But, still, "without a thing to wear"
She goes out in the storm,
And, strange to say, this lady fair,
Somehow keeps nice and warm.

It seems "without a thing to wear"
She'd be afraid some day
Somebody would a warrant swear
Because she went that way.

Jealous.

(Naval surgeon reports that American men are too fat to be perfectly healthy and "any attempt at effort lacks power, if thrust through the bones and joints is lost.")

We long have held the idee that
It is unlucky to be fat.

It interferes much with your health,
And your pursuit of sordid wealth.
They knock us fat folks every day,
There is no end to what they say;
They roast us, and they roast us good.
They always criticise our food—
They tell us where we get so at
As quick as "scat" when we are fat.

But still somehow I do not think
I'd care to be a skinny gink,
With all my bones a-stickin' through
And lookin' like I'd break in two.
There's nothing much that I can see
In being slim and willowy.
So let them spread their ancient bunk
About us folks, for it's all punk.

- Proctor's Theatre -

A stupendous aggregation of talent and photoplay masterpieces greet patrons at Proctor's today and Saturday. Charlie Chaplin again appears before patrons of Proctor's today and Saturday in his latest comedy, entitled "The Count." This Mutual Chaplin depicts Charlie back in his old business with his familiar baggy trousers, cutaway coat, dinky derby, diminutive mustache and slender cane and his celebrated brogans. The fun making is fast and furious as Chaplin introduces some original and hilarious stunts. Excellent assistance has been rendered by Chaplin's supporting cast, which includes Eda Purviance, Eric Campbell, Lee White and Charlotte Mineau. In addition today Mollie King and Arthur Ashley are seen in a fantastical farce comedy, entitled "The Summer Girl," a William A. Brady production directed by Edwin August. The latest Mutual Weekly, depicting world events, is also on today's program.

Tomorrow in addition to Charlie Chaplin in "The Count," Paramount presents a faithful picturization of Denman Thompson's immortal rural classic, "The Old Homestead." This is the old classic to the life, and so faithfully has the original been followed that the atmosphere is with us on the screen to a greater extent than is usual in such offerings. The hundreds in this city who knew Denman Thompson as Joshua Whitcomb, will want to see the picture, and doubtless all of them will be mightily well pleased. Frank Losee does faithful and sincere work as Joshua Whitcomb, as does Creighton Hale as Reuben. In ddition tomorrow Crane Wilbur will be seen in a compelling dramatic offering entitled "The Spite Husband."

On Monday V. L. S. E. day will be celebrated, the two five-reel attractions from the V. L. S. E. studios consisting of "The Tarantula," starring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno, and "According to the Code," with Marguerite Clayton in the stellar role. The second episode of "Beatrice Fairfax" will also be shown on Monday.

RUTGERS COLLEGE TO OPEN OCTOBER 3

Each Student Will Be Required to Furnish Health Certificate.

President Demarest, of Rutgers College, has made the following announcement:

The day for the opening of Rutgers College for the year 1916-17 is postponed from Wednesday, September 20, to Tuesday, October 3, at 8:20 a. m. The health conditions in New Brunswick are very favorable and increasingly so. Throughout the State of New Jersey and the country at large, also, the situation constantly improves.

The Advisory Committee of the Trustees, however, while considering the earlier date entirely safe, have decided, after consultation with medical advisers and with the office of the State Board of Health, to allow two weeks extra before assembling the students from their scattered places of residence, thus conforming to the date chosen by many colleges at this time.

It is required that each student on his return or entrance to college bring with him a certificate from his local Board of Health that he is free from poliomyelitis and that he has been in no known exposure to it.

The examinations for the removal of deficiencies, appointed for September 8, 19 and 20, are changed to Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 21, 22 and 23. The examinations for admission, appointed for September 12 and 19, are changed to Thursday and Friday, September 28 and 29.

THEATRICAL BILLBOARD

The Hippodrome's, New York, latest production, "The Big Show," played to $27,000 on its first five performances. The weekly cost of operating the Hippodrome is about $40,000. One of the attractions, Marck's Lions, engaged for thirty weeks at $1,000 weekly, was cancelled after the opening performance. The management continues to pay the salary.

Raymond Hitchcock is to reappear in London next spring in "The Yankee Consul." Alfred Burt will be his English manager.

The British playwrights have joined a movement to encourage national thrift and industrial conservation. Sir James Barrie and Sir Arthur Pinero have promised Oswald Stoll, theatre magnate and financial writer, to produce playlets having that object in view. Alfred Sutro's "The Great Redding Street Burglary," now at the Coliseum, is the first."

The William Morris interests will open a variety show headed by Eva Tanguay September 20. It will play across the continent. Harry Lauder, the same office announces, probably will not tour America until the autumn of 1917.

Broadway concensus agrees that of the new plays of this year "Turn to the Right" promises the largest success, second choice is "Cheating Cheaters."

Charles Henry Meltzer, music and art critic of the New York American, has resigned and will syndicate his writings.

Willie Collier, just opening in a new production, has asked his management to book him in the cities which will hold the world's baseball series.

Nora Bayes has placed herself under the management of Henry Miller, and will appear in a legitimate play under the Miller direction. Mr. Miller has refused all offers to appear in pictures.

May Irwin's company is to have a Thousand Islands background for their rehearsal period in Miss Irwin's play. Rehearsals have been called to start September 17 at Irwin Isle in the St. Lawrence River. The company will be their principal's guests for two weeks, rehearsing on the lawn adjoining Miss Irwin's cottage.

DRY SPECIAL STARTS ON COUNTRY-WIDE TOUR

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 8.—The most prominent feature of the most aggressive national campaign ever waged by the Prohibition party was launched in Chicago today, when the "prohibition special," carrying J. Frank Hanly, the presidential candidate, and Dr. Ira Landrith, candidate for vice president, started on a tour that will cover the country from end to end. The wheels of the "dry" special will keep moving until the night before the national election. The trip is expected to reach 600 cities and towns and the cost is estimated at around $40,000. The train will proceed first to the Pacific Coast, then sweep back across the continent to the Eastern States, and return to the Middle West. The swing back east probably will come the first of October and the tour will close at some point in Indiana on the night of Nov. 6.

Besides the national candidates, the train is to carry Oliver W. Stewart, chairman of the national campaign committee; Daniel A. Poling, of Boston, associate president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, several women speakers of national reputation, State chairmen and candidates and prominent Prohibitionists who are to join the party en route.

SKATING SETS OF PONTINE NEW.

Already Heralds of Winter Months Come in the Form of Felt and Worsted, Also Pontine Sets.

(By Mary Glynn.)

To mention skating sets at this time of the year is no less absurd than it is to accept as fashionable the huge fur pieces that are being worn despite the fact that it is "unity-in-the-shade." Skating sets there are—all made up and set away for the time when they may be used. Some are fascinating affairs consisting of cap and scarf in crochet, with charming little clusters of yarn flowers in gay colors. For instance, a set in deep rose color has a fringe finished scarf, and just above the scarf there is a caty-cornered arrangement of gay yarn flowers. It is very effective and exceedingly pretty. The hat is a smart roll brim sailor shape, not the mussy turban, but a trim smart hat, with the clusters of the same flowers. The combination is charming. These sets may be had in Copenhagen, and brown, with contrasting yarn flower clusters. The Pontine sets are also extremely new and very attractive. Cute close-fitting hats with saucy arrangement of the reverse color loom up most anywher on it, to say nothing of the manner in which the capes and scarfs feature this dual-faced fabric. To lend a touch of winter atmosphere there are varying bands of fur stitched to the edge, affording a seasonable and smart finish.

ABOUT FALL COATS.

Top Coats—Three Quarter or Hem Length—Silk Stitching and Buttons Used for Trimming.

(By Mary Glynn.)

A top coat one must have this fall, for they are undoubtedly going to be an important item of Mademoiselle's as well as Madam's wardrobe. Thanks to the designers here and abroad, there are many very attractive models to select from. Also there are many degres of dressiness. A particular feature of the coats shown is the fact that many of them are nipped at the waistline, either by way of the manner which they are cut or by the belt. The materials used in these garments vary, there being many new, heavy fabrics that are essential coatings. Also the velours and deep pile fabrics. The trimming used on these garments may be fur, buttons, braid, silk stitching, or cordings; furs and buttons will prove most popular. The practical-looking coat illustrated was developed in dark green permo fabric; the only trimming evident being the silk stitching and huge buttons of self material. The fan cuffs and deep collar are interesting features. Completing the costume were button boots and a smart velvet hat.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— A Little Mermaid Goes to a Wedding.

She Danced So Beautifully.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

THE children loved a sea story, so daddy told them: "A prince once journeyed to his bride to be in a distant kingdom. All the church bells rang, and beautiful heralds on horseback rode through the town telling everybody about the wedding. Upon every altar in the land fragrant oil was burned in costly silver lamps. Amidst swinging censors the bride and bridegroom joined hands and received the bishop's blessing.

"Now, the prince had taken along with him a little mermaid that had once saved his life at sea and who loved him very dearly. At the wedding she was dressed in silk and gold and stood holding the bride's train. But her ears were deaf to all the music and joy, for she was thinking of her coming death. The old sea witch, who had changed her into a human, had decreed this, you see, when the prince married a land maiden.

"That evening the bride and bridegroom went on board the prince's ship amidst the roar of cannon and the waving of banners. A royal tent of purple velvet was placed on the top deck, with many golden pillows, where the bridal pair were to rest.

"At dusk lanterns were hung about the ship. They were of many bright colors, and under them sailors danced merrily on deck. The little mermaid could not help thinking of the first time she came up from the sea and saw the same kind of splendor and gayety as this of the wedding. Then the prince was celebrating his sixteenth birthday. Meanwhile she had lost him, although she had saved his life.

"To keep from remembering she now threw herself among the dancers, whirling to the music as a swallow skims through the air.

"Those who looked on cheered her in amazement, she danced so beautifully. Her delicate feet, which never had quite become used to walking, pained her as if knives were cutting into them. But she did not feel it, for the pain in her heart was much sharper. She knew it was the last night she would breathe the same air as the prince did. She knew soon she must look out upon the mighty deep and the blue starry heavens, an endless night without dreams for her who had no soul and could not win one. The only way she could have a soul, you see, was to win the prince's love. And now he was married to another maiden!

"The joy on shipboard lasted till long past midnight. The little mermaid went on laughing and dancing, although the thought of her own fate was always in her heart. She was a brave little mermaid, wasn't she, Jack?"

Training a Husband

BY MARIE EVA LEONARD

Morris Succeds in Spoiling Another Evening.

"Here is a very amusing little story, Marian. I should like to read it to you. Can you come in and sit down soon?" Morris Southy stood in the kitchen door holding a magazine, his finger marking the place. Marian flushed with pleasure. It had been long since he had done any reading aloud. There had been too many interruptions from the children and the pleasant practice had been abandoned years before.

"I will put the children to bed so we will not be disturbed. It will not take very long.

"Come, little folks," she called cheerily. "Let's get ready for the sand man."

About half an hour later she came into the living room, mending basket in hand.

"It is so pleasant to be read to while I mend." She drew up a low chair to the big lamp on the table. She sat listening to the voice of her husband. It was a pleasant voice when he was good natured. The story was good and she was thinking how pleasant it all was when the shears fell from her lap to the floor with a loud crash.

"Good heavens, Marian, can't you tie those instruments of torture to you so they will not annoy a person like that?" The fretful contractions had again appeared between her husband's eyes.

"I will let them be on the floor; then they will not fall again." Marian's voice showed extreme contrition.

"Why could I not have remembered the shears. I know just what kind of a start it gives him to have them drop," thought the wife, taking herself fiercely to task.

"Aren't you going to finish the story?" she asked for Morris did not resume his reading.

"If I thought I could get through it without another shot I might," he answered grudgingly. After the vindicative pause had been again prolonged, Morris began in a hard unpleasant voice the interrupted reading. The beauty of the story gradually made him forget his grievance, and alas it also made Marian forget to replace the shears on the floor when she used them. Just in the most exciting part of the narrative, crash, clatter again went the shears. Morris started as if he had been shot, banged the book on the table and glared at the contrite Marian.

"I am so sorry, I forgot and left them on my lap. It was because the story was so interesting. I won't use them again. There." She tucked them in the bottom of the basket.

"Now you will finish the story, won't you," she smiled deprecatingly at her enraged lord. He had picked up the magazine and was perusing its pages in silence.

"Please read aloud. I will be good." She imitated Little Florence's baby tones. The little girl was the most adored little being on earth to the father. Still the irate man read calmly on apparently oblivious of her presence.

Marian with mounting color picked up the evening paper and began to turn over its pages. She was not a great reader of newspapers. She seldom had time to more than look over the headings, so she turned from page to page to find something that interested her.

"I wish you would learn to read a newspaper without making it an instrument of torture," snapped her husband.

Marian cast a look of fierce resentment in her husband's direction and left the room carrying the mending basket with her. She wiped the angry tears from her eyes as she mounted the stairs in the dark and threw herself on the bed.

"That is the way it always is. We could have had a pleasant evening if he had not gone all to pieces over nothing. I wonder what we are coming to. What can I do? I can not keep my self respect and be talked to like that." She heard Morris moving around below stairs and hastily prepared for bed. When her husband came up to the room, she lay with her face to the wall, apparently asleep

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.—Adv.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

TO BE OR NOT TO BE.

That is the question. William Shakespeare, the Bard of Avon, is the author of that statement. But, of course, Shakespeare did not make the statement in the same connection as we do. To be or not to be the champions of the world is today troubling the Brooklyn Dodgers. A stand of twenty-five straight games at home has given Wilbert Robinson a little confidence and he still hopes to be able to lead his charges to victory. Those pesky Phillies and the fighting Bostonians are giving Mr. Robinson no peace. Sleeping at night is rather a displeasing task. At least, Manager Robinson feels that he has plenty about which to worry. Let him come out to Plainfield and watch the City Leaguers in action. Perhaps he would take things easily after that.

• • • • • • •

MANAGER TENNEY, TAKE NOTICE.

We would like the sporting editor of the Newark Evening News to read this article. This is one he didn't invent himself. Also, we would like to have Manager Fred Tenney, of the Newark Indians, read the story. Here goes. Eddie Coughlan is one of the fastest fielders in the City League. Eddie can hit. Fans and other people who know something about baseball say that Eddie is sure of success in the big show. Now we have noticed that the Indians have been going along poorly. It seems to us that a rattling good infielder could be used. While we do not believe that Eddie Coughlan could make good over night, still we do believe that anyone who took the trouble to give him a trial would never regret the action. Mr. Tenney, take notice.

BENTONIAN BATTLES.

"Rube" Benton, like "Rube" Marquard, is a pitcher. He hurls the "cork-center" baseball for the New York Giants. In the first game of the double header the other day Benton was victorious. He held the Superbas to four hits and felt that he was in fine trim to undertake an "Iron Man" stunt. Johnny McGraw was consulted. Johnny had no objections whatsoever. So the second battle found Benton again on the hollick. But Reuben was batted rather freely this time. He was clouted for ten hits, but he had accomplished something. He had overcome an inclination to do only his share. Now he is willing to do someone else's work.

INTEREST SHIFTING.

Ten days ago the baseball public had practically given the Dodgers the National League pennant and devoted all time to watching the race in the American, a clash that was as close as one could wish for, but suddenly the Phils and Dodgers on an even basis, and the Braves just a little notch back, the teams are turning into the stretch. Brooklyn has been in a very bad slump, one of the worst periods of the entire season. The Robinson crowd seems to have forgotten how to complete more than three-fourths of the distance to the home plate. Yesterday the streak was broken, and with every fellow keyed to the limit maybe they will get going again, as Brooklyn is by far the best balanced club in the circuit and better prepared for a hard drive to the end than any other outfit. Boston and Philadelphia have been going in spurts, and if a choice was made at this time Brooklyn would look the best. They are getting good pitching and the hitting at times when needed has been a feature up until the big slump. Pittsburgh, of course, is out of the race for the flag, but much interest is shown in where the club will finish, as the fans wants a first division berth. Callahan has an excellent opportunity to jump into the first section, and if he finishes there it will be a great tribute to his ability, as he has been up against some tough conditions this season and the fans, before the season started, did not pick him to finish better than third at the highest, with fourth place just a hope. It will be a very successful season in Pittsburgh if a first division berth is brought there.

FOOTBALL GOSSIP.

"With Pitt and Tech both in practice for their hard schedules, it looks like a great local year on the gridiron. Tech has come forward in leaps and bounds during the past two seasons, and getting a schedule such as the 1916 card shows places them in prominence. True, some of the big eastern games might be considered as practice stuff for the Oriental section, but what Tech has shown in the past gives them a good chance to cop a victory over one of the big teams, and the fact must not be forgotten that it is an early season game for the Plaid, too. Steffen has worked wonders with the Plaid team since he took hold, as conditions are not of the best for football at Tech, not nearly so encouraged by the faculty as at Pitt. As for the Gold and Blue, last season was the best season on its record, and with most of the sensations of 1915 that split the highest honors with Cornell, and some extra good materials from the freshman outfit, Pittsburgh should repeat the record of the first year under Warner. The interest in football has grown with the advanced steps of the local teams in getting on the big schedules, and the attendances promise to leap forward accordingly. Pittsburgh is just breaking into the real limelight of the gridiron and gaining due recognition, and there is little cause to worry about the reputation already gained suffering now."—Pittsburgh Leader.

FRITZ BELIEVES IT.

Though he has only tried out second base in one game, Fritz Maisel says he thinks he will do well at the position. He likes the position and says that it offers none of the obstacles that he encountered as an outfielder.

Frank Baker will get his first chance today to see how his batting eye has fared during the long absence. The game against Johnson hardly counts.

TAD JONES TO COACH.

One of Yale's best-known football players, A. Alonzo Stagg, '88, coach of the University of Chicago eleven, will assist Head Coach "Tad" Jones in drilling the Yale football players for a short time, it was learned yesterday. The blue candidates started practice today in the bowl.

GEORGE MILLER HURLS P. S. R. TO VICTORY

Hope Chapel Pitcher is the "Whole Show" in Public Service Game.

The Elizabeth Division of the Public Service defeated the Hilton team at Elizabeth yesterday, George Miller, of this city, performing on the mound for the winners and allowing but eight hits. Miller, who is a Hope chapel pitcher, fanned eleven men, obtained three hits and stole two bases. Outside of that, he did little or nothing.

One of the Elizabeth newspapers has this to say of George:

"The principal factor in the win registered by the new champions was George Miller, the local's hard-working twirler. Miller's three bingles at opportune moments, his two runs and heady pitching posted him as being the star of the session. Several times with men on bases George fanned the next batter. Eleven strikeouts went to his credit, while he allowed but eight scattered safeties. Although Miller's work on the mound and at bat puts him in the front, this does not leave the other Elizabeth performers off without any credit. Every one of the homsters is in for a share, as they exhibited their wares by not 'throwing up the sponge.'"

ATHLETES IN TITLE MEET.

A steady stream of athletes has been pouring into Newark during the past twenty-four hours. Before noon today more than half a thousand men, representing the cream of America's athletic talent, had assembled at Weequahic Park to participate during this afternoon and Saturday in the National Amateur Athletic Union junior and senior championships. Of the hundreds of entries more than fifty per cent. are title holders. The contestants were selected at elimination trials held in the different sections of the country. The result is that the competitions will bring together the foremost amateur performers of the East, the South, the Middle West, the Far West and the Pacific Northwest. The junior championships are slated for this afternoon and the senior events for tomorrow. Each day's program calls for nineteen events besides the usual list, including one-mile walk, running hop, step and jump, 440-yard low hurdles, throwing 50-pound weight, discus throw and javelin throw. A gold medal will be given to the winner in each event and silver and bronze medals to second and third men. In addition a cup will be awarded in the name of the athletic club scoring the greatest number of points, four places to count.

RALPH RUNYON COMPETES IN POLE VAULT AT WEEQUAHIC PARK TOMORROW

Local Athlete Will Have to Extend Himself to Win—Leaves for Penn State in Few Days—K. Caldwell Also in Pole Vault.

Ralph Runyon, the former Plainfield High School vaulter, who has established for himself a creditable record, has been entered in the pole vault and high jumping events at the Junior Championships, which are being held in Newark today and tomorrow.

The local lad, who is at present a student at Penn State, will compete under the colors of the New York A. C. and will have a very capable field of competitors, some of whom have come from the distant Pacific Coast. In the pole vault the local lad will have to battle with F. A. Watkins, of the Los Angeles A. A.; S. Petander, of the S. A. A. C.; K. Caldwell, of the Irish-American A. C.; Joe Nagle and Jack Brown, both of the New York A. C.; A. R. Hickman, of St. Louis, and E. C. Reich, of Pittsburgh.

In the running high jump Runyon will have to extend himself, inasmuch as his competitors are recognized as exceedingly adept. Runyon will have eleven rivals in this event, several of the contestants coming from the Middle West and Pacific Coast.

In a few days Ralph will go back to Penn State, where he will continue his studies and athletic activities. Ralph is readily developing into one of the best pole vaulters in the country, and his performance at Weequahic Park today will be watched with considerable interest.

Runyon competes, at the present time, under the colors of the New York A. C., having transferred his allegiance from the Pastime Club to the Sparrow Robertson Association.

GEORGE MILLER PICKS ALL STAR TEAM AND CHALLENGES "SPORT TOPIC" OUTFIT

In Fact Miller's Team Will Meet Any Other Combination—Sport Topic Players Are Requested to Consult Sporting Editor—Game Will Be Played — Raymond Tinsman's Choice.

When we picked that All-Star City League we knew that something was going to happen. Something has happened and plenty of interesting reading—if nothing else—[illegible] the fans who follow our [illegible] Topics.

George Miller, the centre-fielder and pitcher of the Hope Chapel team, dropped into the office this morning to submit a lineup which he and his pals believe can defeat the one picked by us. In fact, Miller says that his men can defeat any team. Managers are requested to get busy at once. If those players, whom we picked, are interested in the matter of playing Miller's team, let them consult with the sporting editor of this paper at once and we will see to it that Miller is forced to prove his contention.

Here are the rival lineups. Compare them, friend fans:

Sport Topics	Miller Men.
Trust	Miller centre field.
Compton	Wilson right field.
Coughlan	Clarke third base.
Emery	Harriman second base.
Brown	Jaeger shortstop.
Hannon	Garretson first base.
Bergen or Johnson	Alberts catcher.
Dixon	McLoughlin pitcher.
Denny	Schott pitcher.
Stewart	Moran (utility) pitcher.

Raymond Tinsman, the youthful scorer of the Dunellen team, has also submitted his "all-star" line-up. Raymond is a smart chap and his team is well worth consideration. Here it is: Johnson, catcher; Dixon, pitcher; Hannon, first base; Emery, second base; Brown, short; Coughan, third base; Wahl, left field; Gunzelman, centre field, and Trust, right field.

League Limelight

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

TOMMY MULLIN.

On North avenue lives Tommy Mullin—short in statue, but exceedingly "large" in the minds of all true fans. Tommy is a baseball player, knows the game from start to finish and plays it with a will.

Thomas started his career on the "sand dunes" of this city, and continued to play with his youthful outfit until the St. Mary's team captured him. Then he and his brother, Willie, began to distinguish themselves. The battery of Squires and Mullin became famous. With rapid strides North Avenue Tommy advanced to the front, until he took a trip to the South, playing in the Georgia League. Eating in that league was none too good and Tommy returned home. Almost immediately the Plainfielder was signed up by Billy Pfau, of the Perth Amboy Pacers. He is still with Pfau, athough that gentleman's baseball team is now losing favor. Frenzied finance is the cause.

In Thomas Mullin, Plainfield has an athlete, a baseball payer of whom we feel justly proud. Ever anxious to win, ever fighting to win, Tommy is always on the job and is a "rattling good" little chap.

GARDNER FORCED TO EXTEND HIMSELF TO WIN

The amateur golf championship of the United States stopped little Bobby Jones, the fourteen-year-old Southern expert, in the third round of the national tournament on the Merion links yeterday, but he had to live up to his name in every way to succeed. Robert A. Gardner, twice wearer of the championship crown, now is in the semi-final round. To reach that post of honor in the realm of golf, however, he had to call upon his accepted skill.

Although defeated by 5 up and 3 to play the youthful exponent of golf from Atlanta put up a splendid struggle. At the end of the morning round he was leading the champion by a hole. That fact alone speaks volumes for the boy.

TENNIS TOURNEY OFF.

The tennis committee of the Agawam Hunt has decided to postpone for one year the ladies' singles, doubles and mixed doubles tournaments for the championship of Rhode Island, which were scheduled for September 13. This action is taken because of the sudden death of Miss Lyra B. Nickerson, who was an active member of the tennis committee and the donor of the three-year championship challenge cup.

Games Tomorrow.

Hope Chapel vs. Baptists (West End Field).

The last City League game will be played tomorrow afternoon between the Hope Chapel and Baptists squads. This battle is the one over which there has been much discussion in league circles. In short, it is the "forfeited" encounter, which was ordered replayed by the moguls. The rival managers are anxious to capture this contest and settle for all time the discussion.

The Baptists promise to present their usual lineup and will, in all probability, have Fred Mills on the mound. Manager Martin will do his best to capture the contest and will have his best talent on hand. The game will be called at 3:30 promptly and should attract a large crowd.

Press Football Department

Army.

The Army football squad was out yesterday afternoon for a two-hour drill under Lieutenant Charles D. Daily, head coach. A half dozen units took part in the practice, which was vigorous in spite of the summer heat. Lieutenant Benny Hoge, captain of the 1913 eleven, has joined the coaching staff.

Rutgers.

Homer Hazel, the Montclair Academy football star and all-around athlete, made such a fine showing yesterday in the first practice of Rutgers College football team that Head Coach Foster Sanford is certain that the Montclair boy can soon be developed into a worthy successor of Captain Howard Talman as a punter and drop-kicker. He was one of the best punters in any of the New Jersey schools last year. Another promising player is Hinch, a 190-pound back from Penn Carter School of Philadelphia, who looks like a real find.

Nearly all of the veterans were in harness with the team, incuding Garrett, Scarr, Bracher, Wittpenn, Kelly and Randall. Except for the loss of Talman and Nash the team does not appear to have been greatly weakened.

Harvard.

With Eddie Mahan lost to the team by graduation, and with such stars as Don Wallace, Ernie Soucy, Don Watson, Ken Parson, Dick King and Ross Cowan also gone by the same route, Harvard's 1916 football squad trotted onto the field yesterday for its first fall workout.

Field Coach Leo H. Leary will be in charge of the squad, along with Captain Dadman, until Percy Haughton, president of the Boston Brayes, can leave his duties and get into action.

HIGHLANDERS PLAY ST. JOSEPH'S TEAM

All Star League Team Will Endeavor to Trim the Saints.

The Highlanders, composed of City League baseball players, will take on the St. Josephs at Hyde Field tomorrow, Eddie Conshay will do the pitching for the Saints, with Andrew McDonough behind the bat. Oscar Dilts will pastime at short, while Matty Coughlan, of the Netherwoods, will do a little work in the outer garden.

The Highlander lineup has been given out and is unusually formidable. Tone Denny, of the Tabs, will pitch, with Bill Dodd, of the Netherwoods, behind the bat. Art Kyle intends to do a little work in the region of first base, while Haberman will be at second. Frank Mullin is carded for short, and McCarty has been signed for third. In the outer works, Brennan, J. Denny and Stebor will be seen. Play ball!

TROOP D MAKES FINE SHOWING IN BRIGADE REVIEW WINNING PRAISE FROM ARMY OFFICERS

Cavalrymen From Plainfield and Newark Display Marked Efficiency—Troopers Murray and Logan Cheated Out of 60 Mile Hike—No Appointments Made to Fill Vacancies in Local Organization—More Time Now Given to Drills.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 3.—Troop D is today nursing swollen lips and bruised cheeks, the results of a day and one-half on the rifle range. Captain Borden's men were recalled from the range yesterday afternoon to participate in the brigade review and will have to return to finish their shoot Tuesday morning. Good scores were the rule and the Plainfielders were highly complimented by the range officers for the showing they made. The range is about a mile from camp, and the men take provisions to last throughout the day when they go returning after mess at night.

The entire troop was on guard last night and today, this meaning general cutting down in work along the camp street but guard and detail duty in all parts of the big camp. Captain Borden's men made an excellent showing in the brigade review yesterday afternoon, and had the honor of a personal call from General T. F. Davis, commander of the Arizona district, following the exhibition. General Davis was the reviewing officer and he had some nice things to say about the Jersey units, particularly the cavalry.

It was the concensus of opinion among the scores of regular army officers and townspeople who attended the review that the cavalry troops from Plainfield and Newark showed up the best of any units. Under the command of Major Robert Brown, of Newark, they marched three-quarters around the immense parade grounds and then did a "double-"quick the remaining quarter, after passing Generals Davis and Hine at the reviewing stand. The only Plainfield soldier in the reviewing squad was Bugler Warren Ackerman, the buglers of the brigade occupying a position next to the general and his staff. This was the initial brigade review at Douglas and culminated in a number of receptions to visiting army officers in various parts of the camp.

The detail of orderlies on duty at brigade headquarters today includes Roger Mellick and Reginald Rowland, of Plainfield. Troopers John Logan and John Murray, of Troop D, returned from the Eighteenth Infantry headquarters at Camp Harry Jones yesterday afternoon with instructions to prepare for a sixty-mile hike with the regulars. Logan and Murray made all preparations to join the outfit on the march, but the order was cancelled later in the day. These two troopers have been with the regulars for the past two weeks studying the cooking art, and as soon as the order for the discharge of the three negro cooks with Troop D is made final, Logan and Murray will be returned permanently to this camp to look after the kitchen work. It is likely that one will succeed Mess Seageant Hartley Mellick, who returned home Thursday night.

Many pictures of the Plainfield troop were snapped during yesterday's parade, and the guardsmen are making preparations to ship these back to Plainfield today for developing. The photography work in local shops has proven very unsatisfactory and only a few good pictures of the Plainfielders have been received.

A great majority of the Plainfielders are anxious to get back home and they all have a "hunch" that the return trip will be made within the next week, at least orders will be received during that interval. Orders were issued today cancelling all further applications for dependency and college entrance discharges, and this is taken as another indication that the return orders are on the way. Trooper Hibbard was the only Plainfielder affected by the college entrance rule and he is expected to enter upon his studies at the Boston "Tech" College the middle of this month. Many of the troopers are laying odds with venturesome Jerseyites in other units that they'll be back home before the fifteenth, but the officers of the troop are not inclined to have a share in this optimism.

One thing is certain, and that is that if Troop D remains here two weeks longer, the unit will be taken on a fifteen-day hike, covering sixty-one miles going out and the same amount going back. The troop will be on the road twelve days and in camp three days. It is likely that the other units remaining at that time will join in the march. If this comes off it will mean that the men will have no chance of entraining for a home station before October 1.

Up to this time no appointments have been made to fill the vacancies caused by the discharge of the Troop D corporals and sergeants, who left for home the middle of last week except one, Trooper John Sickler having been raised to sergeant. It is expected that these will come along within the next few days and all of the men are eagerly anticipating their arrival as promotions, of course, mean raises in pay.

All of the Plainfielders are now thoroughly acclimated and several are complaining that they are taking on too much weight. All of the men are enjoying the best of health and the work now on the schedule is of an interesting nature. The rough work has been completed and more time is now being given over to drilling and regular army practice tactics.

CURRENT EVENTS AT DOUGLAS, ARIZONA.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE

Bugler Warren Ackerman has become the camp pest. He persists in keeping everyone else awake after taps while he sits on the edge of his cot and plays a goodnight ditty on the mandolin entitled, "What A Wonderful Girl You Are," to the picture of a fair damsel hanging on his tent wall.

Sergeant Alberts continues to be troubled with the inexperienced horse handlers. Private "Jim" Mickle spilled a couple of oats while putting the nose bag on his horse the other morning and came running back to headquarters, like any obedient little soldier boy should, with the request: "Sergeant, can I have three more oats, I spilled some of mine?"

Then, again, another youth doing picket line guard woke Sergeant Alberts up at 3 o'clock the other morning, with this report in an effeminate tone of voice: "Sergeant, the horses are getting rougher." Alberts, half asleep, replied, "Go to the blacksmith shop and get a rasp and file the rough spots off." The rookie carried out the order.

Reggie Rowland is willing to bet his next month's pay that we will be ordered away from here within two weeks. Now we're wondering where he's going to get next month's pay inasmuch as he thinks he will not be called upon to labor more than two weeks longer for Uncle Sam.

The boys are getting so used to posing for the camera that when they get back home they will require a certain amount of "photographing" to keep them in a normal state of mind.

Private Brakeley, of Dunellen, who sails under the colors of the Field Hospital Corps, is interested in the management of a restaurant in Pirtleville. Maybe the reason for some of the stomach complaint about camp.

Private Kirby is still complaining about his health. He has scouts out trying to find some ailments from which he hasn't suffered since arrival here. Thus far they have met with little success.

Captain Borden has grown a goatee since landing here, thereby giving further evidence of his democracy as a soldier. No one has been able to photograph him as yet.

Private Roger Mellick was called upon to guard two frisky mules at brigade headquarters Sunday. He was forced to enlist the services of Reggie Rowland and both were supplied with plenty of exciting entertainment during the afternoon.

Wells, alias "Fat," Cregar is in the bad graces of his sergeant. Cregar fell asleep after putting the nose bags on the horses along the picket line Sunday night and when Sergeant Alberts found the animals struggling to get their noses free a few hours later, he picked up the 300-pound private and hurled him out of his tent. Cregar is now looking for a lodging-house.

Because he failed to master "Susan," the troop's mascot burro, Private Barry has been reduced from the rank of a soldier to that of a mule skinner. His superiors are firm in their demand that he ride the burro before trying a horse.

Lieutenant J. N. Charles has a "hunch" that the cavalry will be here for at least another month, thereby leading us to believe that the troops may be called upon to entertain Mr. Pancho Villa, single-handed.

Because they thought the news scribes needed more exercise the headquarters staff today cut out the field telegraph station. Now we have to walk a mile to town to get any wire "copy" away. We're all afraid that Captain Borden is going to offer to loan us a horse.

There's no chance for Troop D to get excited over news in the Daily Press down here. We get the paper five days late, so if there is ever a chance of something thrilling happening it has generally happened before we hear about it. We'll have an awful time getting "acclimated" to shocks when we arrive home.

First-class Private Roger Mellick performed his first duty as corporal Saturday night at the fights. He is to be appointed corporal as soon as the vacancies are declared officially. Roger took care of his duties so well that a captain of the regular army asked, "Where did Troop D get the regular?"

John Foster Sickler has been appointed supply sergeant to fill the vacancy left by "Chermany" Joost. So far he has had one stumbling block. He cannot get used to the "Shetland pony" of his predecessors.

Corporals Ransome, Ivins and Fleming were busy all day yesterday receiving the congratulations of every man in the troop for their promotions to sergeancy. As yet they have not bought cigars but "pay day" comes this week and Troop D is liable to go on sick report.

Thursday and Friday nights were the gloomiest hours that Troop D have had. Sergeants Mellick, Brewster, Corporals Perkins and Tyler left for home Thursday. First Sergeant Brown Rolston, Sergeant "Boss" Andrews and Corporal "Weary-Weary" Buttfield left Friday. The troop street looked like a deserted village on both nights.

Private Duclo, the officers' cook, certainly has made good. His apple pies will make you forget home and most everything else except the quickest way to the "base-hospital."

Private Schultz, the troop "lawyer" or the "liar," whichever is the handiest, is taking all bets that we do not move before October 1.

COMPANY G MEN WANT REAL FOOD

Balk on Five Milk Hike and Win Point With Regimental Commanders.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 3.—Demanding real food in sufficient quantity rather than "appetite teasers," the men in Company G, Fourth New Jersey Infantry, of Jersey City, yesterday balked on participating in a five-mile practice hike, and after a long wrangle won their point with the regimental commanders. They informed the captain of the outfit that they liked exercise, but that marching with a collapsible "tummy" and craving for army beans did not appear especially tempting.

When the order came for the trip back to Jersey of the First and Fourth Regiments last week, there was a mixup in providing sufficient rations for several of the companies. They ran short until new rations could be drawn, and yesterday morning's breakfast in Company G's tent was a mere bluff, the men declare. Dinner was litttle better, the pitiful array of food being so meager that it would look stingy at an afternoon tea. The coffee was thinned to the transparent stage and there was only about half a spud to a man, and the biscuits were left-overs warmed up.

Facts were submitted to Colonel George F. Vickers, the regimental commander, who explained to the soldiers that they had made a mistake in refusing to obey orders and he asked them if they would abide by his decision. Every man answered in the affirmative and this being satisfactory, he sent them to their tents, declaring that he would not compel them to hike if they were underfed. Everybody is getting plenty to eat today and everything is serene once again.

GIVES CITY MUCH DESIRED PUBLICITY

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Building on Border Attracting Attention.

Plainfield is securing a large amount of desirable publicity over the entire country as a result of the generosity of its citizens in providing a Y. M. C. A. building for the troops who went to the border. The following is a paragraph from a letter from Fred A. McCarl, international secretary, printed in "Border Work," a publication sent to every association in the country:

"On reaching Douglas I went out to visit the Association building there, in charge of B. T. Pest, physical director of the Newark N. J., Y. M. C. A. who has associated with has associated with him A. N. Eagles, of Orange, and C. E. Crissy, of Newark. I found the building crowded with soldiers. Plainfield citizens, through whose generosity the Y. M. C. A. was able to put up the building can be proud of their investment. It is a wooden structure 40x80 feet, with conveniences for writing, and it is truly a social and recreattion centre. They are giving away from 2,500 to 3,000 sheets of paper a day there, and I should say that seventy-five to ninety per cent. of the New Jersey men are making extensive use of the building. I heard many words of commendation and appreciation."

"Border Work" also carries the information that $3,800 has been paid out by the New Jersey State Association and State committee for work done among militiamen in the border camps. These figures are from Charles Coburn, State secretary, who is in charge of the work.

KITS SENT BY PLAINFIELDERS APPRECIATED ON BORDER

That the kits send by friends back home are fully appreciated by the soldier boys along the border is evidenced by the following letter received by the Daily Press yesterday afternoon:

"Having received a repair kit, and learning that it was donated by the good people of Plainfield, I take pleasure in writing this letter, as a token of mine and my fellow comrades' regards for the good work that the above-named people are carrying on. If you will print this in your valuable paper you will oblige a soldier." The squad that received the kit signed themselves as follows: Privates, Edward C. Genader, Edward Battle, John Butler, B. J. Classey and Corporal William Liebhauser, Company H, Fourth Regiment, Douglas, Arizona.

PARATYPHOID HITS MEN OF COMPANY A

37 Cases Found—Entrie Company Under Quarantine Regulations.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 8.—Thirty-seven cases of paratyphoid have been discovered in Company A, of the First regiment. Capt. Roshbach yesterday ordered every man in the company to undergo a blood test at the base hospital in Douglas, and the entire company is also under quarantine. The men are forbidden to leave the company street. Company A recently returned from a long hike over the plains of Arizona, on which its men drank water from wells wherever it could be found and it is believed that the disease originated from this water. This company has been on the march more than any other company in camp. The condition of the men is not serious, but there are 112 soldiers in the company and each is being carefully watched. The malady is prevalent in other camps along the border, and all the men are taking extra precautions.

REV. W. A. HENNESEY TO RECEIVE $20,000

Beneficiary of Father's Estate Which is Valued at $230,000.

Rev. Walter A. Hennesey, lately appointed curate to St. Mary's church, this city, is heir to a legacy of $20,000 through the probate of the will of his father, the late James Hennesey, of Hamden, Conn., which disposes of an estate valued at $230,000. The estate is to be divided among his widow and eleven children, four of whom are residents of New Jersey. The will also stipulates that if any of the children contest the will he or she would be deprived of sharing in it. The New Jersey residents are Mrs. Thomas A. Kelly, of Paterson; James F. Hennesey, of Paterson; Rev. Walter A. Hennesey, of Plainfield, and Thomas J. Hennesey, of Passaic. Each is to receive $20,000. The will was offered for probaate at New Haven, Conn., Wednesday.

The late James Hennesey was a prominent member of the Cotton Exchange of New York and widely known among the business men of the metropolis. He had been in failing health for some time and his death occurred at his home in Hamden last Thursday night. The interment took place there Monday morning.

JOHN REINHART LIKES BORDER LIFE WITH TROOP D

Chief of Police Patrick Kiely received a letter this morning from John Reinhart, the former popular court stenographer, from Douglas, Ariz., where he is with Troop D. Reinhart says that every one has plenty of hard work, but that the food is excellent, and that helps a great deal. Contrary to the versions of others, he seems enthusiastic about the kind of life the boys are having on the border and seems in no hurry to get home.

The weather for several weeks now, he says, has been fine and the evenings he describes as wonderful. He says he is well, as are the majority of the local boys.

FIELD SECRETARY PLAN SUGGESTED

Knights of Golden Eagle Will Discuss Proposition at Coming Convention.

WILL ELECT OFFICERS

Percy W. Owen to Be Advanced to Post of Grand Chief—Ladies of Golden Eagle Meet at Atlantic City.

Knights of the Golden Eagle from all the sixty-five subordinate castles of the State will gather in Trenton on Monday, September 18, for the 33d annual session of the Grand Castle of New Jersey. Grand Chief Fred P. Cook, of Point Pleasant, will preside and the session will be held, as usual, in the hall of Mercer Castle, No. 23, in the Ribsam Building, opening at 10 o'clock.

One heretofore regular accompaniment of this annual gathering will be lacking this year, however, for the women of the Grand Temple, Ladies of the Golden Eagle, balked at the idea of returning to Trenton for their annual session this year and, instead, will go to Atlantic City, meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall there on the same day.

In the election of officers for the Grand Castle the present grand vice chief, Percy W. Owen, of Bridgeton, will be advanced to the post of grand chief for the coming year and the present grand sir herald, William H. Bergantz, of Camden, will become grand vice chief.

The election of a successor to Bergantz as grand sir herald, the first of the "line offices," is likely to produce the only spirited contest in the balloting. John Bethke, of Capital Castle, No. 28, of Trenton, has announced himself a candidate for the post and report has it that there will be several others.

The re-election of Grand High Priest John H. Dewis, of Asbury Park; Grand Master of Records A. L. Clark, of Trenton, and Grand Keeper of Exchequer P. H. Bennett, of Plainfield, is as certain as anything can be.

The present membership of the order in New Jersey is 7,343 and among various important matters to come before the Grand Castle will be that of how best to obtain a more rapid growth. The "major district" plan, which was set in operation a year ago with this in view, has not proved a success. While a few of the castles, notably Millville, No. 2, report large gains in membership, the weak castles, which were to have been looked after under the plan, do not show results. A field secretary is the proposition which will now be given attention.

The financial conditions of the sixty-five subordinate castles for the year ended June 30, last, as shown by the annual report of Grand Master of Records A. L. Clark, is as follows:

RECEIPTS.

From initiations, cards, etc.	$ 1,800.00
From dues and fines	57,092.39
From investments, etc.	22,624.00
Total receipts	$81,516.39

EXPENDITURES.

Paid out for sick benefits	$23,923.36
Paid out for death benefits	7,132.05
Paid out for donations	555.91
Total relief	$31,611.32
Paid out for sundry purposes	39,896.49
Paid out for investments	14,133.44
	$85,641.25
On hand June 30, 1916	$ 19,128.51
Invested	119,791.90
Total fund of Castles reporting	$138,920.41

During a period of thirty years the disbursements for sickness and death by the order in New Jersey have amounted to over $835,000.

The 36th session (first biennial) of the Supreme Castle of the United States will be held in Atlantic City, beginning Tuesday, October 10. Supreme Chief John W. Ford, of Philadelphia, will preside. It will be the first time in ten years that the Supreme Castle has met in New Jersey. A parade by the military branch will take place on Monday, October 9.

SUDDEN SHAKEUP IN JERSEY CAMP

Troops on "Pins and Needles" Concerning Wild and Reckless Rumors.

SAD LEAVE TAKING

Plainfield Boys Feel Homesick Over Departure of First and Fourth Regiments—Hard Drill Schedule Being Followed.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 5.—Like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky has come the sudden shakeup in things at the Jersey militia camp and the troopers are on "pins and needles" from morning till night concerning what the next minute will bring forth. Rumors, most of them of a wild and reckless nature, float into camp every hour and find ready believers on all sides. The soldier boys have reached a stage where they will believe anything and should one of the officers suddenly become lax and spring a rumor about going home just for a joke the outfit would be packed up waiting for the trains to pull into the siding within five minutes.

With one thing all minds are brim full and that is the thought of going home. The troopers from Plainfield formed a part of the big delegation that said "adios" to the departing First and Fourth regiments yesterday afternoon and the leave-taking of the two bodies of infantry cast a sudden pall of homesickness over the entire remaining section.

Captain Borden believes in hard work as a remedy for homesickness or any other similar ailment and with the prospect of going home becoming brighter each day he is putting his men through a stiff schedule of drill work. He is determined to smooth off the rough edges and officers take the cavalry to the parade grounds at 7:15 each morning, returning just before noon mess.

The torrid weather that greeted the soldiers on their arrival here and which disappeared for a short time last week, has returned in all its warmth. The thermometer yesterday reached a point the exact heighth of which would not sound like the unadulterated truth to folks back home. The air was clear but the sun was burning hot and as it reflected against the cacti covered desert it literally scorched the clothing of humans who attempted to walk across it. One cannot realize just what border heat really is until he has visited this section. Even the hardened and bronzed residents of this place hid indoors during the heated hours of the afternoon and dicussed the "terrible heat" with wilted companions.

Because of the intensity of the heat little hard work was done by Troop D and other units which were to remain here but the departing units had to do their packing in the sweltering temperature and this made their eagerness to quit Arizona all the more keen.

A noticeable feature of the final orders for the First and Fourth regiments was the fact that they were required to leave considerable government property and camping necessities behind. From this is taken the belief that Uncle Sam either intends to move a regular army unit into this camp or is going to send two more regiments, probably the Second and Third of New Jersey, down her for a couple of months' drilling. This is but one of the many rumors, but one thing is certain, and that is that the War Department has an object in leaving the departing units' camps in their present condition.

Great rivalry has existed between the various cooking departments since the soldiers arrived here, and one of Troop D's proudest boasts is the fact that it has the best corps of cooks in camp. To substantiate this contention the enlisted men point out the fact that their officers rarely eat their meals in downtown hotels while many of those in other units are regular borders at the city restaurants. The "chow" is above reproach and the men are given a big variety and quantity as well as quality. No one has a kick to offer in Troop D and this is a good deal more than can be said of other units here.

BROKAW ARRESTED AFTER YEAR'S CHASE

North Plainfield Man in Jail for Desertion of Wife and Children.

Clarence B. Brokaw, missing from Plainfield for almost a year, is in jail in Somerville today awaiting trial on a charge of having deserted his wife and children. Brokaw has been a fugitive from justice for many months. An indictment was found against him nearly a year ago on the charge of desertion, but the warrant was not served until yesterday because he could not be located. Brokaw formerly lived in North Plainfield and his wife and children are still residents of the borough.

He was arrested by County Detective George Totten at Southampton, Long Island, before daylight yesterday. Detective Totten had known that Brokaw was living at Southampton for some time, and had made several attempts to arrest the man, but Brokaw always learned of his coming and escaped. The officer went to Southampton Thursday night and waited until 4 a. m. Friday. Accompanied by a deputy sheriff he was in the house before Brokaw was awake, and the arrest was easily made. Brokaw was living with a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Mary Loset. She was not arrested.

Brokaw waived extradition and was brought back to Somerville yesterday. He is being held in the county jail there. No bond has been fixed.

EVERY VOTER SHOULD REGISTER FOR ELECTION

Important Facts as to How and When This Must Be Done.

That the voters of Plainfield may know exactly how and when they must register if they want to vote at the general election in November, the following taken from the election laws on the subject will serve to acquaint the voters with the essential provisions:

"In all municipalities exceeding 5,000 inhabitants the law calls for a personal registration of each voter each year and each voter must appear at the polling place in the district in which he lives and sign the registration book. For this purpose the election boards of each district will set in session the following dates: September 12, from 1 to 9 p. m.; September 26, from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., and October 24, from 1 to 9 p. m. This registration is for the general election to be held on November 7, 1916.

"The primary election day is September 26 next, and the polls will be open that day from 7 a. m. until 9 p. m. Each person who voted at the general election in 1915 and whose name appears on the poll book of 1915 will be registered for the primary election. his name being transferred from the 1915 poll book to the primary registry book for 1916.

"Any person who did not vote in the general election on November 2. 1915, in the district in which he now lives, will have to register on September 12, for no person whose name is not on the primary registry book which is made up and closed on September 12, will be allowed to vote in the primary election on September 26 next. Every voter in Plainfield should go to the polling place in his district on September 12, between the hours of 1 and 9 p m., and see that his name is on the primary registry, sign the registry for the general election and he is then sure of his right of franchise."

REED SAYS EDGE STANDS FOR LAW

Local Attorney Writes in Defense of His Friend's Candidacy.

IS NOT FOR SALOON

Has Aided in Solving Atlantic City's Problem on "Common Sense" Basis—Is Personally Temperate in Use of Liquor.

Senator Walter E. Edge, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, stands for the enforcement of the excise laws in Atlantic City, according to his friend, Charles A. Reed, of Plainfield. Mr. Reed this morning gave a signed interview to the Press in which he defended the record of Senator Edge in regard to the enforcement of the liquor laws in the popular coast resort, insisting that he had sought to remedy conditions there in "a common sense manner."

The statement of Mr. Reed follows:

"I was surprised by the impression conveyed by your editorial in Thursday's Daily Press that Senator Walter E. Edge should not be nominated for governor because, you intimate, he is not in favor of enforcement of excise laws.

"It may well be that you did not intend to convey that impression but it seems to me that no other construction will be placed upon the editorial by the average reader and it strikes me as very unfair to Senator Edge who, to my own personal intimate knowledge of him covering a period of nearly a score of years, has always stood firmly for the full and fair enforcement of law and the preservation of order and who is as temperate in regard to liquor as your candidate, Senator Colgate, or any other reasonable man.

"It is true that Senator Edge resides in Atlantic City, which by reason of unique conditions, duplicated perhaps nowhere else on earth, has in years past found the liquor question exceedingly difficult to solve. It is probably true that many persons who, when at home take liquor in all forms, visit Atlantic City with a well developed thirst and a strong determination to satisfy it, legally or otherwise. That illustrates a peculiarity of human nature for which it is difficult to account, but which nevertheless must be recognized. Atlantic City's problem has, however, been met by the assistance of Senator Edge and other good men of the same type, who recognize facts as opposed to theories, and who went at the task, difficult as it was, in a common sense and effective manner. The result, as everyone ought to know, was that Atlantic City is now a law abiding town, largely because of the open fight made by Senator Edge personally and editorially.

"Senator Edge by reason of his long sustained and consistent attitude on the liquor question deserves, in my judgment, the confidence and support of the very voters whom your editorial seeks to turn against him.

"If report be true more beer is drank in Newark on Sunday than water, and your candidate, Senator Colgate, controls one of Newark's prominent newspapers which is not, just now, making any fight against that evil. Yet it would not be fair to conclude therefrom that he favors the saloon. A square deal is just as commendable in politics as elsewhere. Let us hope that this campaign will be conducted on that basis.

"CHARLES A. REED."

UNIONS TRY TO EXTEND STRIKE

Straus Believes It Will Soon Be Ended, However.

HEDLEY IS DEFIANT

Ignores Effort to Tie up L and Subway Lines and Devotes Efforts to Green Cars—Conference of Leaders Today.

New York, Sept. 9.—Union men vigorously deny that the street car strike is "broken" and they met in conference this morning for the purpose of extending the walkout to lines other than the L, the subway and the green cars. Chairman Oscar Straus, of the Public Service Commission, stopped in his investigation of the strike long enough to express the opinion that it would not grow, but would shortly be satisfactorily settled.

General Manager Hedley insists that the L and subway strike is ended, and today he turned his attention to the green car lines.

His first act was to remove strike headquarters of the traction officials from the Belmont to the old car barns at Fiftieth street and Seventh avenue. From there he began the operation of the green line cars early today and declared that with adequate police protection he would soon have normal service on every green car line in the city.

The first car, north bound, left the barn at one minute after 6 o'clock and was followed almost immediately by a south bound car. Within the next twenty minutes five additional cars were sent. Whether they were manned by strikebreakers or regulars the company officials would not say. Their only answer was that they had plenty of men to man their cars. A large force of police reserves were on hand with automobiles, prepared to answer a call from any point.

An important development of the situation was a conference early today at the Brotherhood headquarters between President William Hoey and a committee of ten from the Yonkers local of the Amalgamated Association, and William B. Fitzgerald, general organizer of the Amalgamated and leader of the strike; M. J. Higgins, an Amalgamated organizer, and William Collins, organizer for the American Federation of Labor.

When asked the nature of the conference Mr. Fitzgerald refused to answer other than, "Just watch and you will see."

PLAINFIELD MAN HELD AS A FORGER

Detained in Newark on Charge of Passing Bogus Check—May Be Bigamist.

Arrested on a charge of passing bogus checks, a man giving his name as Asbury F. Polling, of Newark, marriage bureau, is being held at Newark police headquarters, where it was said yesterday that he might have to answer a charge of bigamy as well. Yesterday afternoon he was identified as Frank Poling, who at various times has lived in this city. He has a wife and family in this city.

Poling's arrest was brought about when he gave a check for $12 to the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Wassen, of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, when he was married on August 27 to Mrs. Hannah E. Brooks, of 504 Washington street, Newark. At police headquarters he gave his address as Plainfield and at the marriage bureau as 5 Westfield avenue, Roselle Park.

HERMINIA FALDER, LOST CHILD, FOUND UNHARMED

The ten-year-old Watchung child, whose disappearance yesterday from the home of Ephraim Acker was reported to the police of this city and surrounding places, was Herminia Faldes and not 'Herminia Acker" as was stated yesterday. The child was found on the Acker premises late last night. This is the second time the little one has strayed from home and, as on the previous occasion, she was found unharmed.

The Faldes child is not the adopted daughter of Mr. Acker. She has been living with the family for seven years, her home being at 105 East 22d street, New York city.

R. B. BUTLER WILL WED MISS BUNKER

Ceremony Uniting Popular Young Couple Will Take Place This Afternoon.

DR. STRONG OFFICIATES

Bride and Bridegroom Will Reside in New York While Preparing for Home Mission Work at Bible Teachers' Training School.

Miss Ruth Clare Bunker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace E. Bunker, of 322 East Front street, will become the bride of Robert Barnes Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Butler, of 814 West Fifth street, at a ceremony to take place this afternoon at four o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The officiating clergyman will be the Rev. Dr. Phillip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, and guests will be present from New York City, Bayonne, New Haven, Brooklyn, Westfield, Elizabeth and this city.

The bride will wear a gown of white crepe, a veil and will carry white bridal roses. She will be attended by Miss Margaret B. Acker, who will wear a frock of white and will carry an arm bouquet of goldenrod. The flower girl will be Miss Grace C. Bunker, who will wear a dress of white organdie and will carry asters. Egbert P. Fountain will be the best man and the ushers will be Horace F. Bunker, Jr., Howard Parry and Heber M. Cubberly, all of this city. As the bridal party will enter the parlor, Miss Dorothy Lunger will play the wedding march. The bride will be given in marriage by her father.

Following the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Butler will leave on a short wedding trip. They have taken an apartment at 147 East Forty-eighth street, New York, which is located only one block from the Bible Teachers' Training School, where they will continue their studies for home mission work on their return. The couple were earnest workers in the First Baptist church and Christian Endeavor Society, and have worked a number of years, particularly with young people. Mr. Butler retired from the presidency of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union last June, feeling the necessity of devoting his time to study. He was actively affiliated with this organization for the past three years.

An interesting coincidence of the bridal party is the fact that the groom is studying for the home mission field, Mr. Fountains, the best man is studying for the ministry and Mr. Parry, one of the ushers, is preparing himself for the foreign mission field.

HELEN LOUNSBURY VICTIM OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS

One more case of infantile paralysis that developed yesterday was reported to the Board of Health this morning, the victim being Helen Lounsbury, the 7-year-old daughter of Jesse Lounsbury, of 654 Essex street. The case is not a severe one. A quarantine has been placed on the house and premises.

Funeral services for Francis Reiss, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Reiss, of Lee place, who died of the disease, were held at 10 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's cemetery, and interment was made there. Herbert Peacock and the other victims in the city are progressing nicely.

MUCH INTEREST IN UNION SERVICE FOR TOMORROW

Much interest was aroused yesterday by the announcement of a union service at the Trinity Reformed church tomorrow evening, when the no-license issue recently injected into local politics will be discussed. The meeting will begin at 7:45. J. W. Gavett, president of the Interchurch Co-operative Association, will preside and the speakers will be the Rev. Philip B. Strong, the Rev. C. M. Anderson and George H. Batchelor.

R. T. Phillips is sojourning at Manasquan Beach, Manasquan.

Miss Virginia Coyne and Miss Elizabeth Malloy, of New York, are visiting the former's cousin, Miss Catherine McCarthy, of Manson place.

BOARD OF HEALTH ORDER

Parents are hereby warned not to take sick children on the public street for any purpose whatever.

If a child is sick, call a physician. The Health Department has learned that a child from out of town was brought to Plainfield on the trolley car, the child at the time showing the beginning symptoms of Infantile Paralysis.

KEEP YOUR CHILDREN HOME.

PARENTS WERE TOLD CHILD HAD BRONCHITIS

Physician Called Did Not Diagnose Case As Paralysis, It Is Said.

Regarding the two cases of infantile paralysis in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Reiss, of Lee place, which were not reported to the Board of Health until Thursday night, there appears to have been a misunderstanding which resulted in an injustice to the family. When Francis Reiss, aged 17 months, was first taken ill last Sunday, the parents did not think the trouble was anything serious, believing that it was largely due to the fact that the child was teething. The infant's condition became serious Thursday night and being unable to get the family physician, who was away, the family called in another physician, who after an examination pronounced the illness to be due to bronchitis. A consultation of physicians later proved it to be infantile paralysis. The child died soon afterward.

Members of the Reiss family say that the physician who was called in to see Francis Reiss did not see the other child who had been ill and had practically recovered and therefore could not say that it had had infantile paralysis. Both Mr. and Mrs. Reiss did everything possible for the relief of their child and when the latter's condition became alarming promptly sought the aid of a physician. Any impression that they were neglectful is not shown by an investigation of the facts.

HARRY CONLIN VICTIM OF PARALYSIS ATTACK

Former Well Known Resident Succumbs to Disease at Westfield Home.

Harry Conlin, 26 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Conlin, former residents of Kensington avenue, this city, died yesterday morning at his home, 527 Highland avenue, Westfield, of infantile paralysis.

Mr. Conlin had been spending his vacation at Belmar and returned home on Wednesday. He was not feeling well when he returned and that night, having grown worse, Dr. R. R. Sinclair was called and diagnosed his ailment as infantile paralysis. Mr. Conlin continued to grow steadily worse until death resulted yesterday morning.

Mr. Conlin was employed at the S. L. Moore & Company shipbuilding plant at Elizabeth and had been a resident of Westfield for about a year. He is survived by his father and mother and two brothers, Bruce and Frederick Conlin. The funeral took place last night and burial was in Fairview cemetery.

This is the seventh case of paralysis which Westfield has had and the third one to prove fatal.

LAWRENCE J. VAIL SPEAKS AT FLOWER GUILD MEETING

The meeting of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, held last evening in the Friends' meeting-house, was called to order by President J. M. Harper. The devotional exercises were led by Lawrence J. Vail, of the Wilson Memorial Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. A trio composed of Miss Elsie Schmidt, soprano; Miss Lucy Hughes, alto, and Miss Helen Hughes, alto, sang a selection. Mr. Vail spoke of the "Little Chances to Help," basing his remark on Exodus 17, 8 to 13 verses. After the routine business, the meeting adjourned to meet Friday, October 13.

REV. J. Y. BROCK TO PREACH.
Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has returned from his vacation and will preside at the morning service tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. James K. Shields, of the Anti-Saloon League, will make the address. In the evening a union service will be held in the interests of the no-license campaign in Plainfield.

Last evening a reception was given by the members of the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School to the members of the senior class. The home was beautifully decorated with fall flowers. The color scheme throughout was orange and black. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, after which a dainty repast was served.

ALLIES RESUME THE OFFENSIVE

Big Guns Again Pounding German Lines on the Somme.

HINDENBURG LOOKS ON

German Counter Attacks Break Down—Russians Fight Hard Against Bulgars—More Steamers Are Torpedoed.

London, Sept. 9.—With Von Hindenberg looking on the Germans have been beaten back in counter attacks along the Somme and French fronts, and British troops have begun a new offensive. The big guns of the Allies have resumed their pounding of the German lines along the whole thirty-mile front from Pozieres to the Chaulnes sector.

South of the Somme the French extended their hold on the village of Vermandovillers, today's reports indicate, after beating back German counter attacks. This thrust purposes to force forward Foch's line north of Chaulines and, by flanking that place, to make its capture easier.

Until the bombardment has broken a path for new strokes, the infantry assault will not be attempted again on a large scale. The British and French are determined not to waste men as the Germans wasted them at Verdun.

Russians Resist Fiercely.
London, Sept. 9.—Russian troops, massed in force in the Dobrudja, have engaged the Bulgars on the whole front from the Danube to the Black Sea, a distance of seventy miles. They are fighting fiercely to wrest the offensive from the invader.

The Bulgars, reinforced by Austrians and Turks, have advanced in two columns. One, under Von Mackensen, has taken Turtukai, on the Danube. The other, striking along the Black Sea coast, has captured Dobric, ten miles from the border, and the ports of Baltjik, Wavarna and Kali Akra, in southernmost Dobrudja.

Red Cross Head Dead.
The Hague, Sept 9.—Baron de Royer de Fraula, a president of the Belgian Red Cross in Holland, is dead.

Evacuate San Quentin.
Amsterdam, Sept. 9.—It is reported from the frontier that the Germans have ordered the inhabitants to evacuate St. Quentin. They were transferred to Namur, Belgium.

Greek Ship Blows Up.
Malta, Sept. 9.—The Greek ship Giorgies was sunk in the harbor today by an explosion following the outbreak of fire in her cargo of benzine.

Hindenburg at French Front.
Amsterdam, Sept. 8.—General von Hindenburg has made his first visit to the western front with the Crown Prince, both driving in the same carriage. It is believed that Hindenburg is visiting all fronts before assuming his duties as head of the German General Staff.

Three More Steamers Sunk.
Washington, Sept. 8.—The State Department received reports today showing that thre more vessels have been sunk in British waters, either by mine or torpedo. Consul Hathaway at Hull reports that the Danish steamer Farmatyr was sunk near Yarmouth on September 2. The French steamer Ville de Aron has been sunk near Scarborough and the British vessel Rievaux Abbey was sunk en route from Rotterdam to Hull on September 3. Two members of the crew were lost.

RETURNED FROM CANADA.
Detective Laverette, of the New Jersey Central, has returned from a several days' trip to Canada. He is devoting most of his time now in this city in an effort to break up the practice of youths on riding freight trains, and so far has arrested a dozen or more of them.

MRS. SMITH'S FUNERAL.
The funeral of Mrs. Sarah V. Smith will be held at 2:30 this afternoon from the home of her son, Leon L. Smith, of Rock avenue. The service will be in charge of the Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church. The interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

COPS ON VACATIONS.
Patrolmen Russ and McKinley, of the city police force, are enjoying their annual two weeks' vacation. Dunlap and Welsh will be the next ones to have a leave of absence.

PROBABLY NO GAME.
Manager Britt Martin, of Hope Chapel, left this noon for New York, where he will witness the Giant-Phillie double bill. It is highly improbable that the Baptist-Hope game will be played.

HONORS IN STORE FOR BISHOP DANIEL TUTTLE

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 9.—Next month will witness the most extraordinary demonstration of love, respect and veneration that has ever been paid to a prelate of the Protestant Episcopal church in America. The occasion will be the golden jubilee of the Rt. Rev. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, of Missouri, the senior bishop of the American church.

The jubilee celebration will be held in conjunction with the triennal general convention of the church, which will be in session in St. Louis at that time. Among those who will do honor to the senior bishop will be all of the high prelates, many of the noted clergy and a host of prominent laymen of the denomination throughout the country.

Bishop Tuttle has been the presiding bishop of the Episcopal church since 903. The office is in a large measure an honorary one. It carries with it some administrative functions, but is principally a mark of seniority of Episcopal bishops now living. Bishop Tuttle was the earliest consecrated, his episcopacy dating from 1867, when he was chosen missionary bishop of Montana, with jurisdiction in Idaho and Utah. In 1881 he dropped Montana and became bishop of Utah, and in 1886 he was chosen bishop of Missouri. The Bishop is now in his 80th year, but is as active as the average man of 60. He is exceeding popular among the men of the Episcopal church, both clergymen and laymen, and is in great demand as a speaker at missionary and other gatherings.

Gilbert Ward, comedian, entertains with a new line of jokes.

The bill is rounded out with the Pathe Weekly, the animated newspaper, containing all the latest happenings in the current events of the day and there is a generous number of comedies and dramas, featuring the most popular photoplay stars of the day. TREASURER'S REPORTS AND TAX INCREASE.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

After reading the communication sent by the City Treasurer to the Common Council and read at its meeting September 5, it appears that some of his exceptions to statements made by representatives of the Municipal Research League of New York are justified. But the Treasurer's apparent contention that the arrangement of his annual report is all that can be desired is, in my opinion, entirely incorrect. Probably his familiarity with all the various items makes the report perfectly clear to him, but to conclude that it is also clear to the average citizen is a mistake, and the reference to trial balances and vouchers on file in the office of the City Treasurer is not quite to the point.

The importance to any community of financial statements that are clear enough to give careful readers not only the different amounts received and expended, but also a clear idea of the financial condition and the distribution of expenditures, is generally conceded.

My personal experience would tend to indicate that the reports of the Treasurer of the city of Plainfield do not meet this requirement. I am somewhat familiar with financial statements and fairly persistent, yet I have given up in despair several attempts to get anything but figures out of the reports referred to.

Thus I attempted some time ago, when the project of a City Hall was first mentioned, to make a comparison between the cost of housing the police department before and after the erection of the present police station. The years 1906 and 1915, were, I believe, those selected for the purpose, but the grouping of expenditures given in the treasurer's report were such as to make apparently impossible a direct comparison of the amounts chargeable to housing, including rent, heat, etc.

However, I concluded that it costs the city to house the police department in its present quarters between two and three times the amount paid when police headquarters were rented. That there should be a general increase in expenditures, including the one referrd to above, was to be expected, but it is more than doubtful if the average citizen realizes to what extent the city expenditures have risen during the last decade. Certainly I did not realize it until I had prepared the adjoining table showing total and per capita tax in city of Plainfield, 1905 to 1915.

I hope the table in itself is clear enough to need no further explanation, but as I try to recall local conditions in 1905 it is not clear at all to me why the tax per capita in Plainfield today should be 177.5 per cent. of what it was in 1905.

An ideal treasurer's report should have shown these tax increases, as they occurred, and given indications of what the causes were. It does not seem improbable that if such reports had been in existence the taxes in the city would today be materially less than they are.

It is probably true that the question of the tax burden has been given more consideration during the administration of Mayor Stewart and Mayor Calkins than formerly, but there appears to be a too ready belief in the desire for improvements, regardless of their cost.

If the assumption is made that the increase in the per capita tax between 1905 and 1915 will continue to hold good the amount of this tax will be about $43.22 in 1925 and about $76.50 in 1935. A tax of anywhere near these amounts would be such a burden, that projects like the City Hall, which with its great amount of waste space and other costly features, would invariably tend to insure the continuation of the increase in the per capita tax, should not be finally decided until the project under consideration had been an issue at a general election.

Yours truly,

ALBIN G. NICOLAYSEN.

AN ORDINANCE

Concerning the Construction of Sidewalks and Curbs. Revision of 1916.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The space devoted to sidewalks, not already laid out under prior ordinances of said City, shall have a width not less than one-fifth of the entire width of the street. On all streets, lines drawn parallel with the side lines of the street and distant therefrom the exact width of the space devoted to sidewalks shall be known and designated as the curb lines. The grade and width of all sidewalk spaces and the grade of the curb lines shall be that fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established either heretofore or hereafter, but all sidewalks shall be so graded as to rise from the top of the curb line to the nearest side line of the street at the uniform rate of one-half inch to each linear foot of such distance unless otherwise specifically directed by resolution of the Common Council.

Sec. 2. All sidewalks shall be curbed and paved at such established grade and kept and maintained so curbed and paved in good condition so as to be even on the surface and freely shed water, and all of said space devoted to sidewalks shall be kept free from long grass, weeds, shrubs or other thing or substance likely to interfere with safe and easy travel thereon or thereover by pedestrians or persons lawfully using the same, at the expense of the owner or owners of the land or lot abutting thereon, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. All curbs hereafter constructed in this city shall be of concrete, six (6) inches thick and at least twenty (20) inches deep. Where combined curb and gutter is used, the curb shall extend to the bottom of the gutter concrete, which shall be at least six (6) inches deep below gutter grade.

Concrete for curbs shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement, two (2) parts fine aggregate and from two and one-half (2½) to three (3) parts coarse aggregate, mixed with clean water, in the manner hereinafter specified. A coat of mortar, mixed one to two (1 to 2) and not more than one-half inch thick may be applied to the inside of the forms immediately before placing the concrete.

Curb and gutter shall be divided into sections not less than five (5) nor more than eight (8) feet long, by some method which will insure the complete separation of the sections by a joint not less than one-eighth nor more than one-quarter inch wide.

Curb corners at intersecting streets shall have a radius of at least six (6) feet; where possible, the radius shall be equal to the width of the narrower sidewalk of the intersecting streets. The circular corners shall be protected by approved corner bars.

At private driveways, the upper edge of the curb may be lowered to within one inch of gutter grade, the grade of the base of the curb to be at same elevation as that of the adjoining curb. Where a driveway is concreted from the paved portion of the sidewalk to a line outside the curb line, the curb may be omitted. The ends of the curbs at the driveways may be beveled at an angle of forty-five degrees, or circular corners, having a radius of not more than two (2) feet, may be used, the return curbs disappearing at the established grade of the sidewalk at a distance of not more than eighteen (18) inches from the curb line.

Sec. 4. All sidewalks hereafter paved in this city shall be constructed of concrete, of the materials and in the manner hereinafter specified.

No paved walk shall be less than four (4) feet wide and four (4) inches thick. Sidewalk slabs twenty-five (25) square feet in area shall be five (5) inches thick; slabs thirty-six (36) square feet in area shall be six (6) inches thick.

The concrete for one-course work shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement, two (2) parts fine aggregate and from two and one-half (2½) to three (3) parts course aggregate.

The cement shall meet the requirements of the Standard Specifications for Portland Cement of the American Society for Testing Materials.

The fine aggregate shall consist of sand or crushed stone, graded from fine to coarse, passing, when dry, a screen having one-quarter inch diameter holes; it shall be clean, sharp, coarse, free from deleterious matter, and not more than five per cent. shall pass a sieve having one hundred meshes per lineal inch.

The coarse aggregate shall be sound gravel, trap rock or blast furnace slag. It shall be free from all foreign matter, uniformly graded and of sizes that will pass a one and one-half (1½) inch screen and be retained on a one-quarter (¼) inch screen.

Such methods of measuring the several materials for the concrete shall be used as shall insure reliable proportions.

The ingredients of the concrete shall be thoroughly mixed with clean water on a water-tight platform. The concrete shall be wet enough to be easily "struck off," but so that it can be handled without causing a separation of the coarse aggregate from the mortar.

Cross forms shall be of three-sixteenths inch metal, of a depth to correspond to the thickness of the proposed walk and shall extend the full width of the walk and be set at right angles to the side forms. They shall be left in place until the concrete is sufficiently set to permit of their withdrawal without injury to the walk.

On walks which are four feet in width they shall be placed not more than four feet apart, and on no walk shall the divisions or joints be more than six feet apart in any direction.

After the forms are filled, the concrete shall be "struck off" and the coarse particles forced, with a suitable tool, to a depth below the surface which will permit of properly finishing the walk.

The slabs shall be rounded on all surface edges to a radius of about one-half (½) inch.

Concrete shall not be mixed or deposited when the temperature is below freezing.

All sidewalks and curbs shall be protected from injury by sun, rain, or freezing, until sufficiently set.

Sidewalks constructed in two courses will be permitted. When used, the concrete for the base course, three (3) inches thick, shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement, three (3) parts fine aggregate and five (5) parts coarse aggregate. The mortar for the top course, one (1) inch thick, shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement and two (2) parts fine aggregate.

Sec. 5. All sidewalks of the following named streets and portions thereof, to wit: Front Street (East and West) from the easterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the Easterly curb line of Grove Street on the Northerly side of West Front Street and to the Easterly curb line of Central Avenue on the Southerly side of West Front Street; Madison Avenue from the Southerly side line of Green Brook to the Northerly line of the right-of-way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey; Second Street (East and West) from the Easterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the Westerly side line of Madison Avenue; North Avenue from the Easterly curb line of Park Avenue to the Westerly curb line of Watchung Avenue; Somerset Street from the Southerly side line of Green Brook to the Northerly curb line of Front Street; East Fourth Street from the Westerly curb line of Watchung Avenue to the Westerly side line of Park Avenue; Watchung Avenue from the Southerly side line of Green Brook to the Northerly curb line of East Seventh Street; Park Avenue from the Southerly curb line of Front Street to the Northerly curb line of Seventh Street, and West Third Street from the Westerly curb line of Liberty Street to the Easterly curb line of Plainfield Avenue, shall be paved as aforesaid from each side line of the street to the nearer curb line thereof except such portions of such space devoted to sidewalks as aforesaid as may be occupied by telegraph, telephone or other like poles lawfully standing therein and except such portions thereof as may be occupied by the trunks of any trees growing therein and an additional space not exceeding five (5) square feet in area around each tree.

Sec. 6. All sidewalks of each and every street in the said City of Plainfield other than the streets and portions of streets in Section 5 of this ordinance particularly described, shall be paved, for a width of at least four (4) feet, with concrete of the materials, the proportions and in the manner required in Section 4 of this ordinance.

That hereafter, whenever a new sidewalk line is to be laid out on any street, it shall be located so that the nearer edge of the concrete shall be the following distances from the side lines of the streets, that is to say: On streets having a width of eighty feet or more, a distance of six feet; on streets having a width of seventy feet or more, and less than eighty feet, a distance of five feet; on streets having a width of more than sixty feet and less than seventy feet, a distance of three feet; on streets having a width of fifty feet or more and not more than sixty feet, a distance of two feet, and on streets having a width of less than fifty feet a distance of one foot.

Where the sidewalk is crossed by a private driveway, the concrete shall be six (6) inches thick.

Where a sidewalk, paved for its entire width, is crossed by a private driveway, the driveway shall be depressed at the curb line to the gutter grade and shall slope up to the established grade in a distance not exceeding eighteen (18) inches from the curb line.

Sec. 7. The word "street" as used in this ordinance is intended to include and to mean every public highway in the City of Plainfield, whether commonly called a street, road, avenue, place or otherwise, and shall be so taken and construed.

Sec. 8. If after the passage of this ordinance the owner or owners of lands affected thereby shall neglect for the space of thirty days to make the improvements to the sidewalks thereof by this ordinance directed and required, the Common Council may cause such improvements to be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner, as authorized by the statutes in such case made and provided. Before proceeding to make any such improvements the Common Council shall cause notice, by publication as hereinafter mentioned, of such contemplated improvements to be given to the owner or owners of any land thereby affected, which notice shall contain a description of the property affected sufficiently definite in detail to identify the same, as well as a description of the required improvements and a notice that unless said improvements shall be completed by such owner or owners within thirty days after the date of the first publication thereof, it is the intention of the City to make said improvements or cause the same to be made pursuant to the authority of the Act of the Legislature of New Jersey entitled "An Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof," approved April thirteenth, one thousand nine hundred and eight, and acts supplemental thereto and amendatory thereof, such notice shall be published in one or more newspapers published in the City of Plainfield for a period of five days, and proof of publication of such notice shall be filed with the Collector of Taxes of the City. If such improvements shall not be completed by such owner or owners within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the Street Commissioner shall thereupon forthwith cause such improvements to be made by the City under his direction as authorized by this ordinance and said Acts of the Legislature, including an Act of the said Legislature entitled "An Act to amend the Act entitled 'A supplement to an Act entitled an Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof,' approved April thirteenth, one thousand nine hundred and eight, which supplement was approved April sixteenth, one thousand nine hundred and nine," approved April thirteenth, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen.

Sec. 9. When any improvement of the character hereinbefore mentioned shall be made by the City pursuant to said Acts of the Legislature, a true and accurate account of the cost and expense thereof shall be kept by the Street Commissioner and apportioned among the several properties improved in proportion to the frontage of their respective lands, and a true statement of such cost under oath or affirmation of said Street Commissioner shall forthwith be filed by him with the Collector of said City, whereupon said charge shall be and remain a first lien upon the lands and real estate thereby improved, and shall bear the same rate of interest as other assessments made under the laws governing said City, and shall be collected in the same manner as assessments are now collected under such laws, and in case of the non-payment of such charges the land and real estate subject to such liens may be sold in the manner provided for the sale of lands for the non-payment of assessments made under such laws.

Sec. 10. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed, provided however, that any and every proceeding for the laying, installing and improvement of any sidewalk or curb heretofore begun and now pending under any such inconsistent ordinance shall not be affected hereby.

Adopted by the Common Council September 5, 1916; approved by the Mayor September 8, 1916.

VALUABLE HINTS WILL BE GIVEN IN FORESTRY DISPLAY

State Department to Impart Information in Exhibit at Trenton Exposition.

The forestry exhibit of the State Department of Conservation and Development is now a fixed attraction for the Trenton Fair, which will be held this year from September 25 to 29. In its log cabin and surrounding enclosure at the exposition the Department calls attention to the need for taking every care to protect the forest lands of the State from waste by fire. It points out the scientific commonsense methods of treating the woodlands which the State now has, so that they will become more valuable and more productive, and it shows how the long neglected and abused forest areas may be built up into productive woodlands. The entire exhibit will be revised this year, showing new features of interest to those who own and control woodlands.

The attention of those who are not interested in forest land commercially will also be especially directed to the state's forest reserves. These areas, the Stokes Reserve, near Culver's Gap in Sussex County, and the three large South Jersey reserves in eastern Burlington County, offer exceptional advantages to those wishing to find desirable spots for short camping trips. The Department does not open any of the reserves to permanent campers, but welcomes the use of this public property by those who wish to use them for short periods. The only restrictions are an insistence upon rigid care to prevent damage from fire and a reasonable supervision by the wardens in charge both of the locations and of the way the camp site is used, so that the state's property may not be defaced or in any way made less desirable because of the occupation.

By an enlarged and renewed collection of products made from the woodland crops the exhibit will also show how the Jersey forests are used. It will further point out to the producer his opportunity to serve himself and the consumer by furnishing from native timbers a still larger proportion of the raw products used.

3,000,000 GUESTS HAVE ATTENDED TRENTON FAIR

Exposition Has Entertained Remarkable Number of Patrons In Its Twenty-eight Years.

Presenting a history of remarkable progress since its establishment, twenty-eight years ago, the Trenton Fair last season passed the three million mark in total attendance from the time of its opening.

Bespeaking approval for the management of this leading exposition of the East, each year has seen a relative advance in the total number of those present. In the few years that the figures for the week did not exceed those of the former season rain prevented the holding of the exposition for one or more days. But the percentage of attendance was greater for the clear days than it had been previously.

Establishing its reputation by keeping in the forefront of all that is new, Trenton Fair has drawn its patronage from a widely increasing circle. It has continued on, growing stronger, while other fairs more favorably situated in populous centers have closed their gates. Educational and entertaining, it has always had something new to amuse and interest its hundreds of thousands of guests each year.

Unwilling to rest on their achievements, the officers of the Fair set new standards for themselves each season, and the 1916 Exposition, to be held from Sept. 25 to 29, they feel confident, will be the banner year of their existence.

Established in 1888, the Fair that year attracted 43,995 patrons. Higher and higher the figures went as the worth of the Exposition was more fully recognized, and in 1912 they had leaped to 154,109. Last year, even with the great reduction that had to be met because of the inclement weather, the total for the week was 129,647 persons.

In its twenty-eight years 3,058,381 patrons have passed through its gates.

SELECT JUDGES TO AWARD PET STOCK EXHIBIT PRIZES

Trenton Fair Officials Named and Special Premiums Offered by Organizations.

William H. Tabor, of Long Branch, president of the American Fur Fanciers' Association, has been selected judge of the cavies, rats and mice which will be exhibited this year in the Pet Stock Show of Trenton Fair from September 25 to 29. Albert E. Sherwood, of Nyack, N. Y., vice-president of the American Fur Fanciers' Association, will be the judge of rabbits. Mr. Sherwood will also be assistant superintendent or handler and his knowledge will add to the interest of the exhibit.

Harvey E. Rogers will be superintendent of the department.

The Inter-State Fair Association will offer $15 in special prizes, and attractive premiums will be listed by the Fur Fanciers' Association.

As the Pet Stock Show is to be more complete this year than for any in the history of the Fair, increased interest will be taken in the department.

HOPE CHAPEL LECTURE.

The Rev. D. W. Skellenger will give one of the few remaining lectures of the series that has continued at Hope chapel throughout the summer tomorrow night on "The Great Choice." It will be illustrated, and besides there will be singing and music.

MARTIN SHOWS HIGH INSURANCE RATE HERE

The apparent discrimination against Plainfield in the matter of insurances rates as commented on by David T. Kenney at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Thursday night, was the subject of a letter written by Frederick A. Martin to Mayor Calkins more than a year ago in which Mr. Martin points out that Plainfield is classed as a 'C' town.

Mr. Martin's letter follows:

"Plainfield, N. J., Mar. 11, 1915.

"Hon. Leighton Calkins,
"292 Madison Avenue, City.

"Dear Sir—

"I was very much interested in your remarks pertaining to survery of the different departments of the City of Plainfield by experts.

"While fire insurance does not come under the head of direct municipal tax, it is a tax imposed on every property owner.

Plainfield is classed as a 'C' town and rated as follows:

"Dwellings not over two families: "Brick—Building, .13; contents, .15 ½; frame, building, .18½; contents, .19½.

"If Plainfield could come up to Class 'B' requirements the following rates would apply:

"Brick—Building, .12; contents, .15; frame—building, .17½; contents, .19.

"These are annual rates and you will note as they spread over the entire town it would effect quate a material saving for the people of Plainfield.

"If I can be of any assistance to you or your committee in any way, shall be pleased to do so.

"Very truly yours,
"FREDERICK A. MARTIN."

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Mrs. Adeline Gosselin, 73 years old and the mother of ten children, recently took the veil of the Sisters of St. Joseph,, at Nazareth Academy, LaGrange, Ill. The occasion brought together sixty-five members of the aged nun's family from the United States and Canada, among whom were two of her daughters, who are nuns and the superiors of Catholic convents, and several other nuns and priests who were grandchildren or nephews and nieces. Archbishop Mundelein, of Chicago, assisted by eleven priests, officiated at the remarkable event.

Miss Fannie Durack and Miss Mina Wylie, the leading swimmers of Australia, will sai for America in January for a stay of three months, during which they will compete in a number of swimming events for women. They will compete first in Honolulu, then at San Francisco and Los Angeles, and later in the Middle West and in the East. Miss Durack won the Olympic championship at Stockholm in 1912 and Miss Wylie finished second.

The pupil who made the highest grade in the last term in New York's high schools and headed the names of scholarship winners was a little Italian immigrant girl, Louisa Viggiani, whose percentage for the four years she was in high school was 96. Louisa is 16 years old and was born in Southern Italy, being brought to America by her parents when she was thre years old. The ambitious little "dago" intends to enter Hunter College next fall, specify in languages, for which she has a surprising aptitude, and later become a teacher of languages.

Miss Edna Marie Beckett, a Detroit girl of 17, has been recruiting men for the U. S. army and navy in that city, and brought in an average of three recruits a day for some time past, therby beating any one engaged in the same work in Detroit. The girl's remarkable work has been whol girl's remarkable work has been wholly voluntary, and was inspired, she says, by the reading of Maxim's "Defenseless America." She first went out among her friends, seeking out al lthe families where there were young men, and met with such success that she next went out upon the street, distributing at street corners cards given hr by the U. S. recruiting bureau. The "Little Major," as the Detroit army and navy men call the young girl, says the work is particularly exhilarating when she "captures a pacifist."

Miss Madeline Z. Doty, who has sailed for Europe to investigate the condition of the children of Germany for the Fund for Starving Children, is a successful writer and lawyer, and has been identified with Thomas Mott Osborne and G. W. Kirchway in the prison reform movement in New York State. She is one of the leaders of the Woman's Peace Party in the United States, and was one of the delegates with Jane Addams to the Women's Peace Conference at The Hauge last year. While in Germany she will act as correspondent for the New York Tribune and the Chicago Tribune.

When girl freshmen arrive at Madison to attend the University of Wisconsin this fall they will find upper class women to greet them. The upper class women have issued a booklet which tells of the ideals of university women, of the societies and other women's activities, and contains advice about the work of the first-year women. In brief, everything will be done by the wise seniors to take from the little freshman's mind and heart that "lost" feeling.

The speakers include some of the most noted Biblical scholars and church historians in America. Haverford College is a Quaker institution, the oldest Quaker college in America, but its summer schools draw many persons of other communions than the historic Society of Friends.

England has had a most interesting case of college "Jim, the Ponman," a man who after being given the highest academic training his country could give deliberately became one of her most remarkable outlaws. Bank managers and cashiers throughout Britain are now relieved to know that "King of the Forgers" has just been "put away" for ten years. This redoubtale criminal is Gerald Kennaway, son of a leading West Country family which gave many worthy servants to the State, went to a great public school and from there to Cambridge University. His scholastic record was excellent, almost brilliant, and scores of well known Englishmen, barristers, stock brokers and officers, were proud to call him friend in their university days. So expert was Kennaway as a forger that criminals came to him from all parts of Great Britain to engage his services for the fabrication of signatures.

Yale men from all sections of the country are planning to attend the Yale pageant, which is to be presented in the Yale Bowl as a part of the Yale-New Haven Bicentennial, Saturday, October 21. The pageant will be a big aqair and more than 7,000 students, school children and townspeople will participate. It is expected that an audience of 60,000 will witness the pageant, which will visualize every step of Yale's progress during the past 200 years. Its purpose will be to commemorate the moving of Yale College from Saybrook to New Haven in 1716.

Dr. J. M. Gathany, a Providence, R. I., instructor in history, has just tested the theory that in education we are over-weighted on the side of the actual and practical, and give too little attention to what is not "in contact with life." He had high school pupils write down the words and expressions which they were unable to explain and could not use accurately. A list of about 300 terms was thus obtained, among them being such words as alliance, autocracy, arbitration, bureaucracy, blockade, cosmopolitan, diplomatic, dreadnought, embargo, federal, city council, constituency, consular, franchise, government, internationalism, litigation, municipality, neutral, Pan-American, pacifist, paternalism, preparedness, referendum, states' rights, triple alliance, and ultimatum. The list was then submitted to several college students, two of whom are taking post-graduate courses in a New England college, and in each instance "the student has been frank enough to say that he and his colleagues would find it exceedingly hard, if not wholly impossible, to explain satisfactorily a large percentage of the expressions." In comment the investigator maintains that far from giving young people too much training along actual and material "contact with life," we are "setting their faces toward the 16th century." He asks that the modern, up-to-date topics discussed in newspapers and magazines should have a place, however modest, on the curriculum. Young men leaving our institutions of learning with a precise acquaintance of the policies of Louis XIV and with no knowledge of what is going on in the world are nothing, he says, but "educated ignoramuses."

Greatly increased school facilities are to be provided this fall for the instruction of foreign-born residents of the United States and especially for alien candidates for citizenship. It is the desire of the Bureau of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor that public school night classes be installed wherever the need exists for the education and Americanization of foreigners. During the last scholastic year the public school authorities of approximately 650 cities and towns in forty-four States of the Union were co operating with the bureau in this branch of its educational activity. According to information thus far received by the bureau, nearly 100 others have signified their intention of joining in the movement and all indications now point to a most gratifying record for the 1916-1917 school year. Night classes for the teaching of English to foreigners have been maintained for years in most of the cosmopolitan centers of the United States, but the teaching of civics in these classes is a new departure.

DUNELLEN FAN SUBMITS "ALL STAR LEAGUE" TEAM

One of our readers, who signs himself "Dunellen Fan," has submitted his choice of an All-Star City League lineup. This fan's choice differs with our own in four respects.

The lineup, as picked by the Dunellen man, includes Frank Teeling, of the Tabs, as catcher, with Warry McLoughlin, of Dunellen, as pitcher. Hannon is picked for the first station, with Chet Harriman on second. Lou Brown is the choice for shortstop. Eddie Coughan, the Neherwood third basemen, is the choice for that position. The outer garden workers are Trust, Tone Denny and Wahl.

REPORT OF NEW JERSEY TENEMENT HOUSE COMMISSION SHOWS AUGUST DECREASE

Plainfield Not Included in the List of Towns With Tenements Approved During Last Month by State—War Prosperity Causes Falling Off in Aggregate Total Represented.

In a comparative statement of plans for new buildings arpproved by the Board of Tenement House Supervision of New Jersey during the month of August in 1915 and 1916 is interesting in that it shows a decrease notwithstanding the general prosperity of the country, of $20,000. This is partly explained by the fact that the people who are being effected by the war prosperity are leaving tenements and locating in homes of their own.

Plainfield has still to have its first tenement approved by the board and is about the only city in the State that is not mentioned in the last list issued. Regulations in regard to tenements are becoming more rigid every day and the building of them is not encouraged, and in every case where requirements are not entirely lived up to the plans are not approved.

A SEVEN-ROOM COTTAGE

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THE size of this illustrated cottage is 25 ft. 6 in. x 40 ft. depth, planned for a south frontage with a sun parlor on the right 10 ft. wide and 17 ft. depth. This plan has recently been made and now building, it is thoroughly well built in every respect, with oak finish and floors in first story and birch finish and floors in second story, and in addition good attic space for storage.

The large living room across the front is 24 ft. 6 in. x 13 ft. 6 in. The main stairs extend up on the left side opposite the vestibule entrance and with combination arrangement, with section of stairs from kitchen to main landing and basement stairs and grade entrance beneath. The dining room is good size and planned with a projected buffet on the outside and short casement windows above. The kitchen is well appointed with cupboards, etc., and a glazed and finished porch in the rear, connecting with a maid's room. The basement is full and complete.

There are three bed rooms on second floor and a sleeping porch, ample closets are provided and bath room, also a linen closet. It is estimated to build for $3,200 to $4,000 exclusive of heating and plumbing. The outside is covered with cement stucco on metal lath, the trimmings painted white or stained to suit the taste and the roof shingles stained. There is a pretty entrance with the main roof carried down over same and supported on heavy timber brackets, the platform and buttresses of dark oriental brick set in cement. A pretty flower box in front adds to the artistic appearance.

BUILDING PERMITS ARE LAGGING BEHIND

Only Two Issued During First Week in September for $6.250 Total.

The first week of September proved to be a quiet one, and yesterday afternoon had seen the filing of only two permits with the inspector for a sum of $6.250. Both permits were issued for structures to be erected in the Third ward, the others not recording a one.

The largest permit was for the erection of a house near Seventh and Division streets for William H. Abbott, to cost $26:000. It will be of frame, shingle and clapboard construction and two and one-half stories high. It will be 33x33x40, have nine rooms and two baths. George Ferguson will do the carpenter work and William Clawson, of Dunellen, the mason work.

Israel Goldstein is to erect a tinner shop on his premises at 412 Liberty street at a cost of $250. It will be one story high and 33x39x 10.

REALTY THANSFERS

Donato Bonavoglia et ux. to Caterina Bonavoglia, northerly side North avenue, corner Oak street, Scotch Plains, $1.

Donato Bonavoglia et uv. to Lina Bonavoglia, same as above, $1.

Phileus J. Reeves et ux. to Marie Moutenot, southeasterly side West Front street, corner Emma Johnson, Plainfield, $1.

Armond Heymann et al. to George K. Finger, lots 24-25, block 1, map of Martin A. Rose, Plainfield, $1.

CONTRACTS FILED

The following local building contracts have been filed in the office of the county clerk in Elizabeth during the past week:

William H. Abbott with George J. Ferguson, entire work new building. Seventh street, Plainfield; $4,115.00.

George H. Burgess with Fred Schuck, carpenter work, new garage, Central avenue, Plainfield; $1,589.

CITY HALL CONTRACTS MAY BE AWARDED IN TWO WEEKS

Now that the bids for the new City Hall have been opened, it is probable that the contract will be awarded within the next two weeks. By that time Mayor Calkins will have returned from his vacation and the other city officials will be back again. The lowest of the bids submitted on September 5 was $149,000. According to law the contract will have to be awarded to the lowest bidder, but before it is the City Hall Building Committee headed by Councilman Hyland, will go carefully over all the bids.

Considerable surprise has been expressed during the past few days that none of the local contractors put in any bid. The only local man successful was Den Galbraith, who was lowest on the plumbing.

BUILDING NOTES

Owing to the rapid increase of the amount of freight handled at the local freight station on North avenue, it has been found necessary to build a long platform extension to the west end of the present structure. Upon the removal of the east end yard of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company to South avenue, it is said that the railroad will utilize that space which adjoins the freight yard, and nearly double the handling capacity.

Work on the Emerson Avenue School in the Netherwood section of the city is progressing rapidly, and the structure will be completed by the contractors before cold weather.

The H. C. Lockwood Company, that has by its building boom nearly doubled the size of Fanwood in the past five years, is now engaged in building the Neuman tract, known as Hillside Terrace. At present nine modern houses are in the course of construction. They are all of frame construction, have eight or nine rooms and two or three baths. Mr. Lockwood says that before he is through he expects to have built over fifty houses with all modern improvements in that section to sell at a modern price. Mr. Lockwood realizes that the majority of local residents belong to New York business men and that this is the class he deals with.

The $11,000 addition onto the rear of Heavenly Rest church is nearing completion. The walls have been erected and work on the interior is now being done.

BIDS OUT FOR LOIZEAUX YARD AND BARNARD BAKERY

Bids are now being sought for the erection of two building improvements in the city and the contracts will be awarded in a few weeks. After the plans had been approved by the Building Inspector's office, the proprietors of the Barnard bakery, on East Front street, have asked for bids for the erection of a two-story building in the rear of the Woodhull-Martin building. It will be of brick construction and 22x60. Lancaster drew the plans for the structure.

Contracts will shortly be awarded for the buildings to be erected at the J. D. Loizeaux Company's new yard on South avenue, it was learned today. The biggest of these will probably be awarded to the building of a re-enforced concrete trestle or siding to extend eight hundred feet from the New Jersey Central tracks. Besides, there will be erected a planing mill, workman's cottage of hollow tile and lumber sheds. Work will probably be started before cold weather.

MAY PLACE RESTRICTION ON BUILDING ALL OVER CITY

Plainfield, like the majority of other cities throughout the United States, is feeling the wave of prosperity that is sweeping over the country, and factories, churches, schools and numerous dwellings have been erected in various parts of the city in the last few years. A movement is on foot seeking to have an ordinance passed restricting the building of all sorts of structure in various parts of the city—a thing that New York has already done.

Of the three kinds of structures generally erected—factories, dwellings and business houses—factaries are sure to follow closely the course of the railroads. That relieves the possibility of having any large factory built in a residential section. Residents are not apt to build their homes among the business section, and that leaves the possibility of places of business arising in residential sections. Numerous are the cases where a grocery or candy store has been built in outlying sections of the city. Such an ordinance would do much to prevent the "Queen City" aspect of Plainfield.

CLARKE AND TRUST MAY STAGE THRILLER

"Shakey" and "George" Reported as Considering Competitive Event.

There's a rumor in the air to the effect that George Trust, the fleet right-fielder of the Dunellen baseball team will stage a little running match with "Shakey" Clarke as a preliminary to the Dunellen-Tab tilt tomorrow.

According to those who have inside "dope" on the affair, the Dunellen lad, who is one of the fastest baseball players in this vicinity, believes that he can circle the bases in less time than it will take "Shakey" to do the same stunt. Clarke who at one time knew no peer in the baserunning art, is willing to demonstrate to the fans that he is still in the same class with Trust.

At the present time Hans Lobert, of the Giants, holds the record for circling the bags, but there are several fans in this city who are willing to wager that Hans will be a poor second-rater after tomorrow's race.

Perilous to Handle.

The production of chrysarobin, a medicinal principle much used in parasitic skin diseases, is attended with great peril. It forms about 50 per cent of goa powder, obtained from cavities in the Brazilian araroba tree (Andira anaraibo), and in securing this powder the trees are felled, though eighty to one hundred feet high, and often three feet in diameter. The material is found as damp pulp or lumps in the center of the trunks, the yield sometimes reaching sixty or sixty-five pounds per tree, with none at all in some trees. The accompanying caustic liquid makes the substance difficult to handle and, despite gloves and masks, workers for any length of time invariably lose their hair, eyebrows and eyelashes and sometimes even become blind, while sores from the burns may cause long disability. A cat has been known to lose its fur from sleeping on a bag of the powder.

Strength of a Flower.

One of the most remarkable exhibitions of plant force I ever saw, says John Burroughs in "The Breath of Life," was in a western city, where I observed a wild sunflower forcing its way up through the asphalt pavement. The folded and compressed leaves of the plant, like a man's fist, had pushed against the hard but flexible concrete until it bulged up and split and let the irrepressible plant through. The force exerted must have been many pounds. I think it doubtful if the strongest man could have pushed his fist through such a resisting medium.

Life activities are a kind of explosion, and the slow continued explosions of this growing plant rent the pavement as surely as powder would have done. It is doubtful if any cultivated plant could have overcome such odds. It required the force of the untamed hairy plant of the plains to accomplish the feat.

The Longest Fast.

The record for fasting, so far as our best information goes, is held by Graine, a French murderer, who determined to starve himself to death and from day to day after his arrest refused to eat.

In spite of every effort on the part of his keepers, who first tried to tempt him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell and when that failed attempted feeding him by force, he held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which period he died.

With the exception of Graine's case the longest well authenticated instance of fasting on record is that accomplished by Giovanni Succi, who lived at the Royal Aquarium, London, for forty-five days without food.

An Emperor's Compliment.

Napoleon III. had his full share of the Bonaparte wit, tinged with a kindliness all his own. At a ball at the Tuileries a middle aged officer and his fair partner came to grief. As the mortified veteran scrambled to his feet the emperor extended a hand to him and, turning to the lady, remarked:

"Madame, this is the second time I have seen the colonel fall. The first time was on the battlefield of Magenta."

Mark Twain's Definition.

It is told of Mark Twain that during a conversation with a young lady of his acquaintance he had occasion to mention the word drydock.

"What is a drydock, Mr. Clemens?" she asked.

"A thirsty physician," replied the humorist.

Scorch Marks.

Sometimes scorch marks may be removed by merely laying the dry garment in the sunshine until the rays fade it white again. If the stain remains it may be dipped in soapsuds of some strength and placed in the sun again until the spot is gone.

DEVELOPMENT, INFLUENCE AND RESPONSIBILITY OF THE PRESS.

Alphone de Lamartine, the great French poet and statesman, predicted long ago, that before the end of the past century the press would be the whole literature of the world. Had he lived until that time, he would have seen his prediction almost verified. Considering the marvelous growth of the press, I shall confine myself particularly to New Jersey. The history of our State shows that the first effort directed toward the publishing of a newspaper was in the year 1775, when a paper, called the "Plain Dealer," made its appearance. This proved a failure, after which no subsequent efforts were made to establish another until 1795, when the "Argus" appeared.

From that time until the opening of the following century several attempts had been made to establish newspapers. Most of these were failures, principally due to the limited number of readers, the dissemination of news by word of mouth, and the expense incurred owing to the scarcity of type, cost of paper, and the delivery by carriers or post. Eighteen hundred and one witnessed the appearance of the "Trenton True American," followed from time to time by others. These proved to be more successful than those preceding them. While the newspaper of this period lacked every form of enterprise characteristic of modern journalism, they lacked neither the power of vituperation or the ability to slander men and denounce measures. The wildest linguistic flights of the modern "yellow newspapers" fall short of the superhuman efforts made by the editors of a century ago. Impartial discussion was unknown; reason had no place in editorial comment. In news gathering the editors were woefully deficient. Proceedings of public bodies were recorded in briefest terms, events of the day were neglected or treated from a partisan standpoint. No special features adorned their pages, which were devoted principally to long and tedious essays, political diatribes, and poetry.

With the passing of this decade came improved changes in the character of journalism, which has not only added to the intellectual advancement of the people; but has elevated the press to a place among the most honored professions of today.

Not only are the newspapers of the present time an important intellectual propaganda, but they awaken an interest in the most various subjects, and supply not only information but a stimulus.

In this inquiring age, the mind is like a merchant's ledger, it requires to be continually posted up to the latest date. Even the last telegram may have upset some venerable theory that has been received as infallible for ages. In times when great historical events are passing before our eyes, the journalist is to future historians what the explorer is to the map-maker. His work may be neither complete nor orderly, but it is the fresh record of an eye-witness, and enables us to become ourselves spectators of the mighty drama of the world.

Never was this service so well rendered as it is now, by correspondents who achieve heroic feats of bodily and mental prowess, exposing themselves to the greatest dangers, and writing much and well in circumstances the most unfavorable. How vividly the war correspondents bring before us the reality of the great conflict now taking place in Europe. In connection with the vast educating power of the press is its wide opportunity, and its mighty influence: the American newspaper has an opportunity not given in any other country. It is not only the moulder of public opinion, but the controlling force. It can safely be said that the wonderful progress of our nation, and the universal knowledge of our people, can be quite accurately measured by the vast number of newspapers in proportion to the population.

No other nation of antiquity or modern time has been so blessed. The people of Greece and Rome, even in the brilliant days of Pericles and Augustus, could not arrive at this knowledge.

Much as we admire the genius of Desmosthenes, Plato and Phidias, the press is a higher gift to man than the eloquence, the drama, the philosophy of past ages.

Commensurate with the opportunity of a free press is responsibility. Nobody can deny the proposition that the one is proportioned to the other. No one can too highly appreciate its power, or too deeply depreciate its abuses. The general press prints what the public wants; the specific newspaper prints what its editor thinks the class of readers to which it caters want. If the editor, publisher, or proprietor, whoever is the controlling spirit behind the types is personally able, fearless, conscientious, and incorruptible, and devoted to the public good, so are their respective newspapers. If they are otherwise, so are their newspapers.

We know the press has its faults and its weakness, that a small part of it will sometime yield to sinister influences or shirk from the truth. Nevertheless, it is generally believed that there is a well recognized intention on the part of the profession to expose and oppose wrongs, as well as to learn the facts and print them too, to know the truth and not suppress it. As an evidence of the moral sense and courage of the general press, and the confidence reposed in it, we note that every good cause instinctively seeks its aid, and usually obtains it, while workers of evil just as instinctively aim to fraudulently use or silence it, and with poor success.

It is fitting that we include in this class the press of Plainfield, which is more fortunate that many other cities in the average high character of its newspapers. As a stream will not rise higher than its fountain, it is important that the reading public encourage it in maintaining a policy of truth and independence, for upon a free and untrammeled press whose governing principles are honesty, veracity and justice, rests the security of a sovereign people and the preservation of their institutions and ideals. In the light of the unlimited freedom it possesses it has no license to do wrong; it has boundless liberty and opportunity to do good.

WISCONSIN STATE FAIR.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 9.—On the eve of the opening of the Wisconsin State Fair, all indications are that it will be far better than any of its predecessors. During the present week, and particularly the last three days' exhibits of various kinds have been arriving and today the last of the displays were installed. The entries of live stock of all kinds are large, while the agricultural, horticultural, dairy, manufacturing, machinery and other exhibits are fully up to the high standard established in previous years. Upwards of $20,000 will be distributed in purses at the harness race meeting which will be conducted under the auspices of the Great Western Circuit.

KENTUCKY CAMPAIGN OPENS.

Winchester, Ky., Sept. 9.—The Democratic campaign for the national ticket was opened in Kentucky here today with a State-wide ratification of the nominations made at the St. Louis convention. A crowd of visitors, estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000 and representing every part of the State, assembled to hear speeches from Vice President Marshall, Congressman Heflin, of Alabama, Congressman Ferris, of Oklahoma, and other Democratic leaders of national prominence.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

By a Rural Swain.

I once fell in love with a maiden;
She was no spring chicken at that!
She, surely enough, was a vision,
From her dainty suede shoes to her hat.

I blowed all my money upon her;
I bought ice cream cones by the peck,
I bought her a nice box of candy;
My bank account soon was a wreck.

The next day I asked her to marry,
The pain in my heart really hurt;
'Twas then that I found out that Carrie
Was one of them things called a flirt.

She murmured, "I love you most dearly,
But marriage you should not expect,
That's out of the question, yes, clearly,
My husband would surely object."

Oh, often, quite often, I've tarried
And basked in their coquettish spell;
But most all of them have been married,
And how is a feller to tell?

Uncle Abner

The old feller who used to do his whiskers up with hair ribbons now uses a safety razor and smokes cigarets. The world do move, but there is sometimes a question whether it is moving forward or backward.

Hand Tumms favors the Germans and Hod Peters favors the French, and as a result they have drawed such a crowd to Tibbitt's gruc'ry every day that business is at a standstill. There ain't room to wait on customers.

After a feller smokes a pipe for about nine years he grows quite fond of it, but nobody else does.

What has become of the old-fashioned gal who used to grease her chest with arnicky?

When a feller gits to the point where he receives no mail on the first of the month, he's a business success.

There ain't no wise feller who will admit that he knows as much as his wife does, when she is around.

The Bashi Bazouk.

The bashi bazouk is a warrior bold,
A blood-thirsty young Turkish blade, we are told.
His looks are ferocious. He carries a knife—
A long crooked one, when he wants to take life.
He breathes fire and smoke, but it is a safe bet
The fire and smoke come from his Turk cigaret.
He's always the first to be sent to the front.
He's always right there with the hair-raising stunt.
But we always hear when the battle's begun.
They've got the gay bashi bazouks on the run.
When battles are lost and it's time for rebukes,
They lay all the blame on the bashi bazouks.

The bashi bazouk is a fierce looking man,
His mustache curls up on the Kaiser Bill plan.
He struts and he snorts and he threatens and scowls,
And scares all the children and horses and fowls.
But he can't scare armies of men in the field.
When fighting gets hot he is quickest to yield.
He makes war on women and children all right,
But in a pitched battle he's apt to take eight.
His ways are spectacular, strenuous, rough,
And he always gets lots of newspaper stuff.
But when any battle is lost on a fluke,
They lay all the blame on the bashi bazouk.

TROOP D NOTES FROM FAR OFF DOUGLAS

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Troop D is fortunate in having for an officer's cook a man like Charles Duclo, of Long Branch, who has seen thirteen years service as a cook in the regular army and who is turning out meal down here that are the envy of the entre brigade. Yesterday's menu is a fair sample of the daily service in Troop D's officers' quarter, and is given below:

Breakfast—Grape fruit, cream of wheat and milk, ranch eggs and bacon, grapefruit marmalade and bread, butter and coffee. Dinner—Beefsteak, boiled potatoes, boiled beets with sauce, succotash, lettuce and tomato salad, blackberry pie, bread, butter and iced tea. Supper—Veal chops, boiled potatoes, asparagus tips on lettuce, sliced tomatoes, blackberry pie, sliced peaches and coffee.

One event in the departure of the units yesterday for Sea Girt cast a gloom over Troop D, and that was the leave-taking of Sergeant Fred Goddard. Since his transefer to General Hine's headquarters staff Goddard has proven himself a valuable man and his hard work for the brigade attarcted high commendation from the official staff. He called upon his former troop mates before boarding the train and was noticeably touched by the hearty adieu they accorded him.

Sergeant Donald McGee has suddenly raised himself to the seat of the most popular in the troop. McGee was offered the chance of securing an eleventh hour transfer to the Fourth Regiment when it left here last night, so that he could return to New Jersey, but declined to desert Troop D. The news of his decision spread quickly throughout the camp and his name was on all tongues last night.

Iced tea was introduced into several of the tents as a refreshment just before bedtime last night. A price has been put on the head of the individual who was responsible for bringing it here, for some of the boys declare they never closed their eyes after partaking of the dope.

Sergeant Roy Cox has assumed his new duties as top sergeant, succeeding Brown Rolston, who was recently discharged. He has already become accustomed to the work and is taking care of the job in great style.

Captain Borden received a consignment of pins and court plaster from a Newark insurance company yesterday for distribution among his men. Both the pins and plaster have come in handy for mending holes in uniforms.

Warren Ackerman and Reggie Rowland visited the wild west show at the ball park yesterday. Now they are keeping their tent mates awake nights explaining how a cowboy lasgoes the bull.

Joe Gallagher has lost his only pair of army trousers. Unless some good samaritan takes a chance on loaning him another pair it's likely that he will have to remain in bed until the new consignment arrives.

Trooper Gus Fiske is known as the camp's official alarm clock. Even the boys who take little stock in the bugle call at reveille roll out of bed when Gus sounds the warning note each morning.

LITERARY

Puck, the famous humorous weekly, is going to revise the history of the country according to the modern theory of telling the naked truth about historical events.

Tradition has clouded history since the beginning of time, evplains Puck's historian. There is abundant testimony extant that Joan of Arc was burned by proxy only, and as a matter of fact lived long enough to settle down and marry the man of her choice.

Beatrice, the flame of Dante's passion, was a giddy young debutante of nine summers at the time of her death; and facts indicate that if Sir Walter Raleigh ever laid a cloak over a mud puddle to protect Queen Elizabeth's feet, it was the garment of an unfortunate retainer and not his own richly brocaded Inverness.

Tradition has painted the Bastile as a prison of horrors, crowded with unhappy victims of the royal displeasure. Facts indicate that it never contained more than sixteen or seventeen prisoners at any one time and that these reveled in any luxury they craved.

Puck has uncovered many traditions of our own history as widely at variance with the facts as the incidents quoted.

In the first place, says Puck, Queen Isabella never pawned her jewels to start Columbus on his voyage of discovery, for the simple reason that Isabella's jewels had been out to the slaughter many months before Columbus appeared at the Spanish court and asked for help.

Nor did the doughty adventurers on the Mayflower first set foot on Plymouth Rock, unless they used a hydoaeroplane, for the waters around Plymouth Rock would hardly float a cream skimmer.

Peter Stuyvesant, we learn, enjoyed the full use of two perfectly good legs, and the wooden stump handed down to posterity seems to have been a figment of the imagination.

These are a few of the episodes to be pictorially treated in Puck's series. Other startling and amusing revelations are promised.

EMPLOYING PRINTERS MEET.

Atlantic City, Sept. 9.—Reprsenting the printing industry of the entire country, delegates to the annual convention of the United Typothetae of America are assembling in Atlantic City today. The high cost and scarcity of paper is the big problem to receive the attention of the association at its business sessions, beginning Monday. Aside from the paper question, the printers are inclined to take a roseate view of conditions in general in their trade. Business is good, they say, and labor troubles are scarce.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Charlie Chaplin appeared at Proctor's local theatre in his fifth Mutual comedy yesterday, and also will be seen today in the same vehicle. It is freely admitted that Chaplin has been somewhat "off color" of late, but in this production—"The Count"—he comes back with a rush of glory, and his many admirers will be delighted with his comedy stunts, many of which are new and original. In addition to Chaplin in "The Count," today a Paramount picturization of Denman Thompson's immortal stage classic, "The Old Homestead," is presented with Frank Losee assuming the part of Joshua Whitcomb. This wonderful story has been depicted on the screen with faithful detail and the cast has been selected with much care. The direction is splendid and the rural locations selected fit into the tale admirably. In addition today Crane Wilbur will be seen in a modern dramatic feature, entitled "The Spite Husband."

Monday is V. L. S. E. day at Proctor's, the program including Storey and Antonio Mareno in "The Tarantula," and Marguerite Clayton in a five-part Essanay production, entitled "According to the Code." The second episode of the new serial, "Beatrice Fairfax," will also be shown on Monday, with Grace Darling and Harry Fox assuming the leading roles.

On Tuesday—Triagle day—a remarkable picture will be presented, entitled "The Devil's Needle," with Norma Talmadge and Tully Marshall at the head of the splendid cast. These two screen artists are among the best delineators of character before the public, and they both rely upon their versatile facial expressions to put their parts over. Marshall is seen as a dope fiend, a part typical of the one which he played in Clyde Fitch's last play "The Cit." A rollicking Keystone comedy also appears on Tuesday, as does the fourteenth episode of "The Secret of the Submarine."

On Wednesday a big double program will be shown at Proctor's, consisting of Dorothy Bernard and Glen White in "Sporting Blood," a Fox play on the race track, and Lionel Barrymore in the Metro offering, "Dorian's Divorce."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Young Prince Took His Bride.

The Princess Was the Loveliest Creature.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN the children begged daddy for a story he told them this: "Once upon a time a young prince took a little mermaid with him on a voyage. This trip was really a visit to a neighboring kingdom in search of a bride. But the little mermaid loved the prince herself, so it made her very sad to [illegible] him hunting another queen.

"After a beautiful sail his ship entered the harbor of the neighboring king. The city itself was wonderful to see. Church bells rang and trumpets were sounded from a lofty tower. Soldiers paraded with flags flying and bayonets glistening in the morning sun.

"The king made every day a festival. There were balls, parties and games following each other, so that every minute interesting things to do crowded upon the people. But the princess was not yet present. She had to be brought from a temple a long way off, it was said. She was learning all the virtues at the temple, you see.

"At last the time came. The little mermaid stood all eager to see her beauty and was obliged to confess that the princess was the loveliest creature she had ever seen. She was dainty and small, and her eyes were as clear as the little mermaid's.

"Soon as the prince saw her he cried, 'It is you—you who saved me when I was cast ashore from a shipwreck and lay lifeless on the beach?' And he clasped her to his heart. 'Oh, I am too happy!' he said to the little mermaid, who stood beside him.

"Now, you children must remember that it was really the little mermaid who had saved the prince from shipwreck. She had dived for him in the angry waves and carried him in her arms to shore, where the temple maiden had found him on the sand. But the prince never knew this, because in losing her tail for legs the little mermaid had also lost her voice. So you can imagine how sad the little mermaid felt when the prince said: 'A greater joy than I dared hope has come to pass. You will be glad, for you love me better than any one else does.'

"Then the little mermaid generously kissed his hand. But she felt as if her heart would break. His wedding morn would bring death to her and change her into sea foam."

"Tell us why again, daddy?" Evelyn begged.

"Because the old sea witch made it so when she turned the little mermaid into a land child!" cried Jack.

Training a Husband

by MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Grants a Favor in His Characteristic Way.

"Where did you get that?" Morris Southy stopped in front of a roly-poly puppy that was in the middle of the path, looking up at him out of a thatch of gray hair.

"Why, Hal Morton brought it over and gave it to us. He has one just like it." There was a note of anxiety in the boy's voice. He gathered up the fat little fellow in his arms. 'Mother said——"

"Take it back to the boy. You know how I feel about dogs." The father strode up the path. The child sat on the grass, folding the dog in his arms and crying noiselessly. Frank ran breathlessly into the kitchen and with eyes wide with trouble said:

"Mother, we can't keep the puppy. Father said so and Roger is crying."

Marian bent and whispered in his ear. "Don't say anything about it. Perhaps father had not thought how much you would enjoy the dog." She kissed him and he ran out to his brother much heartened in his spirit. Had they not mother to help them? Mother could do most everything.

Marian went to the living room. Morris sat in the easy chair with little Florence in his lap. She was telling him excitedly about the dog. As Marian entered Morris said: "We cannot keep the dog, dear; I do not think dogs are safe for little girls to play with."

"Morris, I wish you would allow the boys to keep this dog. It is a Scotch terrier and will not grow large. It need never come into the house."

"Yes, father, do let us keep it. I love the dog," pleaded the child.

"How did the boy happen to bring the pup here?" asked Morris acidly. "Is this a scheme of yours to get the children the pet you have talked so much about?"

"I knew nothing about it, of course. Hal Morton found a place where they had a couple of these dogs to dispose of and he knew the boys were very fond of dogs, so he very kindly brought it over. I told him to leave it, for I was sure that you would consent to ther keeping it."

"Well, you thought wrong. I will not have a puppy about. They are more bother than a child and we have our yard full of children all the time. That is enough. I do not propose to have a yelping pup adding to the noise." Morris rose and set the little girl on the floor, telling her to run and play. When the door closed behind her he turned to Marian and said impatiently:

"Why in the world did you let the boy leave the dog here? You know how I feel about them."

"Because, Morris, I want the boys to have the dog. My brothers had a dog, and I know what a source of happiness it was to all of us. They will not need to have children here to play with. Indeed, I would rather they played alone so——"

'Really," interrupted Morris, "you do not seem to understand the English language, Marian. I said I did not want the dog and I will not have it. Is that clear?"

"And I say that I do want it," Marian's cheeks were pink with the effort it cost her to say this. Morris stared at her in astonishment. She went up to him and laid her hand on his arm.

"Oh, my dear, if you knew how much I want the children to own a pet that they can love and enjoy you would not deny me this. Will you not do this for me? I have not asked a favor of you for—a very long time. For me, to make me happy, will you not do it?"

Morris stood staring into his wife's face. He was so astonished to have her hold out against his expressed command that he had hardly had time to get angry at her. She had called him selfish; had said that he thought only of his own wishes and comfort. Here was a chance to prove that he sacrificed his desires for their happiness. Why not? Marian's arm was stealing around his neck. If only he would yield this point it might be the entering wedge. They might be happy yet," she thought.

"I will take great pains that you shall not be disturbed by the dog if you will let them keep it."

"Well, we will try it and see how it works." It was very hard for him to give up. "But if the thing barks at night, he goes."

CLOTH SUITS FAVORED.

Fur Trimming and Silk Stitching Extensively Featured—Novel Pockets Evident.

By Mary Glynn.

Smart semi-dress suits of cloth no doubt will be largely adopted this fall. The colors will range from shares of blue, brown, green to biege, tan and occasionally cream white. Fur trimming more on the flat order will be used. Seal predominating. Moleskin fur will be shown also, this being used, however, in a more lavish manner. The skirts are full and noticeably longer. Coats, too, are medium or three-quarter length. Especially smart is a suit of dark green broadcloth, which is featured with three-quarter length coat, smartly trimmed with seal fur. This is arranged in such a way as to give a military suggestion running straight up and down the front closing. The convertible collar and cuffs are also of seal. Particularly interesting is the odd arrangement at the waistline and the curious coat-tail cut in back. The belt appears as a deep fold of the material which graduates from an inch in the centre front to three inches at the underarm seam. Button boots and a seal-trimmed turban complete the outfit.

EGAN VERY POPULAR.

"It isn't hard to tell who is the most popular member of the Indians these days. The wreath goes to Ben Egan, who is about the only Redskin for whom the Wiedenmayer Park regulars have praise. Egan has worked for his popularity. He fights as hard in every game as if his team were struggling for the pennant, instead of being a hopeless tailender. He does nearly all the catching, even when the double-headers are piled up. Ben goes all over the field, backing up the first baseman and frequently he is found by third, taking part in a play. He is hitting the ball hard. The fans gave unmistakable evidence one day this week of the fact that they think more of Egan than they do of Manager Tenney. In a critical ninth-inning rally, in which the Indians threatened to tie the score, the pitcher was taken out in order to let some one bat for him. The fans yelled for Egan, whose hitting had been a feature of the previous games of the series. The fans were not satisfied even when Tenney nominated himself to do the hitting. They decried Fred and refused to be satisfied with any one but Egan. They were still calling for Ben when the game ended."—Newark News.

RECORDS MAY GO.

At least one champion, Hannes Kolehmainen, is likely to be beaten in the national track and field championships at Weequahic Park today, in the opinion of Herman E. Obertubbesing, who also believes that there is a good chance of Ted Meredith's being defeated by Tom Halpin. Mr. Obertubbesing, who, as the A. A. U.'s handicapper in the metropolitan district, is one of the most qualified men to pass on the comparative abilities of the athletes, figures the struggle for team honor will be a fight between the Irish-American A. C. and the New York A. C., with the Chicago A. A. a third contender. Mr. Obertubbesing considers the dashes and hurdle races a toss up. Among the stars he favors to win are Willie Gordon in the mile, George Goulding in the walk, Harry Worthington in the running broad, Landers in the pole vault, Pat McDonald in the shot, Arlie Mucks in the discus and Dan Ahearn in the hop, step and jump. He thinks most of the points in the weight events will go to the Irish-American A. C. of New York.

FISH OR FISH STORY.

A boy named Byron Seider, of South Orange, recently walked into the Asbury Park Fishing Club and asked if any of the members present could tell him what kind of fish it was that swam around in a small bottle containing ocean water. The members looked at it and were nonplussed. He stated that while using a small cap net in the undertow he had caught it and although he had made numerous inquiries, nobody was able to identify it. It was a beautiful little fish about an inch long, shaped somewhat like a baby porgy, yellow and silver in color, and with a perfectly formed black band encircling its head and part of its tail, and extended fins spread from all parts of its body. An examination of the books in the club on fish failed to identify it and one of the members obtained it from the boy to take to the New York Aquarium, alive if possible, for identification. Unfortunately it died, but was in good state of preservation when shown to Dr. Townsend, curator of the Aquarium.

BOBBY JONES SHINES.

"The star of Bobby Jones shines no less brightly today because of his elimination yesterday in the national amateur golf championship by Robert A. Gardner, the United States champion. The fourteen-year-old Georgia title holder—he has not quite reached his fifteenth birthday—made his mark by qualifying in such a field as that which started play Monday. He heaped a full measure of glory by eliminating, in subsequent thirty-six-hole match rounds, such veterans as Eben M. Byer, a former national champion, and Frank W. Dyer, the Montclair collegian who wears the Pennsylvania crown. Added to this, young Jones led Gardner at the end of their first eighteen holes. That he broke in the afternoon detracts not one whit from his fame. Comparatively unknown before he came to Merion, Bobby could not have been much more of a sensation if he had put out Gardner and won in the semi-final round today. Even though he fails to get into the semi-finals, Jones' performance ranks with the Ouimet upset of 1913, at Brookline."—Newark News.

By Peter P. Carney.

Next to the Grand American Trapshooting Tournament the Westy Hogans is the biggest trapshooting carnival of the year. This is the tenth year of the Hogans and as in the preceding years the tournament will be staged in Atlantic City, N. J. The dates are September 12 to 16, inclusive. The place is Venice Park. For four years the shoot was held on Young's Pier, but when flames gutted the pier the Hogans were forced to find other shooting grounds and selected Venice Park and the tournaments have been just as successful there as they were on the old pier.

More trophies are given by the Westy Hogans tournament than any other tourney of the year other than the Grand American. More money is also given than in any other tournament excepting the G. A. H., and there is just as much sociability—maybe more—than at any other tournament held in the country. The shooters bring along their wives, daughters, sweethearts and sons, and any one attending a Hogan shoot seldom fails to play a return engagement. 1907 was the first year of the tournament, and there were 63 entries. 1908 saw 104; 1909 brought 178; and in successive years the entrants have been 233, 309, 267, 264 and 287. The Hogans expect to go over the 300 mark again this year.

Year after year the Hogans "pull" something new in the way of trapshooting. This year is no exception. They have billed a team race between the East and the West. Each contestant will shoot at 500 targets on the regular program of three days. Other arrangements, such as territory, number of contestants from each section, will be made by a representative of the East, one from the West and a member of the Hogans prior to the beginning of the shoot. A Westy Hogan trophy will be given to each member of the winning team. This competition has stirred up a lot of interest and it will be a distinctive triumph to be a member of the team that wins.

The State championship team race will be shot on September 13, being decided in the last 100 targets of the 175 thrown. Each State can be represented by 5 to 10 shooters, but no State can have more than one team. Five trophies go to the winning aggregation. Last year New York defeated Pennsylvania by one target, and New Jersey by three, the scores being 483, 482 and 480. Eight States were represented. The last 100 targets of the program on the 14th will decide the Westy Hogan amateur championship. The Atlantic City cup will be the feature event on the 15th. This will be at 150 targets. This trophy becomes the permanent possession of any trapshooter winning it three times. It was won in 1910 by Charles H. Newcomb, of Philadelphia, and in succeeding years by F. S. Wright, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Allen Heil, of Allentown, Pa.; R. H. Bruns, of Indiana; Woodfolk Henderson, of Lexington, Ky., and F. S. Wright, of Buffalo. Therefore Mr. Wright has two legs on the trophy.

THE DETRIOT TIGERS

After a season of climbinb up and falling back in the American League standing, the Detroit Tigers are very much in the pennant hunt at the present time.

None of the half dozen pennant contenders in the American League race is putting up a stronger game than the Jennings outfit, and none appears to have a better chance to cop the flag.

With the marvelous Ty Cobb displaying old time form, the entire Tiger crew are up on their toes and going after everything in sight.

The Detroit club is one of the pioneers of the the American League, having been a member since the circuit was formed in 1900.

The Tigers' great fight last season, when they finished only twenty points behind the champion Red Sox, shows that Hughey Jennings' boys carry the punch and will bear watching.

Three years in succession the Tigers took part in world's series games, but on each occasion they failed to land. However, the team holds the distinction of being the only one in the league to win three pennants in a row.

During the sixteen years Detroit has been in the American League its team has never ended a season in last place. In fact, the cellar has never been occupied by the Tigers for any great length of time during any playing season.

American League records show that the Tigers have finished the season eight times in the first division and an equal number of times in the second division.

It looks now as if Manager Jennings guessed right when he grabbed "Hack" Spencer. The old St. Louis-Boston backstop is doing grand work for the Tigers after his absence of several years from the big show.

The veteran Sam Crawford has taken part in the fray regularly of late and is doing his share to land the big prize for the Jennings outfit.

In Burns, Young, Bush and Witt Manager Jennings has developed a young and speedy infield that stands second to none in baseball.

What makes the pennant chances of the Tigers appear particularly bright is the fact they are getting real pitching along with the team's brilliant batting. This winning combination is one that has not unusually been enjoyed by the Detroit battlers.

Two Tiger pitchers, Covaleskie and Mitchell, both of whom are now pitching the gilt edged variety, were supposed to be through in the big show before they joined Detroit. Covaleskie had been released by the Phillies and Mitchell had been given the gate by Cleveland.

Next to the league pennant race the most interest in the playing of the Tigers is centred in Ty Cobb's effort to overtake Tris Speaker for the lead in American League batting.

Before taking charge of the Detroit team in 1907, Hughey Jennings had been a star pastimer for thirteen years. In the early days he was known as the king of shortstops. As a member of the Baltimore team in 1895 he accepted 21 chances without an error in a fourteen inning game against Boston.

ST. JOSEPH'S MAY PLAY FOR CATHOLIC TITLE

According to reports in circulation about town, the management of the St. Joseph baseball team has been angling for a game with the Tabs. It is thought that perhaps a series of game is sought.

If a series should be played, the title of "Catholic Champions" of this city, would be at stake. The Tabs and the St. Joseph would be the only title and, should one of the two assert its rights, the other outfit would two teams that could claim such a certainly get busy at once. At the present time, however, nothing definite has been done toward bringing the two teams together. It is highly probable that the rival managers will consult again in the near future.

SIX NETHERWOOD CITY LEAGUE BATTERS CLOUTED PILL AT .300 CLIP FOR 1916

Official Records Just Made Public Show Matty and Eddie Coughlan Lead—Younger Coughlan Smashing Pill at .459 Rate—Even East End Twirlers Hit Ball to Advantage—Complete Records Available.

With six regulars batting over .300 the Netherwood City League baseball team easily captured the 1916 flag. At least, the batting ability of the squad is assigned as the real reason why the East End lads made the showing that they did. The Coughlan brothers, Matty and Eddie, were the real team leaders. Matty batted .459, while his brother, Eddie, clouted the pill for .404. Johnson, Eddie Hannon, V. Terry and Earl Moran all hit well over the .300 mark.

The Netherwood pitchers also demonstrated their ability with the willow. Lou Slocum hit for .250. Russ Stewart, the regular pitcher, has been batting .276. Thorne, another hurler, clouted the cover off the ball for .239.

JUNIOR TRACK EVENTS AT WEEQUAHIC PARK

Four National Junior Championship Meet Records Wrecked.

Rain and a heavy wind couldn't stop the cinder path kings from fracturing figures in the annual junior national track and field championships of the A. A. U. at Weequahic Park, Newark, yesterday afternoon. Four national junior championship meet records were wrecked and one other was equalled.

The well balanced team of the New York A. C. rolled up double the number of points scored by its nearest rival and captured the team trophy with a score of 52 points. The Chicago A. A. was second with 20, and the Irish-American A. C. of New York third with 16 points. The Boston Irish-American A. C. and the Boston A. A. each scored 13 points, and the Los Angeles A. C. came next with a total of 10.

W. P. Howard, of the Pittsburgh A. A.; Frank Loomis, of the Chicago A. A., a brother of the great Joe Loomis; W. S. Hummel, of the Multnomah A. C. of Portland, Ore., and W. J. Rolker, of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, were the record wreckers.

Howard flung his feet in the face of the following field in the quarter mile run, tearing the tape in 50 3-5 seconds. He smashed the former meet record of 50 4-5 seconds, made by Jimmy Colliton, the Lafayette collegian who storped the silks of the Irish-American A. C., in 1906, and equalled in 1911 by Bill Prout, of the Boston A. A., and again in 1912 by Dave Caldwell of the same club.

Young Loomis flew the fences in the 220 yard low hurdles in 25 1-5 seconds, which shaved a fifth of a second off the junior meet record established by Walter Lee, of the New York A. C. in 1907. Hummel ran a corking race in the 440 yard hurdles, breasting the worsted in 56 2-5 seconds, sending soaring the former meet figures of 61 1-5 seconds, made by Henry Schaaf, of the Irish-American A. C., in 1914. In a splendid bee, and toe exhibition Rolker won the mile walk in 6:58 1-5, which carved 2 3-5 seconds off the meet record of 7:00 4-5, set by Dick Gifford, of the McCaddin Lyceum, in winning the junior national championship in 1912.

DUNELLEN AND TABS PASTIME AT AVON OVAL

Rival Managers Confident of Victory in First Game of Sunday Series.

The Public Service will have to run about a dozen extra cars on the Arlington avenue line tomorrow afternoon. At least, the managers of the Tab and Dunellen teams feel that an unusually large crowd will be in attendance at the first of a series of Sunday tilts between the two teams. The Sunday championship title is at stake. The Royal Giants cannot, rightfully, lay claim to any local title. In fact, the Dunellen team has deprived them of any privileges along this line.

The engagement tomorrow will be one worth witnessing. The Tabs are not generally considered superior to the Apgarites, but, nevertheless, there are hundreds of fans who believe that Manager Jim Scott has an aggregation that is worthy of the best in the line of opposition.

The probable lineups of the two teams are as follows:

TABS.	DUNELLEN.
O'Loughlin	Trust

Wahl	Wilson

Clarke	Gunzelman

Coughlan	Emery

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL MATERIAL PLEASES COACH RALPH PATCH

Practice May Be Called in Few Days—Valuable Men Lost by Graduation—Promising Material Among Subs and Recruits—One of Star Players is With Troop D.

Although school does not open until October 2, the Plainfield High School warriors will get in action before that date. At least, Coach Ralph S. Patch expects to call practice in a short time and intends to notify each of the possible candidates for positions.

The prospects of an unusually successful football season at the Ninth street institution are exceedingly bright, although several star members of last year's squad have been graduated. Those lost by graduation were Jim Noonan, who will enter Georgetown in a few days and who expects to try-out for the college team; Herb Peacock, who is confined to his home with infantile paralysis; Sam Davidson, an end; "Box" Apgar, who played in the backfield; and Bill Wheelan, whose work at centre was good. Other players who will be lost to the squad are Dave Fitch, who has entered business; "Bus" Miller, whose return to school is not expected; Don Hylan and Bob McDowell. It is not now known whether or not Alan Stevenson, last year's sub, will return to school.

Those left on the list, therefore, are Dick Pennock, the captain and left guard; Walter Van Hoesen, one of last year's most promising subs, and an experienced lineman; Hooper and Samloch, tackles; Sid Butler, who pastimes in the region of end; Paul Geary, a sub lineman; Chester Alpaugh, who is the most promising candidate for quarterback; Fred Smith, a backfield recruit; Morris Kline, who will succeed Wheelan as center; Bob Vail, a substitute linesman; "Polly" Snyder, who will certainly be numbered among the backfield players; Wally Zimmerman, one of last year's substitutes; Warren Mumford, an experienced man; Clint Berrien, a "vet" of year's experience, and Wilson Field. It is not certain that Bill Daniels, who is a member of Troop D and who is with that troop at Douglas, will return to school in time to enter into football activities. If he does return, he will surely be in the pink of condition.

The Red and Blue team is out to capture the Union county title this year. The local institution annexed the honor last year, but the title tilt with Rahway was called off at Rahway's request. The local boys hope to accomplish much during what may be an unusually short season.

Press Football Department

HARVARD.

Fifty candidates for Harvard's football team reported Thursday for the squad's first home practice on Soldiers' Field. The only regular present was Captain Dadmun.

The players, although green, look promising and are in good condition. The workout was short, the usual first-day routine being in order.

Field Coach Leo Leary directed the practice. Percy Haughton was not on hand, but later intends to devote much time to the Crimson team. Other coaches on the field were Reggie Brown, Jimmy Knox, Dick Wigglesworth, Mal Logan and Sam Felton.

The squad was about equally divided between linesmen and backs. There was a dearth of tackles. Flynn, of last year's freshman team, being the only player who has had any experience in that position. Sixteen men from the 1915 cub team were out, including Flower and Bond, backs, and Clark, a guard.

YALE.

Because of the excessive heat, the Yale football squad yesterday went through only light exercise. The double practice program will continue until college reopens September 28.

The squad numbered about sixty men yesterday. Head Coach Jones gave most of his attention to the backfield timber. Among the veterans he handled were Powell and Van Nostrand, quarterbacks; Hutchinson and Effie Waite, halfbacks, and Harry Legore, fullback.

PENN STATE.

Twenty-five candidates for Penn State's eleven reported yesterday for the first practice of the season. Head Coach Harlow and three assistants put the men through two periods of light exercise. Harlow coached the linemen, Dutch Hermann directed the work of the backs and Martin and Bert Barron instructed the ends. Bill Heppenstall, a State player of the early '90s, assisted in the coaching. Bud Whitney, former Dartmouth captain, who assisted Harlow last year, is expected to arrive today.

WHEELING LOSES GAMES.

President E. W. Dickerson, of the Central League, yesterday declared forfeited the two game won by Wheeling on August 12 in a doubleheader with South Bend. The reason given is that on that date Wheeling had fourteen players, whereas the league rules say that if the limit of thirteen is exceeded by any team all game won by that team while above the limit shall be forfeited.

The decision upsets the pennant race, dropping Wheeling from the top to third place.

TOURNEY WILL OPEN.

With William M. Johnston, Clarence J. Griffin, Roland Roberts, W. E. Davis and Ella Fotrell, of California, making up the Western representation and Dean Mathey, of New Jersey, and W. F. McElroy, of Pittsburgh, representing the East, the annual tri-State tennis tournament will open at Cincinnati today.

CUBS THREATENED.

Charley Weeghman, president of the Chicago National League club, last night charged that some of the high priced members of his club were "soldiering." He declared that unless there was a general brace among the Cubs he would not permit their playing the usual series with the White Sox. This series is always a big money producer for the players, as well as the clubs. "Next season will see wholesale changes," promised Weeghman.

JAP LOSES MATCH.

Clarence J. Griffin and Hutchinson Mikami, the Japanese, were defeated by Willis E. Davis and Roland Roberts, of San Francisco, in an exhibition double tennis match at Pittsburgh yesterday. The scores were 9—7, 8—6. Charles S. Garland, of Pittsburgh, won from Herbert S. Ingles, 6—4, 6—2.

UPRUSH OF THE SAP.

Force It Exerts In Its Mysterious Flow Through the Plants.

Even now the causes which underlie the great upward flow of sap in the spring are not completely understood. That the movement is accompanied by considerable force has been demonstrated in a remarkable manner.

In the spring season, when the sap is rising with great vigor, the stem of a grapevine was cut right across. With as little loss of time as possible a piece of bladder was tied over the surface of the wounded part. As fixed the bladder was in a state of collapse, but it did not remain in this condition long. Within half an hour it was obvious that it contained a good deal of liquid.

As time went on the amount of fluid matter increased so much that the bladder was quite full. Two hours after fixing the bladder was so distended that it was lifted right up. An hour later the pressure had increased to such a degree that the bladder burst, being unable to stand the strain any longer.

In this connection it is interesting to recall the experiment of Dutrochet, also with a grapevine stem. In this case a bent tube containing mercury was affixed to the cut stem in such a manner that any fluid coming from the plant would have to lift the column of quicksilver. In one of his experiments it was shown that the sap raised the column of mercury to the height of thirty inches. Dutrochet calculated that in such a case the force exercised by the sap was five times greater than that of the blood in the crural artery of the horse. It requires no student of anatomy to appreciate the force of this statement.—Baltimore American.

A Habit Stanley Had.

It was remarked of the late Sir H. M. Stanley during his last visit to New York that he stood all the time with his back to the wall during receptions instead of standing out where people would pass behind him.

Lady Stanley laughingly explained that this was an old habit contracted in Africa—that Stanley always stood with his back against a tree or a barricade of some sort when brought in contact with the savages, and it had become such a habit with him that he took that position no matter where he was.

JERSEY SOLDIERS REACH SEA GIRT

Arrival of First and Fourth Regiments Greeted by Tooting of Auto Horns.

CHEERS FOR WILSON

Sergeant-Major F. W. Goddard and Chaplain Hare Among Those to Come Home—Second and Third May go to Border.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, Sept. 11.—Sergeant Major Frederick W. Goddard of Brigadier General Edwin W. Hine's staff, was the only Plainfielder who returned to Sea Girt with the troops who had arrived here yesterday and on Saturday from Douglas, Arizona. Mr. Goddard left Sea Girt on July 2 as a private in Troop D of the Queen City, but shortly after arriving at Douglas was appointed to his present position, and remained attached permanently to brigade headquarters.

Like all the other Plainfielders who have been relieved of duty at the border and returned home, Sergeant Major Goddard looked the picture of health, and declared that he never felt better in his life, when seen by the Daily Press correspondent as he alighted from the train yesterday afternoon, which bore the the Fourth Regiment. No effort was made to conceal the fact that every headquarters staff and the men or man who returned was glad to get home, although all of the 2,000 or more returning troops were in the finest physical condition. There was not a case of sickness of physical disability in either command.

Rev. Dr. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, who is chaplain of the Fourth Regiment, was among those who arrived at Sea Girt last night with the guardsmen. He is in excellent health, having enjoyed the trip to Douglas.

The First Regiment got in shortly before 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, in command of Colonel John W. Fraser. Governor James F. Fielder, accompanied by Mrs. Fielder and Acting Adjutant General Nelson B. Gaskill went to the station and mingled with the officers and men, congratulating them on the splendid appearance they made, and upon the record which they had made at Douglas. While the troops were leaving the train President and Mrs. Wilson and a company of secret service men and newspaper men, circled twice through the throng at the station, and were greeted by cheers and the tooting of hundreds of automobile horns. They did not stop, however.

As the two trains of fifteen cars each pulled into the station the cheering and shrill toots of the horns on hundreds of automobiles raised a mighty din of welcome, and the noise kept up until the men had marched past the Governor's cottages, where the executive reviewed them. He was accompanied by Major Gaskill, Surgeon General William Gray Schauffler and Colonel Henry D. Styer. The men soon made camp, using their little shelter tents for the first night and making a permanent camp with the wall tents yesterday morning.

There were fully 10,000 visitors to the camp yesterday afternoon, when the trains bearing the Fourth Regiment and General Hine and his staff drew up to the station. Not one of the khaki clad boys was without a visitor during the day, and all the crowd were adults, as an order was issued barring children because of the paralysis epidemic. The Fourth Regiment was headed by Colonel George T. Vickers, as they marched into camp, and they also spent the first night in shelter tents, making a permanent camp this morning.

The First Regiment went through the usual evening parade for the benefit of the throng, Governor Fielder reviewing them from an automobile. A feature of this was the excellent work by an enlisted band, the regular band of the organization having refused to take the Federal oath in June and go to the border.

This morning the work of mustering out of the Federal service was commenced, but there is a lot of red tape connected with this, and it will probably be three weeks before it is finished. Because of the possibility of men claiming that the became physically disabled while in the service, the physical examinations in connection with the mustering out will be very stringent, as the government has no desire to increase its pension lists because of the little unpleasantness along the border. Colonel Styer is in charge of the mustering out work, assisted by Captain Walter L. Reed. Lieutenant Charles Elliott, of the regular army, is acting as post quartermaster, assisted by ten men from the Fort Hancock quartermaster's department, and Captain Gouvernor B. Packer is post storekeeper. The surgeons are working under Surgeon General William Gray Schauffler, of the New Jersey guard, who has been again sworn into the Federal service after having been dismissed following the completion of mobilization in July.

There was an unconfirmed rumor throughout the camp on Saturday and yesterday that the Second and Third regiments would soon be called to go to the border, and if this should become a reality, Company K

Abandon Danube Fortress to Austrians After It is Destroyed—London Claims Germans Repulsed in Somme Attacks.

Paris, Sept. 11.—German attacks made on the Somme front were repulsed by the French, according to a statement issued today by the War Office. The Teutons launched their chief assault in the region of Berny and Chaulnes, but they were unsuccessful. A statement issued by the War Office today says that British forces on the front in Greek Macedonia assumed the offensive last night. Crossing the Struma River, they attacked the Bulgarians who resisted desperately. The British crossed the river under fire, having gained a footing on the eastern bank at a point about 40 miles northeast of Saloniki they attacked the villages of Nevolyen and Karabjabes.

Bucharest, Sept. 11.—The Roumanian War Office admitted that Silistria, an important Danube fortress, had been abandoned to the Bulgarians. The Roumanians rereated after the fortress had been destroyed by heavy guns.

German Attacks Fail.

London, Sept. 11.—British troops on Sunday repulsed several attacks made by the Germans on the Somme front, the War Office announced today, while on the front further north today they penetrated several Teuton trenches near La Bassee Canal.

MAY ORDER LABOR WAR IN NEW YORK

Union Heads Meet at 2 p. m. Today to Make Decision.

New York, Sept. 11.—Leaders of the Central Federated Union will meet at the Continental Hotel at 2 o'clock this afternoon to determine whether a call is to be issued to all the class and trades of the city for a sympathetic strike in support of the demand of the striking street railway employes. Service on the subway and elevated lines fell below normal today for the first time during the present difficulty. This was explained by Interborough officials by the heavily increased traffic. The New York Railways Company had 260 car operating at 10 o'clock this morning, which is ten cars more than the number going at the same hour since the strike began.

12 KILLED WHEN SPAN OF ST. LAWRENCE BRIDGE FALLS

Quebec, Sept. 11.—A span of the great bridge being constructed over the St. Lawrence River collapsed today without warning. Many workmen were cought in the ruins. The central span of the bridge collapsed three hours after the scows supporting it had been removed. As it tore away from the trestles to which it was hooked it plunged into the river, carrying with it more than a dozen men. Ninety men were at work on the bridge at the time, but most of them were on the other spans which were held firmly.

TROOP DOES NOT WANT TO LEAVE

Two Weeks or Month Will Make Big Difference in Training.

THEY NEED DRILLING

Men Willing to Stick by Commanding Officers—Not a Sick Man in the Troop—Students Have Been Refused Discharges.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 7.—Plainfield's soldier boys will not be home before October 1 and possibly not until a fortnight or a month from that date. Such was the opinion voiced by the official personnel of the troop here this morning. If orders come from the War Department before the first mentioned date, and they are not looked for, Troop D's officers will be a lot of keenly disappointed men. In an interview this morning, Lieutenant J. N. Charles said: "It would be a pity to send these men home at this time. We have just gotten them trained to a point where they are teachable and if we are given two weeks or a month more in this camp we will be able to send back East a delegation of faultlessly trained militiamen. They have improved wonderfully since coming here but there are certain rough edges that will have to be smoothed off before they come up to our expectations. The mean part of the work is over and Troop D's men are just arriving at the interesting stage of the game. It would surprise me very much to see a call for return come in here before the first of October, and I am practically certain that there won't be any."

In these few words Lieut. Charles voiced the sentiments of his fellow officers. The men have been made to think of home and loved ones these last few days more than at any other time during their stay here, this being due to the farewell accorded the two outgoing regiments Monday night. But they are all willing to stick by their commanding officers and once the uneasiness concerning immediate orders has worn off the men will begin to see the logic of their superiors' words.

Troop D is in all likelihood the healthiest unit in camp. Not a single man is on the hospital list at the present time. Private John Calder, the recruit who was operated on for stomach trouble and whose condition was at once time considered very critical, has rejoined the troop and is apparently as well as any man in the camp. The operation was performed in a last attempt to save his life and the surgeons in charge of the case at the Base Hospital were highly complimented upon their success.

The slightest ailment, things that would attract only passing notice at home, call for immediate attention here. The officers force the men to have the slightest cold attended to at once and in this way the troop has been able to curb considerable illness that might have resulted seriously.

After a strenuous day on the range Tuesday yesterday was practically a day of rest for Captain Borden's men. In the morning they were taken to the mountain foot for a short, snappy drill on horseback and returned shortly before mess time. Most of the men lolled around their tents in the afternoon and thirty-seven were put on guard at night. This means that today will be another day of leisure for those who were on guard detail last night.

Privates Cregar and Stegman, the two who were supposed to leave with the First Regiment, are still in camp. The men were informed late in the afternoon Monday that an attempt would be made to send them back home on transfers to the First, it being impossible to gain the dependency discharges for which they had made application previously. At the last minute, however, it was found that this could not be done and they were both ordered back to the troop. Both had their hearts set on going

TROOPERS HAVE STRENUOUS DAY

Local Cavalrymen put Through Paces on Rifle Range at Douglas.

STILL AWAIT ORDERS

Persistent Rumors Heard in Camp That Jerseymen Will Soon Be En Route for Home—Hunting Parties Arranged.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 6.—Tired and hungry after a second big day on the range members of Troop D trudged into camp at 8:30 last night, completing one of the most strenuous days. Although a second round of rifle shooting gets underway today with the Fifth Infantry leading under Lieutenant William Kruitbosch it seems unlikely that the troopers will get another whack at it, at least until they get back to Sea Girt, where they will probably be given a day or two of range practise.

The eager expectancy of the troopers for the arrival of orders from Washington to return to the New Jersey mobilization camp was treated to a sad jolt this morning when Troop A, of Newark, occupying quarters next to Plainfield, packed up equipment for a four days' hike, taking along rations enough for five days. Inasmuch as this troop is a member of the same squadron as Plainfield and it being certain that the cavalry will return East in a body when the orders do arrive, it is therefore certain that no move will be made this week. Then, too, it has been rumored in Troop D's quarters that the Plainfielders are due for a similar hike and bivouac and it would not surprise anyone to see the orders come in within the next twenty-four hours. It is practically certain that the Plainfielders will get a taste of hiking, although it may not be for more than two or three days.

While there is apparently no good reason for believing that the return order will come in immediately the troopers persist in spreading rumors to the effect that the Jerseymen will be here but a few days longer and a majority of the soldiers are willing to wager their next month's pay that the camp is entirely deserted by September 15. Another rumor in circulation today says that the twenty-second and thirty-fifth regiments of the regular infantry is planning to take up quarters in the camps vacated by the First and Fourth Regiments, now on their way to Sea Girt. These two units of regulars are now stationed at Warren, a short distance from here, and the regular army officers here admit that there might be truth in the rumor, although they will give it no official endorsement.

Despite the possibility of an early return to home quarters the Troop D soldiers continue to receive boxes of good things to eat and to wear each day and no falling off has been noted in the amount of mail matter distributed each morning.

Rivalry is keen among the enlisted men for the vacancies in the official personnel which will be announced by Captain Albert Borden some time late today. Although no authoritative information can be secured from those who make the appointments it is understood that "Gus" Fiske, Hartley Mellick and William Rush are three of those who will be promoted.

Providing the men are still here this week-end a number of hunting parties will be formed for Sunday afternoon, reports coming in from outlying districts indicating that deer, grousse, pigeon and wild turkeys are plentiful. The troopers are all anxious to gather souvenirs from this wild country to bring back East with them and snake skins are being collected in large quantities.

Since her removal from there she had made her home in Brooklyn, where she died Saturday after a long illness. Interment was made in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

Former Well Known School Teacher Succumbs to Disease at Ocean Grove.

Miss Myrtle Reynolds, for the past eleven years a teacher in the Lincoln School, this city, died at her summer home, the "Rulon," Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, last Friday night, of what the attending physician diagnosed as infantile paralysis. Mundy is only the second one in the city over 10 years of age to contract the disease, the other one being Herbert Peacock, of West Seventh street.

PARALYSIS IN NEW YORK STILL SHOWS A DECREASE

CHURCHES LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO ELECT FOUR "DRY" COUNCILMEN

KITTENS AND COUNCILMEN.

The Rev. C. M. Anderson was urging churchmembers to pray that members of the Plainfield Common Council would vote against the renewal of the saloon licenses in his address at the union service last night. He said that if four new councilmen pledged to no-license were elected one or two already in the body would "come-over," and perhaps more. "Let us pray that the councilmen will have their eyes opened," he said, and then told this story:

An aged woman arose in an experience meeting to tell of the wonderful manner in which God has answered her prayers. She had an old grey cat, she said, and the cat had two kittens, but the poor little things were born blind. She prayed a whole day that God would open their eyes, but her prayer was not answered. She prayed for a second day and a third, but the kittens were still blind. The old woman persisted in prayer, according to her testimony. "I prayed for nine days that the poor little kittens might open their eyes and on the ninth day God heard my prayers and they SAW.

"Pray for our councilmen," urged Dr. Anderson. "If we pray for them, perhaps after a certain length of time they will open their eyes on the saloon question and SEE."

Politics Was Purpose of Union Service Held at Trinity Last Night.

8 PASTORS TOOK PART

Named Candidates They Want Supported—J. W. Gavett in Charge—Directions Given as to How to Register and Vote.

That members of the Plainfield Common Council who have voted for the granting of saloon licenses should be expelled from churches to which they belong was declared by the Rev. Phillip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, in his address to the big crowd that attended the union service last night when a campaign to elect no-license men to the Council was given the public sanction and support of local ministers and churches

Rev. P. B. Strong.

"A man who will vote for a thing like that has no place in a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic or any other church," declared Dr. Strong in the course of his bitter denunciation of the open saloon, and for a few minutes after this remark the high auditorium of the Trinity Reformed church rang with the vibrations of hands clapped in approbation, a sound seldom heard in that holy place on Sunday evening.

Practically every seat in the church was taken when the service started. They were pastors of eight separate local congregations on the platform, and others were prevented from attending by absence from the city, but are enlisted in the movement, which includes almost every Protestant church in Plainfield. Joseph W. Gavett, president of the Interchurch Association, under the auspices of which the meeting was called, explained that the purpose was to organize Christian sentiment in Plainfield so that a majority of members of the Common Council might soon be opposed to the granting of saloon licenses.

Rev. C. M. Anderson.

The ministers seated on the platform were, The Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Watchung Avenue Presbyterian; the Rev. B. S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist; the Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed; the Rev. E. C. Conover, pastor of Temple Baptist; the Rev. Philip B. Strong, pastor of First Baptist; the Rev. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E.; the Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian; the Rev. Howard E. Clark, pastor of the Congregational.

The speakers were not timid in approaching their subject. It was politics. Detailed directions as to the legal manner of registering and voting were given from the pulpit and the names of the candidates for whom they were seeking votes were called. It was Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, who read the names of the councilmanic candidates. They are: First ward, Frederick S. Cutter; Second ward, Charles E. Loizeaux; Third ward, C. Herbert Condit; [illegible] ward,

WILL SPEAK ON VALUE OF COMMUNITY WORK

Roland Haynes, of New York, to Explain Wide Scope of Recreation Movement.

Roland Haynes, commissioner of recreation in New York city, will make an address on "The Social Value of the Community Center," in the rooms of the Plainfield Board of Education, at the City High School, on Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Haynes was formerly field secretary of the Playground and Recreation Association of America and will be able to give a comprehensive talk upon the wide scope of the recreation movement. This is the lecture which was announced for last Thursday night by mistake.

As more interest is being taken each year in recreation work, much progress is expected here this year. New community centers will organize and athletics among men and boys will be extended here. Already four gymnasium clubs have requested the use of the school gymnasium. It is the aim of the local recreation committee to use all the gymnasiums and other rooms of the school buildings to their fullest capacity. It is expected that the attractive gymnasium in the new Evergreen Avenue School will be in great demand for basketball and class work. Competent instructors will organize the work in the various neighborhoods.

The horse, which started to run way, was stopped by Officer Robert Vance, who at the time the collision occurred was in the Campbell bakery next door to the Wheeler residence. Officer Vance ran out of the bakery and stopped the frightened horse in a clever manner. The horse and buggy belonged to Miss Loraine Corbin, of Bound Brook. Officer Harry Shugars, who has the habit of being around when anything happens, procured another wheel for the buggy and the young woman was able to return to her him in the conveyance.

COUNTY AUTHORITIES RAID CRAP GAME IN BOROUGH

The county authorities made two successful raids for crap shooters in the borough yesterday. They gathered in a number of men who were playing the game in the woods, just off of Columbia street, and then garnered in a number who were throwing the ivories in seclusion near the brickyard. One of the captured in the Columbia wood's raid fell head first in the brook as he was trying to make his escape, it is said. The names of the captured men could not be ascertained, the local police guarding them with secret. About town there was the report that a number of very prominent men in the borough are implicated.

THE RECALL FOR POSSIBLE STRIKE DUTY EXCITED BORDER TROOPS

Satisfaction Expressed When It Became Known That Legislation Would Prevent National Tieup.

Shower Baths a Camp Luxury. Humorous Items of Colorado Soldiers—Strategic Importance of Laredo.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S orders for the return of 15,000 militiamen from the border to states in which railway terminals are situated for possible use in protecting government property and upholding the laws in the event of a railway strike created a stir at the border camp. When it was apparent that no strike would be called there was considerable relief in camp.

Silk Pajama Soldier.

Although the majority of the boys are contented—in fact, pleased—to be able to sleep on cots in their underclothing and covered with army blankets, it remained for Bobby Mullen of Pittsburgh, the congenial little bookkeeper for the Keystone National bank, to set an example in the wearing of "evening clothes." Shortly after taps Bobby retired to his tent and donned a pair of clean, white silk pajamas. Bobby was subjected to good natured jibes because of his introduction of home comforts into camp life, but they surely have a good effect, for Bobby may be seen dashing across the parade grounds fifteen minutes before the rest of the troop has awakened.

"Major" A. T. Fagan of Homestead, Pa., who is the proud possessor of a scanty crop of blond hair, is the proudest man in camp because he recently received four cakes of castile soap from friends in Pittsburgh to keep his hair from becoming sunburned. "Major" says his hair is a valuable asset in winning the hearts of the fair sex in his home town, and as absence makes the heart grow fonder he hopes to have a busy season when he returns, and if he does not maintain his blond thatch the girls may have a hard time identifying him. So every day a regular barber shop shampoo is given his head in the hope that it will enhance his already manly appearance.

Queer Pets For Soldiers.

"Bird songs, more beautiful than I have ever before heard and more joyously voluble, lull the men to their siestas in camp here. The chief singers, the natives say, are mocking birds. They are gray, with white splashes of color in their wings, and never seem to be able to sing enough," says the New York Mail's McAllen correspondent.

"The Second Texas already has made pets of the wild creatures found near its camp. One Texas company has tamed a wild hog, known locally as a 'havelino.' It begs its lieutenant owner to come and play with it and fairly squeals with delight when he appears. It seizes his arm in its mouth, but never presses its tusks down hard. And it fights for its owner, rushing all others angrily as they approach.

"Two ducks have been pressed into drill service and taught to 'mark time,' stand at attention and at 'parade rest.' They follow their owner even on his visits to the New York camps and create no end of merriment. Horned toads held on leashes are common in both the New York and Texas camps, while ground squirrels, caught young and tamed, are beginning to appear as pets.

"The folks at home will no doubt hear some weird animal tales in their first batch of letters home. And here's some advice from the actual front: Believe the tales, however weird, for they are probably true."

Employers Ignore Pledge.

Many Minnesota members of the guard who were promised full pay or part pay by their employers when they were urged to enlist are complaining their employers have stopped their pay, and as a result many will probably have to apply for discharges because their military pay is not sufficient to provide for the needs of their families.

The Minnesota regiments, which are at Llano Grande, Tex., received their full quota of mules, about 120 to each regiment. With the exception of horses, the Minnesota brigade is ready so far as transportation is concerned, to take the field. The Minnesota artillery still has horses for only one battery, but animals for the other batteries are expected to arrive in the next two weeks.

I company of the Third Minnesota infantry, hailing from Crookston, boasts of a membership comprising about 50 per cent Canadians.

Credit for the success of the first review of the Minnesota troops since coming to Llano Grande belongs to Brigadier General Frederick Resche of Duluth. General Resche staked out the line of march not only for the Minnesota regiments, but for all infantry organizations in camp and located the position of each regiment. There was not a single hitch in the program, and General Resche was complimented by the regular army officers for his work.

Ham and eggs are the principal article of food served in restaurants hereabouts. The waiters serve so much ham and eggs that they think of nothing else.

Some Sad News.

The following sorrowful items were gathered in the Colorado camp:

Corporal George Cordingly, who makes $21 a month now, being one of the most hardworking and ambitious young men in camp, didn't have anything to spend his pay on except soda pop, knickknacks and chewing gum, and he waited so long for it. He saved part of it to take to the border with him, thinking it better to buy Mexican souvenirs than to waste it on unnourishing food and drinks.

Prunes were the dessert which the newspaper reporters had to eat if they ate at the officers' mess.

Captain G. A. Blanchard was seen bereft of his mustache, which bereavement should make it all the better for the mosquitoes on the border who take a liking to the captain's face.

Major A. W. Williams was seen drinking cocoa, a fattening liquid.

Rookie Rube Pratt of Siebert, being six feet nine inches tall, was being measured so's the war department could look around for a tourist sleeper to fit him.

Any soldier would feel sorrowful who had time for more than a year to get married and then didn't do it until eight days before the call to the border came, which is the case of Major W. Fuetcher, the well known bridegroom of the artillery.

Laredo Important.

That Laredo is considered second only to El Paso in strategic importance among the border towns is apparent from the number of troops being gathered there. A conservative estimate of those now in camp is 9,000.

Plans provide that this number will be increased from time to time. New quarters are in process of construction.

With the exception of the Second Maine Infantry regiment of Missouri, details of which are scattered up and down the Rio Grande on patrol duty, all of the men are encamped within a radius of three miles.

El Paso, of course, still leads in the number of troops in her encampments. Brownsville contingents of troops are not concentrated as at Laredo, but cover a great deal of territory along the river fronts, extending for many miles in both directions from the town.

St. Louis cavalry, Troop B, has moved from its congested quarters at Fort McIntosh to a new camp ground on Laredo heights. Though the work of erecting the tents, digging drainage ditches and latrines, building incinerators and shower baths had to be done all over again, the boys worked with a will, for the new location is the ideal camping site of Laredo and has been coveted by every aggregation of the national guard that has been brought here.

Immediately on their arrival the members of Troop B christened their prospective home Camp Butterfield, in honor of their captain, C. S. Butterfield. The modern conveniences are either at hand or are being installed. Water had been piped to the heights several days before the troop was moved. A street car line runs within a hundred yards of the camp, telephone service has been extended, and the installation of electric light in each of the tents is proceeding rapidly.

In contrast to the sand and dust of the lowlands the camp ground on the heights is green with grass. The temperature seems much cooler, and the absence of the frequent dust storms is a pleasing relief.

Shower Bath a Luxury

Shower baths will make a tremendous difference to the men of the Second brigade and auxiliary troops of the division at McAllen. It is possible to get some refreshment out of a bath taken in a zinc washtub, but it is a long, tedious process, and just now there is little use to be made of the irrigation canals that have been opened to the soldiers for swimming.

It is one of the sights of the camp to see the men coming into town for a bath in the early afternoon. Each man will have a towel and a piece of soap—usually tar soap—beneath his arm, and each heads straight for Fourth street, where the barber shop and the McAllen hotel are situated. The crowds about the bathroom doors for the rest of the afternoon block all passage.

One day the hotel sold forty-eight baths at 25 cents apiece. Allowing ten minutes for each bath, the room was in use for eight solid hours during the day. The next day the hotel's drainage system went askew and the bathroom closed. The groan that arose upon the news might have been heard for miles around. Later a battery of shower baths was opened as a speculation and became a gilt edged, guaranteed investment within thirty minutes.

When the camp shower baths are installed and in use much of this will change, of course. Then, it may be, the chief concern of the men will be when they will get new clothes. Just now they need them badly. They have been requisitioned, but they too are somewhere along the railroad. The rough work of establishing camp and the rains that have been of almost daily occurrence simply have played hob with the uniforms the men had to start with. Many of the men look more like coal passers coming up for a breath of deck air than they do soldiers from New York city.

LOCAL CITIZENS TO DECIDE WHETHER OR NOT THERE WILL BE SCOUT EXHIBITION HERE

Future of Boy Scout Movement Will Be Determined at Gathering This Evening—Infantile Paralysis Plague Hinders Plans—Representative Citizens to Be at Meeting Tonight.

At a meeting of representative citizens to be held this evening at the Y. M. C. A., the future of the Boy Scout movement in this city will be decided. It is to be determined at that time whether the boys of Plainfield coming into scout age are to have the benefits that those who are just leaving scout age have had for the last four years. The scourge of infantile paralysis and the consequent isolation of all scouts and troops this summer have combined to seriously interfere with the continuity of scout work to the extent of probably compelling the omission of the annual championship competition at Parker Field. It is these and other matters that must be decided tonight.

The National Headquarters will send a representative here to address the meeting. Allen E. Beals, former commissioner of the local Boy Scout movement, said this morning that the time is ripe for the people of Plainfield to decide whether or not the Boy Scout movemeent is worthy

"Four years ago the scout movement was started in this city with the organization of a small troop in the Y. M. C. A. by C. A. Bingeman, then boys' secretary, and Charles W. Bostwick. Mr. Bingeman is no longer in this city, having gone to larger fields of Y. M. C. A. work and Mr. Bostwick is in Honolulu. Mr. A. V. Searing, Jr., who has been responsible for the splendid practical progress of the Boy Scout movement here since its development, following the organization of Troop 5 in the First Presbyterian church, finds the requirements of the growing movement pressing increasingly heavy upon his time so that it has come to a point where Plainfield must decide whether the men who are willing to give their time and effort tothe personal direction of the scout troops without compensation of any kind, save only the pride and comfort of the knowledge that they are doing a good work for the boys of Plainfield, are to have adequate counsel and executive co-operation.

"There are thirty-three members of the Boy Scout Council in this city, including Mayors Calkins and Smalley. It is confidently hoped that a full representation will be present. During the early days of scoutcraft in this city the difficulty was to find scoutmasters. Today there are scoutmasters available but they need official local direction to the end that their endeavors can be directed along the accepted scout lines.

"There never was a time when there were as many troops nor as much need for scoutcraft as there is right now. A new class of prospective scouts is coming ahead. These boys have been patiently awaiting the time when they can be scouts. This summer they have attained the age of 12, that goal which will permit them to don the khaki and be a Boy Scout. Are the people of Plainfield going to let these lads be disappointed? Is it right to give the great tuition and help toward manliness and good citizenship only to the one set of Plainfield boys who are just passing out of the scout age?"

back East and the order to rejoin their tentmates came as a sad blow.

Lester Chandler and William Thomsen, two Plainfield boys with the First Field Hospital Corps under Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, are worrying over their college courses, having been refused permission to apply for college entrance discharges. Chandler is a student in the Boston 'Tech" and Thomsen is enrolled in Stevens. Both had planned to enter upon their studies this week and were assured several weeks ago that they would have no trouble in gaining releases. They are eagerly awaiting instructions from home and college, hoping against hope that the refusal to grant college entrance discharges means that the units are to return to the East in a body within a few days. Private Lyman Hibbard, of Troop D, is another college student, but he passed up his opportunity to gain a release declaring that he was down here to learn militarism and would sacrifice a year of college life, if necessary, in order to stick by his companions.

Troop D was enlivened yesterday afternoon by the receipt of three boxes of good things sent from El Paso by Hartley Mellick and Sherman Joost, who were on their way home. The boxes were addressed to Reginald Rowland, DeWitt Ivins and Percy Ransome.

The following promotions have been announced in Troop D: Sergeant Robert H. Cox to succeed Brown Rolston as top sergeant; Corporal Percy Ransome to succeed Sergeant Austin W. Andrews; Corporal DeWitt Ivins to succeed Sergeant James Brewster; Corporal Charles Fleming to succeed Sergeant Donald McGee, whose discharge is expected to arrive any day; and the following privates have been made corporals: "Gus" Fiske, Ned Cady, Roger Mellick, Edward Cook, Harris Rush and James Groushauser.

Harvest From One Ad.

Do you know what was the largest harvest ever reaped from an advertisement?

It was the settlement in Pennsylvania of 100,000 German colonists at Germantown, which was the first German settlement in America. We also know that in fifty years double that many thousand Germans came to William Penn's colony.

Furthermore, history tells us that wars and religious persecutions in Germany caused this then unparalleled exodus of men and women.

But what brought them to Pennsylvania and so made of this the German commonwealth? An advertisement written by William Penn himself and distributed among the Germans along the Rhine, who had been stricken by the Thirty Years' war.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Won by Good Looks.

One man in English history owed his success in life almost wholly to his good looks. It was George Villiers, first duke of Buckingham. James I. was wanting a private secretary, and when young Villiers applied for the position the king was much impressed with the beauty of his person and the gracefulness of his manners. He gave him the place, and that was the beginning of a great career. From that time to the end of James' reign the history of England was in great part the personal history of George Villiers, the adventurer—first the cupbearer, in a few weeks knighted, then made gentleman of the bedchamber and knight of the Order of the Garter; then successively he was made a baron, a viscount, an earl, a marquis and lord high admiral of England.

BOYS ON BORDER HOME FIRST

Spirit Seems to Have Struck All Guardsmen—Rush For Postoffice After Being Paymaster.

THINK OF WHEN PAID OFF

Stories of Interest Picked Up at the Different Camps Along the Rio Grande.

THOUGH miles from their loved ones, many of the boys at Camp Stewart, after being paid off in gold and silver, were granted leave of absence and went to El Paso, not to spend their money on a lot of foolish things, but to send it home. The thought of home first seems to have struck the boys all along the border.

All organizations of the Pennsylvania division utilize nearly every moment of the day. At the First cavalry camp, under John P. Wood, there is nearly always something doing. The men of Troop H of Pittsburgh, Captain Charles C. McGovern commanding, are slowly conquering the "bad" horses in the outfit. Private Frank R. Smith rode one of the unruly animals until it killed itself in an attempt to unseat him. Five Pittsburgh troopers are limping about the camp because of bruises received trying to conquer this horse. In attempting a back somersault it broke its neck.

The machine gun company, under Captain Charles W. Lloyd, participated in long target practice with the machine gun company of the Eighth United States cavalry, and the Pennsylvania men showed excellent improvement in the "sweeping fire" practice.

The signal troop of Pittsburgh, under Major Frederick G. Miller, also put in many hard hours. This organization conducted a division problem which includes much labor. It was a case of erect and pull down wireless stations and lay telegraph lines for a whole day. While the distance of the movement was only eighteen miles, perfect wireless communication was kept with division headquarters. Two wireless equipments were used.

Field Hospital No. 1 of Pittsburgh, under Major Arthur P. Schaefer, had a forty-eight hour hike in the Franklin mountains. The hike included much hard labor. To get over some of the steep grades wagons had to be taken apart and pulled up the mountains with block and tackle and the equipment packed on mules. The company met with no accidents.

Indiana Will Lose Battery.

The war department has notified Brigadier General E. M. Lewis, camp commander at Llano Grande, to make an investigation of the number of men that will be affected by the order relieving individual students and student bodies from military service on the border that they may return to their studies; also to ascertain what effect the sending away of the students will have on the different units.

It was found that Indiana would lose one entire battery, twenty-eight out of fifty in one company of infantry, an entire band and a large number from different units—so large that some of the Indiana outfits would be almost skeletonized. Colonel Leslie R. Naftzger of the First, Colonel T. R. Coulter of the Second and Colonel Aubrey L. Kuhlman of the Third, Major R. H. Tyndall of the field artillery and the commanding officers of the ambulance and signal companies, all urged that the order be revoked and that only men with disability and men who have dependent relatives be discharged.

This request of the war department is taken to mean that the students because they are students may not be sent home, because it will weaken the outfits and in a way will interfere with recruiting. The discontent against the student order still continues, and if the students are discharged for no other reason than because they are students the effect on the Indiana troops will be demoralizing. This is all set forth in the recommendations of the different commanders.

The discharge of men on account of disability also will deplete the Indiana units. It is understood that in the First Indiana there are forty who will be discharged for disability. Should all the students, all who have dependent relatives and those who are disabled, be discharged there will be about enough left for one full Indiana regiment of infantry.

Buffalo Boys Adjust Damage.

Troop I is back again at McAllen, Tex., the piece of soil alotted it by the government to help preserve peace on the Mexican border, and the Buffalo troopers are adjusting the damage done their camp by the gulf storm. The storm has subsided, and in its wake thousands of dollars' worth of property in this camp was left destroyed.

Troop I, however, did not suffer as severely as other organizations. They were fortunate enough to have their cook shack standing after the rain and wind had subsided. During the time the storm was raging the members of Troop I fed 300 other troopers whose cook shacks were blown down.

Discover Real Monte Cristo.

Members of C troop, Squadron A, who are temporarily on detached service as guard of a supply train near Monte Cristo, Tex., have struck an oasis in the culinary desert through which they have been wandering. Whether the rains will block the roads for the food trucks is a question which causes little worry in these days, and breakfasts of cheese and string beans are things of the past. The fact is that Monte Cristo has proved itself a center where the culinary art has reached a high state of perfection.

Monte Cristo formerly consisted of a twelve foot square railroad station, a combination postoffice and general store, a schoolhouse, a few houses inhabited by Americans and several shacks where Mexicans and their animals dwell in happy community. A short time ago some enterprising person decided to move a few of the houses together and so make a hotel, and so "there is a tavern in the town." At this hotel, called the Wander inn, the troopers have established informal headquarters, and they have turned it into a sort of club. The place has a wide, shady veranda, a large living room containing several real chairs, a table, a phonograph and a couch. In the yard is a rickety shower bath. Such comforts are irresistible, and all leisure hours are spent at "the club."

The matron de hotel is Mrs. Montgomery. She is assisted by her daughter-in-law. They are elderly, kindly women, with a decided religious bent, which led them to summon the Rev. Dr. Potts to preach a sermon to the soldiers, and a strictly pacifist sermon it was.

While the right hand is extended in cordial hospitality, the left is busy making lemonade at 5 cents a glass, and in putting the little pot into the big one to produce a "chicken dinner for six at a time." It may be in the cooking, it may be that hunger is the best of appetizers, but whatever be the reason there is no one who has partaken of this delightful mess who would allow that its equal exists in the north.

Those who are not so fortunate as to be accommodated at the hotel turn to the Mexicans for their dinner parties Nor are these Mexican repasts to be sniffed at. There are always hot buttered tortillas in abundance, a big bowl of gellina con arroz, a highly spiced chicken and rice stew, and generally friolets, Mexican beans, in some delicious form. The Mexican kitchen differs in essential respects from a typical New England kitchen, but one cannot be too critical, and these Mexican spreads are distinctly good.

After the Fly on Border.

Old Man Fly will have little place in the United States army on the Mexican border if Major General Funston and the medical corps officers of the southern department have their way about it.

The army officers in charge of the 98,000 state troops now along the international boundary have one object in view. That is to make the sanitary condition of the guardsmen as nearly perfect as possible and promptly to nail and refute all the yarns of poor food and bad surroundings the guardsmen write back to the folk at home and which the home folk immediately turn over to the town newspaper.

Steps already have been taken to court martial two Wisconsin privates who sent telegrams to Senator La Follette complaining of their food.

Following are some of the regulations distributed by Lieutenant Colonel Munson, medical corps, in charge of sanitation matters along the border:

All fresh meat, bread and vegetables will be inspected by a medical officer as to quality when issued. Food will be prepared and served in a cleanly manner. It will habitually be protected against sun, dust and flies. Company cooks and mess equipment and kitchen areas will be neat and clean at all times.

Individual mess kits will be cleaned at the cook tent immediately after use. Cooks will maintain a supply of hot water for this purpose. The keeping in the tents of uneaten portions of rations is strictly prohibited.

Fine Ham and Eggs, Though.

An officer of the Second Minnesota dropped into a restaurant the other day to buy a cigar, asking for his favorite brand.

"Sorry, captain, but we haven't any of them cigars," the negro waiter said. "but we've got some nice ham and eggs."

The boys of L company, First infantry, one of the St. Paul companies, are somewhat chesty these days, being the first company to respond to the first call "to arms" sounded in this camp.

Scorpion Becomes Friendly.

Cook McCormick of D company, First regiment, swears he will never change his clothes again. While dressing to put on a sumptuous spread for the company Sunday he found a scorpion had made a nest in his trousers. In the excitement of the moment the trousers fared almost as badly as the scorpion.

F battery of the First Minnesota field artillery, the University of Minnesota organization, has received from President George E. Vincent of the university a traveling library of 115 volumes of history, poetry and romance. As the university battery goes home in a couple of weeks, the university boys will find little time for reading.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

COUNTY P. O. OF A. HOLD MEETING HERE

National President and Many Delegates Attend Interesting Session.

The Patriotic Order of America of Union county held a district meeting in the lodge rooms of the local lodge in the Babcocb building Saturday night with members from all over the county present. Camp 69, of Elizabeth, and Camp 67, of Dunellen, had the largest representations and a report showed that during the year there has been thirteen new camps installed, with two more to be formed in the near future. The National Camp convention will be held in Baltimore on Octobr 18, with local delegates attending, at which time a president will be elected.

Miss Hannah Meyers, the national president, and a member of the Jersy City Camp of the order, was present at the meeting and gave a very interesting talk on the orphanages being established. The one at present maintained in Pennsylvania, she said, sheltered seventeen youngsters and was shortly to be turned into a national orphanage to be maintained by all the lodges. Several others among those present spoke, and after the meting a social hour was enjoyed in the banquet room.

Plainfield would have to respond. Like many other rumors of the kind which have been prevalent no one was willing to stand sponsor for this one, but Colonel Thomas D. Our week in camp last month put the men in shape for a quick mobilization."

ZEPPELINS TO BE USED FOR TRADE

Germans Building New Monsters of the Air.

SEEK MAIL CONTRACTS.

Huge Airships Will Be Used For Trade With Americas—Able to Cross From Hamburg to New York In Three Days—Chief Purpose Is Mail Carrying.

The newest and largest Zeppelins which the Germans are reported to be building in large numbers are not intended to be used primarily for war purposes, but rather as aerial merchantmen for trading with the Americas, according to Alexandre Liwentaal, for years consulting engineer to Count Zeppelin.

Mr. Liwentaal, who is a Swiss by birth, but a Britisher by naturalization, has worked at his profession as an aeronautical engineer all over Europe. He was with Count Zeppelin during the most critical period of the development of the Zeppelin at the Friedrichshaven works. Asked about Zeppelins and their future, he said:

"Zeppelins are not primarily built for war. The Zeppelins that have been sent to England were only intended to deceive the British as to the capabilities of the more recently constructed airships. The real Zeppelins are those of the type that have lately flown over Lake Constance. They are nearly as long as the Lusitania.

"These Zeppelins are built for the following purpose: Directly peace is signed, probably before, if the war is greatly prolonged they will depart for the United States with dispatches, mails and envoys who will be in reality commercial representatives. As they are constructed to alight on water and are independent of sheds, they will alight in New York harbor or similarly sheltered places.

"After they have landed their passengers and mails they will take on petrol and fly at a low altitude over the United States to Mexico and South America and thus advertise the commercial prestige of Germany, even if she be defeated.

Cross Atlantic In Three Days.

"The latest type of Zeppelin can fly from Hamburg to New York in three days and a regular service will be at once established. They will procure petrol as a steamer buys coal at the places where they alight in America, and whatever the conditions of the atmosphere may be, these giant Zeppelins can fly 280 days a year in safety. It is not generally known that, even today, a Zeppelin is a safer medium of travel than a steamship.

"The real aim of the Zeppelin is to obtain the aerial carriage of the world's mails. For years to come they will only carry a few passengers, who will pay large sums to reach some place ahead of all other means of communication and, of course, envoys and officials."

The following dispatch from Zurich has appeared in a London paper:

"Reports from Romanshorn (on the southern side of Lake Constance, nearly opposite Friedrichshaven) say that a giant Zeppelin has been seen from there making its first trials. This latest monster of the air differs somewhat in shape from previous Zeppelins. It is 320 yards long and weighs about twenty tons.

"It is fitted with seven powerful motors and is armed with machine guns, a cannon and with apparatus for launching bombs and torpedoes. The machine is capable of rising to a height of 15,000 feet, at which height it is believed it will be immune from danger from anti-air craft guns. It can travel a great distance. This monster Zeppelin has taken about eight months to build.

"From my own knowledge," continued Mr. Liwentaal, "I believe it to be correct that Germany is organizing, if she has not done so already, a service of submarines for mail carrying purposes to the United States. There are no great engineering difficulties in constructing boats of this description to cross the Atlantic.

Zeppelin's First Backer.

"The man who gave Zeppelin his opportunity was the king of Wurttemberg. He gave him the land for his factory and supplied him with all the money he needed. The popular belief that the kaiser was Zeppelin's backer is incorrect. Wilhelm II. did not take him up until his inventions were perfected. Then the kaiser conferred on Count Zeppelin the Order of the Red Eagle, but in reality Zeppelin owes everything to the king of Wurttemberg.'

COST OF BORDER ARMY.

Expenditure is Estimated at About $5,000,000 a Month.

The total expenditures of the United States army quartermaster at El Paso, Tex., for July were $2,448,415.89, and he supplies only the forces from Del Rio to Yuma, including General Pershing's forces in Mexico. It is believed by army officers that the El Paso expense is about as much as the other two districts combined.

This would bring the total expense of maintaining the army as it is now constituted on the border up to about $5,000,000 a month.

TROOP D OFF ON A FIVE DAYS' "HIKE"

Men Have Quit Believing Rumors as to Orders and Are Hard at Work.

(BY JAMES J. MacNAMEE.)

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 7.—It was made known definitely today that the entire remaining force of Jerseymen would participate in a ten-day hike within the next two weeks and as a prepartory move the commanders of the cavalry troops are preparing to send their men on a practice hike, Troop B going out today and Troop D tomorrow. The outing will take at least four days and rations enough for five days will be carried. Commanding officers will keep in close touch with the movements of the troops from camp here, and should any order be received from the War Department while the hikers are out they will be immediately recalled. Work of packing up for the start began today and it is certain that these two units will carry out the bivouac order. In the Fifth Infantry all attention is now being devoted to the plans for the big hike and the men are being conditioned for a sixty-mile hike, the exact destination of which has not as yet been made known.

Captain Frederick S. Rohrbach, of Company A, Fifth Infatnry, hailing from Passaic today took his men to the range to complete their practice shoot. Several of the men in this unit have given indications of expert material and the second visit to the range today is to make up for the time lost in last week's rainstorm, which overtook the men in the midst of their target work.

With the hikes a cetrtainty and range practice on yet ended orders were issued yesterday ordering the mess sergeants to build box stoves of the kind used for train travel at once. The El Paso and Southwestern railroad this morning piled up a dozen cattle cars on a siding oposite the camp, thus giving rise to the report that they were meant for the mules and horses of the militia.

Every inkling of information is of the haphazard variety. Not an ounce of credence is to be placed in any of the reports. One thing is certain, and that is that not a single man in camp, from the colonel down to the rawest recruit, knows the exact date on which the remaining units will quit this place, and it is fairly safe to conclude that the colonel is just as ignorant of the War Department plans as the enlisted men.

However, the official staff is of the opinion that the government will allow the troops to remain at Douglas upntil October 1, at least. Training of the finishing up variety has just been started and the officers contend that it would be mere folly to order a withdrawal of the entire brigade at this time. "Give us three weeks more and we will have a fine set of trained men to bring back to Jersey," is the unanimous opinion of the officers. In fact, they indicated today that they would be disgusted with the War Department should a return order go out at this time. The college students left here, and there are several dozen of them much disturbed over the order to discontinue applications for discharges on college entrance grounds. The men at first believed that this was done because the government intendeed to send the men all home before the fall term of college opened but in many cases the men are already a week late and they are writing to their homes and institutions of learning with a view to having higher authorities investigate the matter in their behalf.

STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE.

George T. Stewart, of 456 West Third street, is in Muhlenberg Hospital recovering from the effects of an acciden Saturday noon, when he was run into by an automobile driven by Wright Babcock, of Fanwood. Stewart was riding his bicycle on South avenue, near Berckman street, when he apparently lost his head at the approach of the car and swerved in front of it. Babcock took him to the hospital and agreed to pay the bills.

BICYCLE STOLEN.

Arthur Moore, of 60 Westervelt avenue, reported to the police yesterday that someone had taken his bicycle from in front of Laing's bookstore on West Front street about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week. Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Adv.

CHURCHES PLAN CAMPAIGN

Chauncey L. Hight.

The Rev. Dr. Clark, pastor of the Congregational church, opened the service with a reading of Scripture, and the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring offered a prayer.

In his introductory remarks Mr. Gavett explained that sixty-two per cent. of the country was dry, and that he believed Plainfield wanted to follow. The voters here have been treated like children, he said, in being denied the right to decide for themselves whether or not they want saloons. City officials deplore the move toward prohibition that is underway, and one of them recently asked why his friends wanted to "disrupt the party."

"If the saloon is disrupting the party," said Mr. Gavett, "then they ought to help us throw it out and settle the question forever, but they don't seem to want to do this."

Mr. Gavett told of other cities that had tried prohibition for years, one of them in New Jersey, and said that they found the new conditions better for citizenship. As Plainfield voters had been denied the right of a direct vote on the question they were going about it in the only manner left open to them.

George H. Batchellor, a resident of Plainfield for twenty-nine years, was proud of the city and its advantages, he said, all but the saloons. He called the licensed saloons "breathing places of hell" and "stink holes," and asked why the wise city officials and business men who advertised other advantages of the city did not advertise them as well, if they were advantages too.

Local option is an American principle, said Mr. Batchellor, and he added that forty-six States have such a law. The two that have not are Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The reason New Jersey has none is because the brewers and distillers control the legislative halls when one is proposed, he said.

In the final analysis the question of saloons is one that must be settled by the church people, and the responsibility for the presence of saloons rest on them, he said. He called attention to the fact that a majority of members of the Council who last year and the years before voted for saloon licenses were church members. "They argue that the church keep out of politics," said Mr. Batchellor. "It has here. I confess that I have kept out of politics, but I am ashamed of it, and I will not keep out any longer."

Christian sentiment has been responsible for every moral reform in the history of the country, the speaker declared, and he pointed out the anti-slavery law, the anti-gambling laws and white-slave laws as examples. Christian sentiment can close the saloons when it is awakened, and the "indifferent Christian" is to blame for the rum traffic. He urged that every Christian get busy and "vote as you pray."

"New Jersey is not an American commonwealth,' declared Dr. Strong in the beginning of his address. He referred to the absence of the right of exercising local option on the saloon question. Dr. Strong said that the people had been deluded by the false and wicked philosophy that the saloon is a necessity, but he declared that not even the undertaker profits from its operation in any community. "Its reasons for existence are as false as hell," he said. "The whole business is bred in hell." Instead of saloon the whisky shop should be labeled poison house, he said, and he quoted:

"Bar to Heaven,
Door to hell.
Whoever named it,
Named it well."

"The churches are in this fight to stick," ended Dr. Strong. "I hate the saloon, as every other minister and Christian hates it, and I am proud to be up here fighting for it. When all the saloons are finally driven out of Plainfield you wouldn't like to walk down the street and point out a church, saying it didn't help in the work, would you? Well, you shan't point out the First Baptist church!"

Dr. Anderson quoted the law of the M. E. church, which required the expulsion of any member who signed a petition for a saloon, rented his property for the sale of whisky or otherwise aided in the traffic. His address was in answer to the question, "Is it possible to make Plainfield dry?"

The first argument put up by the friends of the saloon, he said, was that hotels would not be able to do business without a bar and therefore salesmen coming here to sell goods to local merchants would avoid the town because of an absence of accommodations. In the first place, he said, a salesman handling a legitimate line of goods who would not come here to sell because the town was dry ought not to be invited anyway, and local merchants would not miss him, but even though all the hotels were to close there are enough respectable boarding-houses to care for all of Plainfield's visitors.

The argument that prohibition would not prohibit because "speakeasies" would spring up is answered almost every day in the papers, he said, when stories are printed of the conviction of "bootleggers" even under the best of regulation. A former councilman and holder of a higher municipal office not long ago said he would like to be mayor of Plainfield if it went dry to show the people that the law could be enforced, quoted Dr. Anderson, and he is in a position to know whether or not he would succeed.

If Plainfield goes dry there will be no need to fear that "our soaks will go over to North Plainfield to get their liquor," said the minister. He would not be surprised, he admitted, to see North Plainfield show its larger neighbor a lesson in this, and he knew two men who would be leaders in the movement there. They were the Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey and Mayor William L. Smalley. The names brought a second outburst of applause.

Plainfield is now collecting $12,600 in license from its four hotels, four saloons and three wholesale houses. They pay a little over $5,000 in taxes, making a total revenue from these places of $17,600, if the tax is included. He did not believe the tax should be added, as this would not be lost or even decreased if the saloons were closed forever. The cost to the municipality in officers' salaries and court fees is much more than this, he declared, and he quoted a city magistrate as saying that almost all the cases in police court were due directly to the open saloons.

Morally there can be but one side to the question, added Dr. Anderson, and he quoted a friend, "Any man who undertakes to argue for the saloon is a nut and ought to be in the bug house."

After giving the names of the men who are running for Council on a no-license platform, Dr. Anderson told his audience that if there was but one vote against the saloons in his precinct and ward they could be assured it was his.

A collection to help defray expenses of the campaign was taken.

FRANCE MUST REBUILD 3,000 OF HER RUINED TOWNS

Large Cities Outside War Zone to Be Godmothers of Stricken.

France has made preparations for the reconstruction of the towns and villages of the northeast, almost 3,000 in number, destroyed or seriously damaged by the German invasion. The large French cities which were untouched by the war have undertaken to act as "godmothers" to the stricken towns and communities. Lyons is ready to give maternal care to Lille if that afflicted city returns to the possession of France.

The famous Arts and Crafts college in Lille, obliterated from that city by the Germans, is being reorganized in Lyons and at the favorable hour will be restored to Lille. Paris will be the godmother for a multitude of towns.

Several cities are bidding for the honor of having Verdun as a foster child, as the great fortress city, though not captured, is badly wrecked, and Marseilles may be successful in this regard. Arras may be allotted to untouched Dijon, which has gathered in many refugees from that war wrecked city.

Meantime an exposition is being held at which great building and contracting corporations of France have presented models of new towns and villages which they will undertake to erect in a given number of days for a fixed sum of francs and centimes. Where hasty construction is needed these quickly erected models will be selected, a variety of plans being determined upon in view of the varied conditions of the centers of population to be replaced. A certain quantity of the quick construction work probably will be needed even in towns only partially destroyed, as the refugees are anxious to return to the sites of their homes at the earliest possible moment. More permanent structures can later on be put up at leisure.

One of the touching sights described at the Paris "reconstructed city" exposition is the crowd of refugees from the invaded region who go there. Many of them shed tears at the thought that these new model structures are to take the place of the quaint, irregular buildings that have been associated with their ancestors for generations.

Important consideration is given to the fact that immediately after the war there will be so much building to be done that labor will be exceedingly scarce, and it will be necessary for the time being to be content, in many places at least, with makeshift structures until sufficient numbers of workingmen can be found to attend to the building of solid houses. The factories and the government works will make a severe demand on the available labor of the country. Arrangements are already being considered for importing large numbers of Italians and Spaniards to assist in the reconstruction work.

Many of these will follow the advance of the French on the Somme front, as it is the purpose of the government to restore conditions as rapidly as possible.

What the Censor In England Has Held Up Until War's End.

The most interesting museum in London is closed to the general public. It is the museum of the censor, where various attempts to get past the blockade are exhibited. Its contents have come chiefly from the United States.

Among other things it contains:

A packet of pure rubber done up in the form of narcissus bulbs.

A pound of lard made to look like a newspaper.

A forty pound side of bacon sent first class mail from St. Louis, on which the postage was $5.

Letters written on sheets of pure rubber.

Shoes, some of them wrapped in sole leather.

Sausage shaped rolls made to look like bundles of newspapers, but containing in some cases rice, rubber, tobacco or sliced ham.

Two iron crosses addressed to an American child.

These bits of contraband are not confiscated but will be sent on when the war is over.

The Telephone In War

AN OFFICER OF THE INDIAN CONTINGENT OF THE BRITISH ARMY ON THE FRONTIER OF EGYPT PREPARED AGAINST A THREATENED TURKISH INVASION.

The European War has brought strange elements together, and curious contrasts occasionally come to the surface, in the writhing melee which is preparing for a new Europe by the destruction of the old. In The Telephone Review, N. Y., appears a page of photographs of which one especially is rich in the suggestion of these seeming distortions, anomalies which may be in the end but the symbols of the new times.

The picture shows a solitary turbaned figure with a telephone at his lips. He is an officer of the Indian contingent—a Hindu fighting for the British Empire. He is in Egypt, guarding it from the threatened invasion of the Turk.

The varied realms of association which are met in that solitary figure give pause to the most facile imagination,—India, the weaver of that dim curtain which hides the dawn of our civilization, the Pyramids, with their memories of science, art and conquest clustering around them, the fierce traditions of the Turk, the newer empire on which the sun never sets, and the youngest child of the western world, whose gift, the transmission of speech, stands ready to unite every continent and every people. Unconscious, the solitary turbaned fighter of the East, bends over the magic thing the West has given him.

The other pictures, all illustrative of the telephone in war, are less striking in their suggestion, though enlightening and interesting in the extreme. We see that the Italians behind their redoubts of sand bangs, keep the telephone wires humming, for news of the longed for order to advance. In the French army, the telephone stations are on the move, in spacious automobiles. The German policy of training the younger generation for war, extends to the use of the telephone. We see the boys being taught to make the telephone a part of their military equipment, the ability to instal instruments and lay wires at short notice under trying conditions being another necessary accomplishment in the art of war.

The wonderful demonstration of the value of the telephone in war is also a revelation of its value in the pursuits of peace, and those who have learned to depend upon it in the bloody conflict are likely to do so when the war is over.

It is a matter of supreme importance that the Republicans of this State should prepare the way for the election of a Senator whose ability, whose condition of age and health and whose political foresight shall make him eligible to continued service in the upper branch of Congress, says the Elizabeth Journal. It is even greater folly for a State to elect a representative to the United States Senate who is ineligible to continued service in that body than to elect one who lacks character and the qualities that make a statesman.

It is a strong, indisputable argument for the election of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen that he is in the very prime of life. He is 47 years old. His opponent is 70 years old. There is a vast difference in the powers of action and endurance in the strenuous life at Washington of a man of middle life and one of three-score years and ten.

In ability, in experience in business and political affairs, in party and public service, Mr. Frelinghuysen is fully understood to be the equal of his opponent. Mr. Frelinghuysen is the equal of Mr. Murphy in the qualities that make him eligible to serve a great State at Washington, although it is recognized that Mr. Murphy is an able, experienced and successful man. In training and in hereditary instinct Mr. Frelinghuysen is peculiarly endowed for service in the capacity in which he seeks service.

It must be recognized that Mr. Frelinghuysen represents these times of progress and independence in political affairs much better than his opponent. Mr. Frelinghuysen is known to be progressive and all his public life shows it. Mr. Murphy is known to be a confirmed reactionary and his political record of the past few years shows it. It is not true, as charged by some of Murphy's supporters, that their favorite has been a better party man or a better public servant that Mr. Frelinghuysen. It is men of such reactionary tendencies as Mr. Murphy who have blocked the way of the Republican party in recent months and years. It is such men as Mr. Frelinghuysen who have won the confidence not alone of good Republicans but of the independent element who are loath to claim party allegiance.

The States that have gained influence at Washington have been wise enough to continue in service their representatives in Congress who have shown character and statesmanlike qualities. New Jersey must not expect to take its place among States having dominant political influence and prestige until men are selected and elected to the Senatorial office who are not alone possessed of character and ability but who are young enough and strong enough in physical powers to serve the State more than one or two terms. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen is in every particular an ideal candidate.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOL SYSTEM.

In a recent issue of the New York Sun there appeared a supplement containing several interesting and instructive articles on the Catholic schools of this country. Prominent educators the country over expressed their views and the clergy was given a fair opportunity to express its ideas. The value of giving to the oftimes misinformed and too often easily fooled public a straightforward account of what the Catholic schools are teaching the young of the nation is realized. That patriotism is the very foundation of the existence of these United States of ours is a well known fact. To some it appears that the public schools of the country are the only schools in which love of country is taught. A glance at, not necessarily a thorough perusal of, the articles appearing in the Sun fully prove that patriotism is not only taught but is fostered in the Catholic schools of the nation. Conclusively was it proven that the parochial school system is just as efficient and just as productive of good citizenship as is our public school system, of which we are justly proud. Educationally, one system is equal with the other. There may have been times when the parochial system in one place excelled the public school system in the same place; and there may have been times when exactly the opposite was the case. Each system has the same end in view, i. e., the making of valuable citizens.

Today the eyes of the country are on Maine. The voters of that State, exercising their long established right of first voice in National affairs, are to decide the issues that confront the entire nation in the presidential election of this fall, and "as Maine goes, so goes the nation." This has been not altogether a hollow expression in the past and whether or not it will again be proven true, leaders of both parties have shown their belief in the effect of Maine's vote by sending their strongest campaign orators. It must be borne in mind that Maine is a normal Republican State, although the Republicans concede some offices to their opponents on local issues. Maine will be the first to decide to pass an opinion on the strength of Hughes as a campaigner, although a decisive Republican victory there could not be fully credited to him, as the Colonel also was heard.

It is said Carranza will demand not only that the United States troops be withdrawn from Mexican soil but that this country pay an indemnity of from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 because of the humiliation to Mexican power and honor that resulted from the punitive expedition after Villa. $200,000,000 for the "honor of Mexico." A nation that murders its own citizens and those of other countries that greed and lust may be satiated in the name of the flag. No American, or other foreigner who has gone through the horrors of the past few years in Mexico would honestly swear that the honor of the nation was worth more than $2.

There should be no need of calling to the attention of voters the registration of tomorrow. Those who did not vote in the last general election or who need certificates for other reasons must register or they will not be allowed to vote in the primary of this month. Issues that have been brought into fights for councilmanic nominations affect every voter of Plainfield, and every man who is eligible to cast a vote owes it to himself and his party to legally qualify.

The Sewin' Circle.

When any married feller tips his hat unto a maiden fair,
The sewin' circle hears of it and thrashes round and tears its hair.
A feller is a low-down brute to go and treat his wife like that;
They say he is a heartless flirt. The maiden is a little cat.
When any purty widder goes and buys herself a new silk dress
The sewin' circle hears of it within a day and starts to guess.
When any feller feels some flush and goes and buys an automobile,
They say, "Where did he get the price? No man could do it and not steal."
The sewin' circle is so good it cannot see a thing but harm,
It is so mightly-all-fired good that good ness seems to lose its Little Nature Stories.

"Sunny" Curtis has adopted a novel, though slow and rather tedious, albeit effective plan to annihilate the potato bug. Taking a pair of pincers he repairs to the potato field and seating himself in some likely looking place, placing a few potatoes on the ground about him. The potatoe bugs, scenting the feast, make for the potatoes when "Sunny" grabs them with the pincers and rejoices when he sees the fur fly. In this way he claims he can effectively rid his farm of that pest.

A lady in LeRoy, who requests that her name be not mentioned, is the owner of a lot of nice chickens that possessed an abnormal disposition to scratch, especially in her neighbor's garden. Not caring to shut the fowls up, she adopted a plan of taking a part of a shingle about two inches wide and twelve feet long, which she strapped on the feet of the chickens. This precludes the possibility of scratching, nor can they run very fast. But it is amusing to see how gingerly, yet stately, the stay and guide high, too.—LeRoy Correspondent in Tustin Times.

The Auto Foot.

The auto foot is a new disease
Which comes to folks who take their

And ride all day in limousines

The auto foot, they tell us, is

Which gives its victims heaps o'

And makes 'em howl with might and

- Proctor's Theatre -

At Proctor's Wednesday.

Two V. L. S. E. productions appear at Proctor's today, including a Vitagraph production, entitled "The Tarantula," with Edith Storey and Antonio Mareno playing the leading roles, and Lewis B. Stone and Marguerita Clayton in "According to the Code." In "The Tarantula" the man pays and the woman goes free. It is a refreshing change from the usual version, and it is presented in such a manner that we recommed it to the film fans as a subject which will satisfy them to the fullest extent. The cast contains four players whose work is exceptional, and we name them in the order in which they impress us: Edith Storey, Tony Mareno, Eulalie Jensen and Henry Hollingsworth. Miss Storey's rendition of the Cuban girl, whose wrong at the hands of a young American, and her subsequent murder of him, make up the central incident, is equal to her best, which is saying a good deal. Moreno offers a strong performance, and Miss Jensen is very impressive in a role which most actresses would have acted in a conventional fashion. "According to the Code" is a military play with a realistic atmosphere and Lewis S. Stone, together with Marguerite Clayton furnish an abundance of pleasing entertainment. Another feature today is the presentation of the second episode of "Beatrice Fairfax," the new serial creation with Grace Darling and Harry Fox featured. Tuesday is Triangle day, a Fine Arts feaure occupying a prominent position in the program. It is "The Devil's Needle," starring Norman Talmadge and Fully Marshall, and depicts both of these well known favorites in parts suited admirably to their talents. In addition Tuesday a Keystone comedy and the fourteenth episode of "The Secret of the Submarine" is provided. On Wednesday two five-part feature attractions will make up the photoplay entertainment. A William Fox production on the one hand, entitled "Sporting Blood" and featuring Dorothy Bernard and Glen White, and by special arrangement a Metro offering, entitled "Dorian's Divorce," with Lionel Barrymore heading a picked cast of talented artists.

BRUSSILOFF IS IDOL OF THE WHOLE RUSSIAN ARMY

Leader of New Offensive Gives Views of Commander's Duty.

A. A. Brussiloff, commander of the Russian offensive against the Austrian battle line, is sixty-four years old and looks forty-five. He took part first as a captain and then as a major in the Turko-Russian war of forty years ago.

"How old values have been upset," he said to M. Breshko-Breshkovsky of the Petrograd Bourse Gazette when he had told that enterprising journalist that he could not remain on the front, not even to welcome and write about the "new army."

"Take Skobeleff," he added, naming one of the most distinguished generals of that war. "Is it thinkable that an ostentatious, decorative general like that, galloping about at the front in a white uniform and on a white horse, should exist today? Possibly he would only last a quarter of an hour, for if the Germans fired a few volleys nothing would be left of the dashing horseman.

"In those days this splendid bravado had its object and meaning. It was an inspiration to the troops. But now, when everything has disappeared from the surface and been buried in the ground, Skobeleff could be seen by, at the most, two companies.

"That is not enough to justify the exposure of the life of the commander of an army to such danger. At the same time I am far from thinking that the commander of an army should merely sit at his headquarters or drive round visiting the staffs of corps and divisions.

"On the contrary, a commander must be visible at the front and under fire, so that the officers and soldiers may see him and 'feel' his presence and so that he may witness the actual circumstances of the battle. Only by these means can there be a living bond between a commander and the army."

A. A. Brussiloff, according to M. Breshko, lives by nerves, strenuous work and a sense of duty. He eats very little. He regards dinner as a necessary evil, and it is finished in not more than twenty minutes. Immediately after he goes to the adjoining carriage—workroom of his head of the staff and they are occupied together till late at night.

The soldiers worship him, says M. Breshko. He never courts popularity among them. He talks to them seldom and then with a matter of fact abruptness, yet "in his few words lies a knowledge of the soldier's soul, a skill in finding the direct road to the soldier's heart, which could never be taught, but which must be deeply rooted in the man himself."

A. A. Brussiloff's physical endurance at sixty-four is said to be amazing, even now one of the best cavalrymen in Europe.

SEEK TOWN TO TEST CURE.

Tuberculosis Prevention Society Has $150,000 to Spend.

Dr. D. S. Armstrong of New York, representing the National Association For the Study of Prevention of Tuberculosis, went to Massachusetts to search for a town of about 100,000 population on which to expend $150,000 for a scientific test in stamping out tuberculosis. Various communities in Massachusetts and New York state will be visited before the place is selected.

Discussing his quest, Dr. Armstrong said: "We want a town that has some industries, because tuberculosis is a poor man's disease. We don't want a town of commuters, as we could not keep track of them, and yet the town must not be too far removed from the large industrial centers."

Plainfield Theatre.

Elizabeth Jane With "Merry Rounders," Plainfield Theatre, Matinee and Night, Monday September 18th.

The new vaudeville bill at the Plainfield Theatre is a riot of fun from beginning to end. The opening show this afternoon was attended by a capacity house and each number was vociferously applauded at its conclusion. Of all the specialties that have been offered at the West Second street theatre in the past, "The Country Girls," a musical comedy, is a brilliant terpsichorean representation. The act contains ten pretty young woman enhanced with beautiful scenic backgrounds and gowns.

"Lonesome Corners," a comedy scenic sketch, is a scream from start to finish, and there is not a dull moment throughout its entire enactment. Gilbert Ward, the comedian, provides the audience with an unusual bunch of laughs, and presents them in a way that is all his own. "The Village Trio," high class singers of popular songs, add a refreshing bit of variety to the bill, their repertoire containing all the latest hits in popular songdom.

The entire program is lengthened out by a number of motion picture features. Prominent photoplay men and women are shown in the picture stories that please both old and young. A feature of the picture portion of the program is the Pathe Weekly, which depicts all the latest happenings in our own country as well as in foreign lands. The Plainfield Theatre is the coolest theatre in the city. Come early and stay as long as you like.

That First Day Off to School

His mother gave his hair a pat and put his hat on straight
And tucked his satchel in his arm and said to hold it tight.
Then, while the other children waited for him at the gate,
She kissed him, and we let him go, our eyes with pride alight.
Away to school, away to school! Our little baby boy,
That's never been away from us three hours before, to school!
We stood and watched him out of sight and smiled, but not with joy.
His mother cried a little bit, and I grinned like a fool.

For, oh, there is so much to learn, so much we grieve must be.
So much of sweet and sorrow and so much of right and wrong
We yearn to keep him sheltered, but we sadly know that he Must learn to vie with others or he never can grow strong.
Must learn the thousand lessons which the teachers never teach.
Must learn the elemental laws the elemental way.
Ah, yes; we know it's best for him, yet aching arms we reach
And wish we had our baby back, the one we lost today!

Her Sisters Rose Above Water.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Young Prince Made A Voyage.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

THE first thing daddy did after supper was to tell Jack and Evelyn a bedtime story about a young prince who set sail for his ladylove, although a little mermaid loved him and wanted to marry him:

"So the young prince had a handsome ship fitted out and a lot of courtiers to go with him. It was given out that he was going on a voyage of discoveries. But the little mermaid shook her head and laughed. She knew what was in the prince's mind far better than any of the others.

"Finally the prince said to her: 'I must take this voyage in order to meet a beautifnl princess. My parents demand it, but they can never force me to bring her home as my bride. I can never love her. She will not be like the lovely girl in the temple who saved me after my shipwreck and whom you so much look like. If ever I have to choose a bride I would rather it would be you, with your sweet, speaking eyes, my dumb foundling!'

"And the prince kissed her rosy mouth and played with her long curls. He was very sad about his voyage, and he laid his head on the little mermaid's breast to be comforted. Underneath beat her heart that was always dreaming of earthly happiness and an immortal soul.

"'You are not frightened of the sea, my dear dumb child?' he finally asked the little mermaid. They stood on the proud ship that was to carry them to the land of a neighboring king, and the prince told her stories about calms and storms, about curious fish in the deep and the marvels seen by divers, and she smiled at his tales, for she knew far more about the bottom of the sea than the prince did.

"That night in the moonlight, when all were asleep but the helmsman, she sat at the side of the ship trying to pierce the clear water with her eyes. She fancied she saw her father's palace and above it her old grandmother with her silver crown on her head. She imagined her grandmother was looking up through the cross currents toward the keel of the ship. Then her sisters rose above water and sadly looked at her, wringing their white hands. She waved her hand to them and beckoned. She wanted to tell them that all was going happily with her on land. Just as she beckoned the cabin boy appeared and frightened the sisters so that they dived. But he thought the white objects he had seen near the ship were only bits of sea foam."

"Oh, daddy," cried Evelyn, "next time we go to the seashore won't you please find a mermaid for us?" And daddy hugged her.

Training a Husband

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

The Neighbors Plan to Make Life Pleasant for the Southys.

"What a dear little woman she is," said Olive Ellson as she and Nell Borton closed the Southy gate behind them. "I like her better every time I see her."

"She has such poise. I wonder if she ever loses her temper. I'd give anything to be able to keep as calm and agree with my children as she does, and she has four to make constant demands on her," agreed Nell.

"She certainly is lovely to them. I wish I could say the same about Mr. Southy. He seems such a disagreeable, irritable sort of person." Olive helped Nell across the street with her baby carriage.

"Perhaps living with him has developed her patience," laughed Nell.

"I certainly think one would acquire a large stock of the virtue to live in peace with him; yet Gaylord says he is a pleasant enough man among men." said Olive thoughfully.

"Probably he is one of the men who take out all the worries that they run foul of on the innocent members of his family. Such a contemptible thing to do!"

"Do you know that woman is working herself to death there. She never goes anywhere. You noticed she apologized for not returning our calls, saying that she went nowhere. I am glad we stopped in without waiting for her to come." Olive assited Nell through the gate.

"Come in to supper," she insisted. "I will call up Dick and tell him where to find you, and I see Hal now in your yard. I'll call him." She suited the action to the word and the fer his activities to Marjory's nursery.

When they were all seated around the pleasant supper table the Southys were again the subject of conversation.

"Why not invite them over to dinner?" asked the hospitable doctor.

"I'll do that, but what that little woman needs is to get away from the children a little while. It is killing on a mother never to be free from responsibility, but there is no one to leave them with. Who has something to suggest?" asked Olive.

Nobody spoke. "I want them to join our little neighborhood circle, but when I spoke about it this afternoon she said at once that it would be impossible for she could not leave the children alone," continued Olive.

"I have it," sang out the hearty voice of the doctor. "There is old Mrs. Fisk. I believe she would go and sit with the children for an evening. They would be all in bed, I suppose, and so make her no trouble."

"I am afraid they would not be able to pay her and she could not be asked to do it for nothing. Four children is a large family to take care of on what they pay a school superintendent here," said Nell.

"Oh, I could fix that all right," was the doctor's cheerful reply. "Mrs. Fisk is frequetly wanting a little medicine for her rheumatism and I would ask it as a personal favor and square up that way."

"They would not like that, I think," objected Olive.

"They never need know about it. I will tell them of an old woman who will sit with the children and nothing more need be said about it," replied the doctor.

"That is like you, Gaylord." Olive looked lovingly at her husband. "Then we can make the arrangement when they are over here to dinner. I'll invite them right away."

"It makes a wonderful difference in the ability to keep going, if a woman can forget her household cares for an evening once a week or two. It is a very pleasant remedy and costs nothing usually if the husband is awake to the facts of the case and is willing to take the trouble to make necessary arrangements." The doctor passed his cup for more tea.

"I am afraid Mr. Southy is not awake to his responsibilities," sighed Olive.

"We must try to wake him up then. That is what neighbors and friends are for." laughed the good-natured man.

"I do not believe there are many little towns where the neighborly interest is exerted to make everybody happy. I used to resent the interest every one took in my affairs. Now I like it. I know it is not meddlesome; just friendly." Dick helped himself to another biscuit.

MAROONED ON ICE STRIP, MEN FACED STARVATION

Survivors of Shackleton Expedition Snatched From Jaws of Death.

The marooned members of the Shackleton south polar expedition would have died of starvation by November had they not been rescued by the relief expedition Sir Ernest Shackleton guided to Elephant island, according to advices from Punta Arenas, Chile.

Their supplies were reduced to matches and salt. All their food was gone. They had been living for weeks on seals and pehguins. Their faces showed their sufferings.

The Yelcho, the relief steamer, narrowly escaped being crushed by the ice many times. From a point seventy miles south of Cape Horn the ship was in constant danger of colliding with ice floes. Several small icebergs crashed against the vessel's sides, loosening her plates and at times threatening to inclose her in a pocket. But after sighting Elephant island Captain Pardo swore he would succeed in the rescue work or die in the attempt.

Even after the ship had arrived within a few miles of Elephant island the men marooned on a narrow strip of ice were ignorant of its approach, a heavy fog hiding the Yelcho. Their first knowledge that a ship was approaching came from blasts from the Yelcho's siren.

The Yelcho ran close in shore, and small boats went to land. The marooned men came aboard with tears of joy streaming down their faces, shouting "Viva Chile!"

AIR MAN TELLS HOW HE WRECKED ZEPPELIN IN SKY BATTLE

The following story was told by Lieutenant W. L. Robinson of the British royal flying corps, to whom King George awarded the Victoria cross after he shot down a Zeppelin during the last raid over London:

"I had been up something over an hour when I first saw a Zeppelin. She was flying high. I followed, climbing to get a position above, but in the heavy fog she escaped me.

"I attacked at long range, but she made off before I could see if any damage had been done.

"I determined that the next ship I saw I would attack from the first position I found. I met her just after 2 o'clock. Soon she appeared to catch fire forward in her petrol tank. The flames spread rapidly along the whole body. She made off to the eastward afire. In a few minutes she dipped by the nose and dived slowly in flames to the earth. I was so pleased that in my excitement I looped the loop several times and then showed my signal to stop firing and came back."

A TRAIN FOR MADEMOISELLE'S EVENING GOWN.

Lace Used to Great Extent on New Evening Gowns—Bodices Sheer—Featuring Sleeves.

By Mary Glynn.

Evening gowns will no doubt take on an entirely new aspect this fall, for they will be much more dignified than the fluffier, frilly things that have been shown. A train is evident on many of the smartest models, and this is either arranged in court effect or the conventional manner. Especially notable is the use of lace in deep all-over in rich patterns. White, black, cream and metal lace is used on many. This being in combination with or veiling metalized silk. Silk net and exquisite brocades are also shown, and these in luxurious metal brocaded patterns. One very distinctive gown is shown in dull gold. The shimmering beauty of the gold metal cloth foundation is evident through the net over-skirt. Gorgeous silk and metal lace drops from the waistline in tunic effect, accentuating the richness of the combination. The bodice is extremely simple with deep crushed girdle and shoulders just veiled with silk net. The corsage is an exquisite combination of buds and foliage in soft rose and gold tones.

SEPARATE COATS ATTRACTIVELY FEATURED.

Most of the Top Coats Are Three-Quarter or Skirt Length—Loose Ample Lines.

By Mary Glynn.

Since the separte one-piece frock has already shown signs of being a favored item, it follows that as the season goes on the top coat will follow in close pursuit. For this reason, though it is a bit early to be concerned about them, it is well to know the trend of fashion. The most evident note is the fact that the majority of these coats are three-quarter or skirt length. Most of them show ample fulness, measuring from three to four yards. The lining in most instances is throughout, though in the very heavy mannish materials it is only waist high. Distinctly interesting are the collars. Though many of them roll up about the chin as last season they are more or less sedate looking, not the coquettish "Chin-Chin" affair of last year. Very often they broaden towards the shoulder forming shoulder or cape collars. The trimmings vary—being often buttons of self material or novelty bone affairs. Fur is invariably used, whether it be on the convertible collar or not. Silk stitching is undoubtedly one of the most favored types of trimming. This is shown in some of the most ristinctive models developed in self or contrasting color. To sum up—coats will be long, full pockets, and furtrimmed.

OLD SPIRE MUST GO.

Was Guide to Sea Captains For Many Years.

The spire of the old Congregational church at Greenwich, Conn., one of the landmarks in Connecticut and a guide by which captains of sound vessels have been accustomed to steer for years, must be torn down.

The edifice, located on the highest point of land between New York and New London, was "Adirondack" Murray's old church. Its members, said to comprise the wealthiest congregation in the state, have been forbidden to worship there by experts, who have condemned the structure.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of careless efforts to render the best service.

EDDIE BERGEN'S SINGLE IN THIRTEENTH SETTLES ISSUE IN TAB-DUNELLEN TILT

Both Johnny Dixon and "Mickey" McFadden Do Well as Hurlers—"Red" Grimes Performs With Abstainers—Large Crowd Witnesses Contest.

The first of a series of baseball games between the Tab and Dunellen Sunday baseball teams was played on Avon Oval yesterday afternoon before one of the largest crowds that ever witnessed a ball game in this vicinity. After thirteen innings of tight playing the Dunellen team secured a victory, the score being 5 to 3.

The Dunellens started off with a rush. Gunzelman was out via the Mullin-Hannon route. Lou Brown doubled and was followed in the hitting art by Trust, who singled, Brown scoring. Trust scored also. The visitors also scored in the ninth session, Bergen bringing home the bacon on this occasion.

The Tabs obtained their tallies in the seventh and ninth innings. In the stretch frame, Wall singled and was brought across the pan by McCartys double. "Mickey" scored on McFadden's single. Three successive singles in the ninth frame produced another run for the Tabs.

Eddie Bergen ended the game in the thirteenth, when he singled to left, scoring Trust and Jack Wilson.

GEORGE ORTLEB SHINES IN WESTFIELD WIN

Dunellen's Record of Twelve Consecutive Victories Broken by "Gawge."

In a game played on Maurer Oval Saturday, Westfield defeated Dunellen to the tune of 2 to 1. The game was featured by the fine all-around playing of Ortleib, the Westfield pitcher.

In the third inning Hunt struck out, but Ortleib, the next man up, doubled to left. Gilmartin fanned and Greene and Davies followed with successive bunts, which they beat out, Ortleib easily scoring. Harney fanned the side by making Young whiff the ozone.

Westfield scored again in the sixth. Greene beat out a bunt, Davies fanned, Young singled, sending Greene to third. Crutterdon struck out; Maranghi beat out an infield hit, scoring Greene, and again Harney retired the side on strikes, by fanning Martin.

Dunellen scored its only run in the ninth inning. Brown doubled over Martin's head, and stole third as Hunt dropped the ball and when Hunt's throw got away from Davies he scored. Wilson walked on four bad ones, Gilmartin made a fine stop of Dixon's bid for a hit and forced Wilson at second, when Bergen in turn forced Dixon at second. Gunzelman went in as a pinch hitter for Randolph and sent up a pop fly to the second baseman.

Next Saturday the Royal Giants will play at Dunellen.

SCOREBOARD KEEPER EXTENDS INVITATION

Fans Are Asked to Take a "Peep" at Results Posted at Press.

The following invitation to fans is printed just as "she was wrote" by the youthful scoreboard operator of the Press:

"The scoreboards of the Daily Press are up-to-date, legible and correct. They are up at the time that they are in on the ticker, (Stock Quotation) and the fans that look at them will not regret that one look that they gave the boards. Espacially at this time race for the National League Pennant is very exciting, inasmuch as is the race in the American League. From five to eighty years the fans range in age. Nevertheless, age does not count in this sport as everybody should know about it as it is the National Game It is exercising, a nerve tonic, and healthful. If the fans that come would bring a couple of others along the scorekeeper would appreciate this very much. It would encourage him very much to keep the scores up in the best manner possible."

MINOR WORLD SERIES.

The Central League baseball season closed Saturday with Dayton winner of the first half of the season and Springfield the last half. Dickerson arrangements have been completed for a post-season series which will start next Wednesday at Springfield and in alternate cities thereafter. World's series rules will govern the games and the team winning four games will be champion.

"CHICK" EVANS WINS OVER BOB GARDNER

Westener Dethrones Gardner 4 up and 3 to Play on Links.

Two men came out of the West, champions, both—to struggle for the blue ribbon of golf in the final grapple at the Merion Cricket Club Saturday. When the deciding putt had been laid so close to the cup on the fifteenth green as to leave no further doubt as to the outcome, one of these two men, Charles Evans, Jr., had emerged daddy of them all.

In at least realizing the goal that for more than a decade he had been rainbow chasing, the genial "Chick" with a persistency that would not be denied, dethroned Robert Gardner, last year's winner, 4 up and 3 to play, over the thirty-six hole course.

Now Evans wears the double crown, amateur and open. What more could mortal golfer desire?

Already the holder of the open championship, which he won at Minneapolis in June, he is the first player of either America or England to capture both national titles in the same year. Harold Hilton and Jonn Ball, English amateurs, won both titles, but both in different seasons, while in this country Francis Ouimet and Jerome Travers have won double honors, but at different times.

LIFE OF THE GUNS.

It Depends Upon How Long the Linings Can Resist Erosion.

The life of a gun depends upon the progress of erosion, which sooner or later is certain to impair the accuracy of fire. Erosion is caused by the action of the explosive gases at high temperature and pressure.

According to the Iron Age, the hot gases cause a thin film of steel to absorb heat. The film expands and becomes set. Upon the release of the pressure it contracts, which causes minute cracks that grow larger with every discharge. As they increase in size they form passageways for more hot gas, and that tends to enlarge them still further. The inner surface thus becomes roughened and the bands begin to corrode. Finally the bore becomes so enlarged that it allows the gases to escape. The shell does not then acquire its proper rotation, and its flight becomes erratic.

All guns except small ones are now constructed with linings in the tube which, when the bore is worn out, are removed and replaced by new ones. The cost of relining a gun is approximately 30 per cent of the cost of the gun. There appears to be no limit to the number of times that a gun can be relined.

The small arms used in this country are considered to be worn out after 5,000 to 7,500 rounds have been fired. Small naval guns can be fired about 1,000 times before they are regarded as worn out. Large twelve inch and fourteen inch naval guns are considered to have a life on one lining of from 150 to 200 rounds.

Low velocity guns, such as howitzers and mortars, have correspondingly longer lives than high velocity guns of the same caliber, because the pressures they develop, and hence the temperatures, are lower.

Use of "a" and "an."

Do most educated people say "a unique example" or "an unique example?" In deference to the rule they probably write "an," but if you notice their pronounciation, when they are talking naturally and not thinking of how they pronounce, they will almost invariably say "a." And this is quite natural, for "unique" begins with a consonant. It is pronounced "yuneek." Similarly most people say both "a history" and "a historical fact," unless they drop the consonant "h" and say "an 'istorical fact."—London Chronicle.

Unforeseen.

Helen was attending her first party. When refreshments were served she refused a second helping to ice cream with a polite "No, thank you," although her look was wistful.

"Oh, do have some more ice cream, dear," her hostess urged.

"Mother told me I must say "No, thank you," exclaimed the little girl, "but I don't believe she knew the dishes were going to be so small."—New York Post.

LOCAL MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY IN TOMMY MULLIN'S PITCHING ABILITY

Highlander Scorer Says Tommy Hurled "No Hit" Game—St. Joseph Man Figures Differently—Wordy Dispute is Likely to Follow.

"Tommy Mullin hurled an eleven inning no hit, no run game on Saturday." So says the Highlander scorer. The St. Joseph scorer differs. He says Tommy allowed one hit. At any rate, the Highlanders trimmed the Saints, 1 to 0, taking eleven full innings in which to do the stunt.

Two scores of the game have been submitted to us. Each score arrived at about the same time—at least they were on hand before we were. Rather than get ourselves "in Dutch" we tossed up a coin in order that we might decide which score to use. The Highlanders won the toss.

Oscar Dilts hit a slow bounder to Tone Denny, who was playing first. Tone did not field the ball, although he says that he touched it. Frank Brennan "backed" Tone and after a fumble stopped the ball, but his effort was wasted as far as catching Dilts was concerned. The play was an easy one for Denny, who should get an error. Brennan's fumble would have been disregarded. But the Highlander's scorer gave "Kid" the error and allowed Tone to go unmolested. Therefore, the Saints believe that they have a "kick." Anyway, Tommy hurled a brilliant brand of ball.

MONSTER BLUE WHALES.

The Most Gigantic Creatures This World Has Ever Known.

It has been said that the first duty of a whale is to be large. The blue whale is then the most successful whale, for it is the largest creature which has ever existed on the earth or in its waters. Even those extinct giant reptiles, the dinosaurs, which splashed along the borders of the inland seas of Wyoming and Montana 3,000,000 years ago, could not approach a blue whale either in length or weight.

In 1903 a blue whale was weighed in sections at Newfoundland. The animal was seventy-eight feet long, thirty-five feet around the shoulders, the head was nineteen feet in length and the tail sixteen feet from tip to tip. The total weight was sixty-three tons. The flesh weighed forty tons, the blubber eight tons, the blood, viscera and baleen seven tons and the bones eight tons.

Exaggerated accounts of the size of blue whales are current even in reputable books on natural history, but the largest specimen which has yet been actually measured and recorded is 187 feet long, stranded a few years ago upon the coast of New Zealand. It must have weighed at least seventy-five tons.

Whales are able to attain such an enormous size because their bodies are supported by the water in which they live. A bird is limited to the weight which its wings can bear up in the air. A land animal if it becomes too large cannot hold its body off the ground or readily move about and is doomed to certain destruction. But a whale has to face none of these problems and can grow without restraint.

Because whales live in a supporting medium their young are of enormous size at birth, in some instances the calf being almost half the length of its mother. I once took a twenty-five foot baby, which weighed about eight tons, from an eighty-five foot blue whale.—Roy Chapman Andrews in New York Independent.

MYSTERY OF MERCURY.

An Unknown Factor That Causes the Planet's Erratic Motion.

The planet of Mercury is the smallest of the major planets and the nearest to the sun, which it circles in a little less than three months. It reaches its greatest distance from the sun at periods about sixty days apart. During the year Mercury is morning star three times and evening star three times. Owing to its nearness to the sun it is never visible for more than a period of about two hours after sunset or the same length of time before sunrise.

The eccentricity of its orbit is greater than that of any other major planet; its greatest and its least distance from the sun differ by nearly fifteen million miles. According to A. W. McCurdy of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, the most remarkable characteristic in the motion of Mercury is that when it is nearest to the sun it travels faster than it should if it moved only by the attraction of the known bodies of the solar system.

Astronomers have long sought an explanation of the accelerated motion. Some believe that there are other planets at present unknown between Mercury and the sun—bodies that although numerous are too small to be seen. The movements of Mercury indicate an influence that might be accounted for by the presence of another planet revolving within its orbit. If such a planet really exists, there should come a time when it will appear as a dark spot moving across the face of the sun.

Another way to detect the presence of new planets in the vicinity of the sun is to take observations during a total eclipse. If there are no clouds at such a time the stars become visible as the sun disappears. During the total eclipse of the sun in 1878 one observer saw an object that he thought might be the long sought planet, but no other astronomer has been able to confirm the discovery, and many now believe that the hidden source of the unusual movement of Mercury must be looked for elsewhere than in the orbit of the planet.

LET HIM MAKE THE SALAD.

And Let Him Hunt For the Ingredients, Too, Says a Woman.

Newspaper comment to the contrary there still remain a few accomplishments in which a man may excel a woman, and, oddly enough, one of these is salad making! Indeed, there seems to be in the masculine character, psychologically speaking, it may be supposed, something that makes the concocting of salads a man's special genius in the way of humble skill.

You know the requirements for a good maker of salads—"A miser for vinegar, a spendthrift for oil and a madman to do the mixing."

And there you have it. A woman is too careful, too considerate, too conventional, too much hampered by details. But give a masculine lover of good salads congenial company, full liberty in the use of oil, vinegar and pepper and the freedom of your refrigerator, and you may trust him to produce a masterpiece.

First of all, your salad master enjoys the making of his dish. He puts into it the conviviality of good comradeship and the zest of adventure. He much prefers an exploring expedition in search for his ingredients and some dubious uncertainty as to the result of his efforts to a cut and dried sureness of means and methods. The result is a surprise which, as we all know, is one of the first aids toward good appetite.

Next, a man does not want culinary folderols. He is hungry, and he wants his salad to furnish him something to eat, so he puts into it plenty of oil and good substantial vegetables and green things. He likes to eat; he likes adventure and uncertainty; he likes piquancy and pepper; he likes a vigorous way of doing things. Let him make your salads.—Anne Rankin in Southern Woman's Magazine.

Traveling With a Cello.

Traveling with a cello is as uncomfortable as traveling not only with a baby, but with a donkey. Unless indeed you have an instrument with a convenient hinged door in the back so that you may pack it full of traveling necessities—MSS., and so forth—thus dispensing with a bag, or unless you can cork up its "f" holes and use the instrument as a canoe on occasions a cello is about as inconvenient a traveling companion as the corpse in Stevenson's tale which would insist on getting into the wrong box.—Musical Courier.

Curious Superstition.

The ancients believed that the marrow contained in the human backbone often transformed itself into a serpent.

Pliny ("Natural History," volume 10, page 66) says that the marrow of a man's backbone will breed to a snake. The Chinese (Worde's "Eastern Travels") burned the backbone to "destroy serpents that might hatch therefrom."

Queer, but True.

"It's a queer world."

"Why?"

"Stand up and say that riches don't make for happiness and everybody will agree with you heartily."

"That's so."

"And everybody will go out and keep right on trying to get rich."

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented indiciously

GREEK CABINET RESIGNS; EXPECT KING WILL LEAD ARMY INTO WAR

Venizelos to Rule Policy of Country in the Future.

SERBIAN DRIVE IS ON

Armies of Seven Nations Launch Attempt to Cut Turkey Off From Germany — Bulgars Evacuate Greek Ports.

Paris, Sept. 12.—The Greek cabinet headed by Premier Alexander Aimis has resigned, according to an official announcement made by the Consul here today. This clears the way for the return to power of former Premier Eluthelos Venizelos and probably means that Greece will enter the war on the side of the Allies within the next twenty-four hours. Venizelos has been the staunch supporter of the Allies and leader of the movement to align Greece with those opposing the Central Powers. It was he who gave authority for the landing of English and French troops at Saloniki months ago.

Queen Sophia.

Her country will soon declare war on her brother. Her husband, King Constantine of Greece, is to be named commander-in-chief of the forces fighting against the Germans in the Balkans. Queen Sophia is a sister of the Kaiser.

Reports from London that King Constantine has resigned to the inevitable and will lead the Greek army in person are given credence here. It is even rumored that he is to be named as commander-in-chief of the entire Allied armies in the Balkans. With Preminer Zaimis out of the way and Constantine won over nothing can prevent the entry of Greece into the war.

Furious fighting is going on today on the whole of the 120 mile front on the Greece-Serbian and Bulgarian frontier, and it is announced that the big drive of the Allied armies to cut the railway between Berlin and Constantinople is actually underway. In this drive into Bulgaria and Serbia there are enlisted soldiers of France, England, Russia, Serbia, Italy, Montenegro and Roumania and Greeks will soon be added, it is believed.

Bulgars Give up Kavala.

Bulgarian forces have evacuated all the forts at the Greek sea port of Kavala which they occupied last month, according to information received by the Petit Parisian from semi-official quarters.

Artillery Busy on Somme.

London, Sept. 12.—Military operations on the Somme front have been confined to the artillery, the British war office announced today. A German ammunition depot was twice set on fire by the British shells.

Submarine Captures Steamer.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The Admiralty announced today that a German submarine had captured in the North Sea the Dutch motor steamer Zeelandia while, carrying contraband from Rotterdam to London.

Another Protest to England.

Washington, Sept. 12.—It was declared today that a protest will be made to Great Britain because of the holding up and examination by a British torpeo boat of the Philippine steamer Sebu within teritorial waters. Gov. General Harrison telegraphed a report of the incident to the War Department and the message was placed in the hands of of-

HARRY J. CENTER TO BE BOYS' DIRECTOR

New Y. M. C. A. Official Will Begin Work September 15.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Plainfield has called Harry J. Center to be the new secretary of the boys' department. Mr. Center comes to this city with a splendid experience in Y. M. C. A. work, and a record of achievements in fields where he has labored that any one might well be proud of. He was born in the New England town of Gloucester, Mass., about thirty years ago. As a high school lad, he worked during spare time in the association and entered the work as boys' department secretary for the Gloucester Y. M. C. A. in 1905. From there he went to the Newark, New Jersey, Association in 1908, where he stayed for a year as associate to Ivan P. Flood. In 1909 he was called as boys' work director at the Prospect Park Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, New York, remaining there for six years. In this field he did a very creditable service to the boys of all ages in that community and built up a strong boys' department. Glowing reports have been received from those who were associated with him.

Plainfield has called Mr. Center from Jaynesville, Wisconsin, where he has been during the past year. The official State reports from Wisconsin indicate a well organied work well begun; a membership of sixty-five increased to three hundred and eighty-four; State camp conducted by Mr. Center; athletics, Bible study, social life, all in a most healthy condition.

Four years at the Silver Bay Y. M. C. A. Training School has been and will continue to be a large factor in the success attending his efforts

He will begin his work in Plainfield on September 15.

PLAINFIELD ELKS JOIN BIG PARADE

Nearly one hundred members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E. left on the 8:26 train this morning to participate in the third annual State reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks being held in Newark. DEATH COMES TO JOHN V. BEEKMAN

Well Known Resident Passes Away After Few Months' Illness.

BORN IN SOMERVILLE

Was Founder of Lidgerwood Manufacturing Co., An Ardent Golfer and Veteran Motorist—Leaves a Wife and Five Sons.

John V. Beekman, aged 74 years, a well-known resident of this city for many years, died late yesterday afternoon at his home at West Eighth street and Arlington avenue. He was taken ill in April last when he underwent an operation for throat trouble and from that time he gradually failed, although he was able to go out in his motor as late as last week.

Mr. Beekman was born at Somerville, February 7, 1842, and he spent his younger days in that vicinity. At the age of 20 years he removed to Brooklyn, and soon afterward took up mechanical engineering, engaging in the manufacture of hoisting engines and boilers. He built up the business which afterward became known as the Lidgerwood Manufacturing Company, with plants in Brooklyn and Newark. The principal offices are located at 96 Liberty street, New York city. Mr. Beekman's interest was finally absorbed by the company, but he remained as the head of the concern until his death.

Mr. Beekman was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and was a great lover of outdoor life, being an enthusiastic golfer. He was a member of the Plainfield Country Club, the Hydewood Golf Club, an officer of the Stamford (N. Y.) Golf Club, and was also a familiar figure on the golf course at Pinehurst, N. C., where he was accustomed to spending his winters. Mr. Beekman was a veteran motorist for years, and greatly enjoyed trips to all parts of the country. Although not a member he was an attendant at the Congregational church, and was interested in the work there.

There survives a wife and five sons, John, Walter Edward, James and Wickham Beekman, who live in various parts of the country, and one sister, Mrs. Edna Bowers, of Nashville, Tenn. The funeral will be held at the late home Thursday morning at 11:30 o'clock, Rev. Howard E. Clarke, pastor of the Congregational church, officiating. The burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, at 3:30 o'clock that afternoon.

A Union Railways trolley car, in charge of a green motorman, jumped the track on the curve at Boston Road, Walker and Tremont avenues, the Bronx. VIOLENT STORM SWEEPS DOUGLAS Cloudburst Which Accompanies Gale, Transforms Camp Into a Lake.

GUARDSMEN DRENCHED

Leaky Tents Compell the Use of Rubber Blankets and Slickers—Plainfield Troops on Guard All Night.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 9.—One of the worst electrical storms this country has known in years brought to light another evidence of the State militia's unpreparedness here last night in the form of a number of leaky tents in the Troop D street. When the fierce gale broke with all its fury across the border shortly after midnight it brought with it a veritable cloudburst, the entire camp being transformed into a miniature lake inside of a few minutes. Troop D suffered the effects of the storm worse than any other unit.

It happened to be the Plainfield boys' turn at night guard detail and although the weather had been threatening all day and a sandstorm had blown up in the late afternoon it was not considered sufficiently dubious to warrant preparations for a deluge. As a result several of the men were caught without slickers and were drenched to the skin before being relieved. A majority of the tents in D street were deserted when the storm came, it being compulsory for the guards to spend their off hours while on detail in the guard tent at the extreme end of the camp. Many of the tent "flies" had been left open and clothes were hung close to the outside.

When the torrent of rain began to fall the troop's canvas tents appeared like so much cheesecloth, the rain filtering through in streams. In several of the tents where men were sleeping the entire contents were soaked. In order to kep a part of the down pour off them the unfortunate sleepers were compelled to spread rubber blankets and slickers over their cots, but even these did not afford complete relief. It is unedstood that many of the tents were condemned by government authorities before they were moved to this place from Sea Girt, but because of the "red tape" necessary to get new ones the men have thus far been contented to put up with the old and leaky ones.

Whether or not the troops will now make an effort to have the useless tents taken off their hands remains to be seen, but up to a late hour today nothing had been done in this direction, despite the development of a number of severe colds.

After the hard night about half of the Troop D soldiers were compelled to remain on guard in three hour shifts until 5 o'clock tonight and all were willing to go to bed early when the relief came. Since the First and Fourth Regiments left it has been necessary to adopt a schedule whereby each of the remaining units will furnish a guard detail every eight days in the future. In clear weather this work is rather an enjoyable phase of army life and even after the wetting they received last night none of the cavalrymen have lodged kicks up to this time. They all insisted on sticking to their posts until the call for relief came.

Pay-day is eagerly anticipated by the troopers and much speculation is going the rounds concerning the probable pay-off date. Some significance is attached to the appearance here today of Major Cannon, the government paymaster. He has taken up his abode in the quarters vacated by General Hine and said today that he would remain here until the brigade goes. When the orders come for the removal of the remaining units to Sea Girt or any other point, Major Cannon is the man who will have charge of the arrangements, including the shipment of cars to this point. In an interview today he declared that he was as ignorant of possibilities of an early return to Jersey as the men and stated emphatically that no order has as yet been placed for transportation trains, despite numerous rumors to the contrary. He would venture no prediction as to the probable length of time the soldiers would be kept here but it was noticed that the equipment he moved into his new quarters was sufficient to carry him through a long stay here.

The Plainfield boys have collected a curious variety of keepsakes to bring back to Plainfield with them. Among the souvenirs are brilliantly

LIFE OF HORSE THIEF PARTIALLY REVEALED

"Charles Hale" Served Two Terms in Penitentiary for Crimes.

After thwarting all efforts of the local police to identify him since he was arrested on a charge of stealing a horse here, two weeks ago, Police Chief Kiely has succeeded in finding out something of Charles Hale's past life. He has still, however, to find out his right name, as when arraigned in the local court he gave the name of Hale, and other occasions gave it as Frank Stevens and Charles Stevens.

In 1903, according to word received from the Massachusetts authorities, he was arrested at Cambridge on a charge of grand larceny and admitted breaking into a hardware store. For that he was given a three-year sentence.

When he served his time he seemed to drop out of sight until 1909, when he was convicted of highway robbery at Cedar Rapids, Michigan. He was found guilty of holding up Mrs. Elven Swartoul, wife of a prominent lawyer of that city, and taking a quantity of money and jewelry. He was sentenced to from five to fifteen years in the Joliet penitentiary and after serving five years broke his parole and had not been heard from until captured here. Chief Kiely is now trying to trace his movements during the two vacant periods.

He is now being held under $600 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE TAKE PART IN MARDI GRAS

A representation from the local Loyal Order of Moose participated in the Mardi Gras celebration at Coney Island last night. About thirty people comprised the local delegation and were conveyed to the island in three buses, one of which was attractively decorated and was entered in the parade. The Plainfield people were joined at Newark and Elizabeth by other Moose members and when the parade began forty-one paraders represented Plainfield and the Moose. "Toots" Van Ness led the local crowd, and the band from the St. John's Orphan Home in Brooklyn furnished the music.

The slogan, "Boost Plainfield," was everywhere in evidence and was the keynote of the evening's celebration as far as the local delegation was concerned. Charles Freligh was in charge of the Plainfield exhibition.

TRY TO FIND WAY TO CUT CITY HALL COST

The committee is working hard to put up the best adaptable building at the lowest possible figure.

William L. Saunders Makes Stirring Address Before Local Club.

175 VOTERS PRESENT

They Hear Explanation of President's Work in Railroad Strike—Tuttle, Treacy, Collins and Tavener Also Speak.

More than 175 voters attended the meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Club last night and they heard addresses on pending issues by the Hon. William L. Saunders, General Dennis F. Collins, the Hon. William E. Tuttle, Hugh Treacy, Walter H. Tavener and O. T. Kinsey. Richard Claybrook, president of the club, presided.

It was decided to look about for a candidate for Mayor against Leighton Calkins, who will be the Republican nominee, and a committee was named to go over the list of citizens who might be available. A report on this will be heard at the next meeting. Judge W. A. Coddington is chairman of the committee. Two others are to be named.

William L. Saunders.

The address of Mr. Saunders was the feature of the meeting. In addition to his knowledge of national affairs Mr. Saunders' remarks were made more interesting as he spoke as an official representative of the Wilson administration. Mr. Saunders is a member of the Naval Consulting Board and was recently appointed by President Wilson as a member of the Democratic National Campaign Committee. His address was a defence of the acts of the Democratic President and Congress for the past four years.

Wilson has kept us out of war, said Mr. Saunders, and because of his wisdom and courage in overcoming great obstacles in the way of continued neutrality he will go down in history with such statesmen and patriots as Washington, Jackson, Jefferson and Lincoln. Never in the history of the world have the affairs of nations been so topsy-turvy as within the past four years, and never has there been greater need of wisdom and courage on the part of the executive head of the United States. The policy of the United States toward Mexico has endeared this country to the people of all South American countries, declared the speaker, and he said he knew this, not through the statements of campaign orators, but through his own dealings with business men in South America. Those who have advocated intervention in Mexico, he said, have for the most part been actuated by selfish motives. Mexico can work out her own salvation and to deny this is to deny the history of human progress and civilization.

Mr. Saunders declared that the Democratic party has enacted more constructive legislation in the past four years than the Republicans did during all the years they were in power.

He strongly defended the attitude of Wilson and Congress on the recent railroad strike controversy. He denied that Wilson or Congress has surrendered to the Brotherhoods. They had the right to demand an

REPUBLICANS ARE PLEASED WITH RESULTS IN MAINE

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—The few precincts that straggled in this morning but add to the Republican victory shown by figures received last night. Everywhere the Progressive vote, or about eighty per cent. of it, went back to the Republicans, and the majority of Milliken for Governor is more than 14,000 over Curtis, Democratic candidate, while that of Fernald for Senator over Sills is near 10,000. This is for the short term. The majority of Hale, Republican, over Johnson, Democrat, for the long term for United States Senate will be about 8,000. The vote was heavy and Republicans claim that their highest hopes were justified. In the race between Hale and Johnson the voters were voting indirectly on the national issues, as the Democratic candidate was supported by Wilson and the Republican candidate had the indorsement of Hughes. Four Republican Congressmen were elected, and the Republicans have won a majority in the Legislature.

Origin of the Grocer.

The modern grocery store is very well known. The origin of its name is not so well known. Several centuries ago arose in England and France a class of thrifty and foresighted tradesmen who went about buying up bargain lots of every conceivable kind of merchandise, just as the modern American buys fire damaged goods and bankrupt stocks. The Frenchman bought "en gros" and the Englishman came to be called an "engrosser." He might handle hardware, thread, dried vegetables or anything else that could be obtained in large lots, and he began to call himself a "grocer" at a time when our sort of grocer was termed a "spicer." From that beginning comes the name grocer as we know it today.

Vinegar Kills Germs.

Wash and then soak all uncooked vegetables in vinegar if you would escape having typhoid fever. If lettuce, watercress and other greens to be eaten raw be placed in vinegar water (three teaspoonfuls of vinegar to a quart of water is the proportion) to soak (immersed) for one hour and a quarter all danger of typhoid fever will be removed. The acidulated water does not mar the flavor of the vegetable.

Richest Language.

Of the 3,424 known languages on earth the completest and the richest in the ways and means of expression is the English. The late distinguished German linguist, Grimm, declared that no other language is comparable to the English.

Music.

The main defect in music is the necessity of reproducing compositions by performing them. If it were as easy to read music as it is to read books Beethoven's sonatas would be as popular as Schiller's poems.—Ferdinand Hiller.

STOLE MONEY THAT MEANT HIS HEALTH

Ben Gorden Tells Local Police of "the Meanest Man"—He is Helpless.

A mere shadow of a man, with a cough and a diseased body, walked into Police Headquarters this afternoon to ask if there was any way to get revenge for a mean trick played on him about three months ago by a convict now serving time in Sing Sing prison, New York. Told by the authorities at Bonnie Burn that the West was the only place he could hope to regain his health, the man, who said he was Benjamin Gordon, had left that institution to work and save moiney for the expenses of a trip to another clime. He had obtained a position with a local grocer and was doing well until the man, whose name he does not know, turned up and caused him to lose his position.

Gordon, in talking to a Daily Press man, said the fellow offered to give him some money to help him on his way and made out a check for $10. A few days after he asked for $6 of it and said he could keep the remainder. Gordon had his employer cash the check, but when it came back as no good a few days later, he was discharged and threatened with arrest, being blamed for the forged check.

Since then he says he has been living as best he could and trying to secure carfare for his trip to health. He heard of the arrest of the fellow, recognizing him by the description given in the papers, and went to the police to ask if he might get his money back, but when he was told that the one sentence acted as a punishment for the harm done him, too, he left the station house with shoulders more bent and tears in his eyes.

MARTINE DEMANDS FACTS ON CASEMENT MATTER

Atlantic City, Sept. 12.—Senator Martine, of New Jersey, has today severely arraigned the Senate and State Department for their indifference toward intercession on behalf of Sir Roger Casement, in an address at the annual convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of New Jersey.

Senator Martine, who introduced a resolution at the instance of Mrs. Anna Newman, of Philadelphia, sister of Sir Roger charges that the weak resolution substituted for his was only put through in half-hearted fashion to quiet public clamor and really meant nothing.

"I discovered that this resolution, weak and poor as it was, had not been transmitted to the British Government until after the execution of Sir Roger Casement," he said. "Now, I want the Senate of the United States to tell me the very minute, hour and day the resolution was forwarded and intend to push an investigation."

Senator Martine declared that there was great opposition to his measure, and referred to certain men in the Senate, whose names he would not disclose, who insisted that he was going to "get the country into diplomatic complications because he had been affected by a woman's tears."

HEALTH BOARD PROVIDES FOR INSPECTION OF PLANS

The monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health was held last evening, when routine business occupied most of the time. An amendement to the sanitary code was made, which provides for the inspection of building plans and specifications before they are accepted. A fee of one dollar will be charged by the inspector.

The health conditions in the borough were reported as being favorable. There are three cases of infantile paralysis under quarantine. One case was released a few days ago, the child having completely recovered. One case of scarlet fever and one case of diphtheria were reported.

THREE MORE PARALYSIS CASES APPEAR IN CITY

Three new cases of infantile paralysis, all in different sections of the city, were reported by the Board of Health today. Robert Taylor, aged seventeen months, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, of 310 Jackson avenue; Norman Eckert Brittin, aged two years, of 1209 Henry street, and William McConnell, the thirteen month's old son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McConnell, of 931 West Third street, are the latest victims of the disease.

All three of the cases are mild ones and have been under observation for sometime, although definite paralysis symptoms did not appear until yesterday. So far as the Board of Health has been able to trace the origin of the cases they have no connection with any others that have appeared.

MEETING POSTPONED.

Because many of the members have not yet returned from their summer vacations, the scheduled meeting of the Netherwood Residents' Association was not held last night. The first meeting will be held the first Monday in October.

Beauty of Pennsylvania.

In one respect only Pennsylvania is unchanged and unchangeable. Men have dealt harshly and shamefully by her, but nature has crowned her with beauty. Her founder, knowing nothing of his broad tracts, save that they were forest lands, gave to the new province the pretty name of Sylvania, and Charles II., always a punmaster of words, prefixed the Penn, for which pleasant conceit every son and daughter of the state owes him a grateful thought. Thus the word Pennsylvania perpetuates history, honors a noble name and symbolizes the loveliness of the land, a land of woods and waters, hills and valleys, fat farms and rocky solitudes. The shrieking engine that drags its trainload of passengers through the valley of the Juniata, across ridge after ridge of the Alleghenies, past the Tuscarora gap and the succession of narrows—Long Narrows, Jack's Narrows, Packsaddle Narrows—has traversed a country so widely and nobly beautiful that, in Europe, it would attract the tourists of the world.—Agnes Repplier in American Magazine.

Sitting on a Tack.

A thing is tragic or humorous according to the point of view. The man who sits on a tack does not share the onlookers' amusement. In fact, he is not only pained at his own misfortune, but he is pained because he occasioned some one else to find a degree of pleasure in his unseemly plight.

Now, it is perfectly safe to make this positive statement in this connection—the person who witnessed the other's unfortunate encounter with the tack never deliberately sits on the same tack himself. Indeed, he is particularly cautious about sitting down anywhere soon thereafter without looking for a tack.

Nor is this an indictment of tacks. Tacks serve a very real and useful purpose in this world, but they have their place, which is not in localities where they may be sat upon.—William C. Lengel in Hoggson Magazine.

Caught Him Both Ways.

"I ask you to pay me this bill," said a tailor to a waggish debtor.

"Do you owe anybody anything?" asked the wag.

"No, sir," replied the tailor.

"Then you can afford to wait." And off he walked.

A day or two afterward the tailor called again. Our wag was not at his wits' end, so, turning to his creditor, he said:

"Are you in debt to anybody?"

"Yes, sir, I am sorry to say I am."

"Well, why don't you pay?"

"I haven't got the money," replied the tailor, with a woebegone countenance.

"That's just my case, my dear sir. I am glad to perceive that you can appreciate my position. I always respected your judgment, sir. Give me your hand, sir."—London Mail.

Some Geographical Doubles.

Accidental doubles of geography are very curious. There are the two totally unconnected Galicias, the one in Austria-Hungary and the one in Spain. As to the Carpathians, the doubling occurs between the ancient and the modern atlases. On the map of the ancients we find a people named Carpi in the north of what is now Hungary and north of them the Carpatus mountains. But "Carpathian" in Vergil, Horace and Ovid means something quite different. The Carpathian sea was the sea between Rhodes and Crete, from the island of Carpathus, now Scarpanto, and the "Carpathian old man" was Proteus, who lived and no doubt practiced his quick change tricks there.—London Spectator.

Fooled His Subjects.

King Erricus of Sweden publicly confessed that he was a sorcerer and magician. He was the owner of an enchanted cap, which he pretended enabled him to control the spirits and change the direction of the winds at pleasure. So firmly did his subjects believe in the supernatural powers of their ruler that when a storm arose they would exclaim, "Ah, the king is again wearing the magic cap!"

What She Misses.

"I suppose you miss your husband terribly?"

"No; I can't say that I do. I was a golf widow for years before he died, but it does seem strange not to have him phone that he is going to be late for dinner."—Detroit Free Press.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Proper Sleep.

To the average individual in the modern civilized community, with its various opportunities and limitations, there is good reason to believe that a proper amount of sleep is the chief health conserver. All about us life, both animate and inanimate, obeys the laws of nature and passes into some form resembling sleep, usually while the sun is beneath the horizon.

Authorities on health and hygiene point out more and more the need of securing at least eight consecutive hours of sleep. Where this cannot be done as a routine, day after day, they advice that the proper amount of sleep be made up some time during the twenty-four hours. The universal practice of this policy no doubt would do more than any other single factor to promote health and prevent disease.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

CONGRESS CLOSES WORK OF SESSION

Its Last Act Was Passage of Revenue Bill.

WILL RAISE $205,000,000.

Mail Retaliation Amendment, Introduced by Senator Phelan, Is Eliminated—House Galleries Crowded as First Session of Sixty-fourth Congress Ends—Summary of Its Work.

The most important achievements of the first session of the Sixty-fourth congress are:
Enlargement of the navy. Reorganization and increase of the army.
Defense appropriations of $355,000,000.
A child labor law.
A rural credits law.
A government shipping law.
A workmen's compensation law.
A good roads law.
Creation of a tariff commission.
More autonomy for the Philippines.
A cotton futures law.
A railroad eight hour law.

Congress has completed the work which it began on Dec. 6, 1915. Final adjournment has been taken after a few tag ends of legislative work were finished. The general revenue bill intended to raise $205,000,000 was passed by both houses.

In the closing hours some changes were made in the senate in the war revenue bill, the most important being the elimination of the Phelan amendment, which would give the president power to shut off the mails, the telegraphs and cables to any nation that restricted the mail service to the United States. The other provisions, authorizing embargoes and refusal of clearances to vessels of offending nations, were retained.

House Galleries Crowded.

The expectation of the final adjournment of the session brought large crowds to the capitol. The house galleries were filled, but for some reason comparatively few spectators were in the senate galleries.

Shortly before the session ended the senate spent more than two hours behind closed doors in discussing the treaty for the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States. Under the rules a treaty before being acted upon must go over for a day, and to overcame this obstacle it was agreed that the senate should "adjourn" for fifteen minutes. Concluding its secret session, the senate closed its doors again fifteen minutes later, the presiding officer announcing that a new legislative day had begun.

In the second secret session the treaty was ratified, but a complication arose that was discussed behind closed doors. The point was made that the senate could not adjourn twice in the same calendar day, another adjournment having been taken previously. So the senate decided to put in its records that it had merely taken a recess. How it overcame the rule that a treaty must go over for a legislative day before being acted on was not disclosed, the debate on the subject having taken place in secret session.

One of the incidents of the closing hours was a search for a clergyman to offer prayer when the senate reconvened for another legislative day after the fifteen minutes' interval. It is customary that each day's proceedings be opened with prayer, but the regular chaplain could not be found and no other clergyman could be located in or near the capitol. So one legislative day, at least, was begun without prayer.

Oratory in the House.

Debate on the general deficiency appropriation bill and the general revenue bill was mainly of an academic character in the house. After the adoption of the conference reports Representative Decker, a Missouri Democrat, made an impassioned defense of the administration of President Wilson, his speech being in reply to one by Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of Massachusetts attacking the "retaliatory" amendments in the revenue bill. Subsequently, Congressman William S. Bennet of New York replied to Mr. Decker, and the session ended with a generous outburst of partisan speechmaking.

Majority Leader Kitchin was applauded as he arose to present the conference report on the revenue bill. After desultory discussion the report was adopted with a demand for a record vote.

Approval of the adjournment resolution followed, and then the house gave unanimous consent to several speakers who desired to get political views into the Congressional Record.

The customary farewell addresses by Speaker Champ Clark and the majority and minority leaders came with the final hours of the session.

Indicating the heavy work of the session, house clerks prepared the following summary of the bills and resolutions introduced and considered in the lower body during the last nine months:

House bills introduced, 17,800; resolutions, 309; joint resolutions, 303; concurrent resolutions, 60; reports on bills 1,200, excluding omnibus pensions and claims and public laws, approximately 200; public resolutions approved, 33; private laws, 146, and private resolutions, 4.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE OF ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH MEETS

Hart addressed the women and urged them to enter upon another year of worthy work. Following the business sesion games were enjoyed with refreshments.

STORM SWEEPS DOUGLAS

colored Navajo blankets, coins, pillow cases, baskets, bracelets, hat bands, cameras, steer horns and dozens of other similar articles, many of which have been made by the Mexicans living in this section. They are awaiting the arrival of pay-day so that they may have funds to stock up before leaving and are hoping that Uncle Sam will not decide to let the paying off go until after they get to Sea Girt, as he did in the case of the First and Fourth Regiments.

The weather conditions here have become unbearably hot during the past few days, this being the season of the year, according to residents, when the humidity is the greatest. It took a noticeable rise during the past forty-eight hours and the storm last night afforded practically no relief. Storms have been frequent here during the past week and every indication points to another heavy one today. This place is almost entirely surrounded by mountains and the appearance of a storm in any quarter is a beautiful thing to watch. However, when the wind begins to blow it generally lays the smoke of the three big smelters within a stone's throw of the camp very low and it has a stifling effect on the men. The smelters work twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week, so every time a storm breaks the militiamen are forced to "swallow" fumes of sulphur.

All preparations have been made for the departure of Troop D tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock on a two-day hike of about sixteen miles. Horses are being put into good shape today and rations are being loaded on the motor-truck. Troops A and C left here on a similar outing yesterday and will return in the morning.

The World's Greatest Judge.

If greatness consists of great ability linked with great opportunity, then we must pass unchallenged the declaration that Marshall is the greatest judge in the language, states Hugh H. Brown in Case and Comment. No English judge ever had the opportunity of a new field except Hardwicke in equity, Mansfield in commercial law and possibly Stowell in admiralty. The world never had known a science of a written constitution of government until it came in Marshall's time.

Standing before his portrait in company with a distinguished foreigner, an American lawyer said, "We consider him the greatest judge of our country." A British justice replied, "You might well say the greatest judge of any country."

Another Englishman, James Bryce, said in substance that the higher qualities of Marshall's decisions never had been surpassed and but rarely equaled by the most famous jurists of modern Europe or of ancient Rome.

HIGH COST OF LIVING FELT BY JIM SCOTT

Jam's Raises Price of Admission to Avon Oval Stands.

James Scott, the manager of the Tabs' baseball team, announced this morning that he will be forced to raise the price of admission to the stands on Avon Oval to twenty-five cents. He takes this move, because he believes that every fan will be justly treated by virtue of this action. At the present time a unilform price is charged and one fan is just as entitled to a seat as is his next neighbor. Therefore it does seem unjust to see one fan who has paid fifteen cents, seated, while his friend, who has also paid fifteen cents, is forced to stand. Manager Scott is of the opinion that he has solved the puzzle.

In addition to announcing his lineup for Sunday, Mr. Scott stated that his team will oppose the "Philadelphia Colored Giants with a Lincoln Giant shortstop." The lineup, as given out, indicates that McFadden will do the pitching. "Dark horses" may enter the race, however. We have that straight from Manager Scott.

The bowling committee, of which James Scott is chairman, is busily at work preparing a schedule, which will be announced in a few days.

Paying the Price

We are always paying the price for the things we lose or gain
Out of this life of the mingled gift of gladness and of pain,
And whether we pay for pleasure or whether we pay for sin
It is always paying the price for life, no matter where we begin.

We say we have had a lot, we've enjoyed and we've shared in the best.
We sit sometimes with a little dream of old content in the breast,
And then when we look away and think of the things that were nice
It all comes over us, lucky or sad, that we've had to pay the price.

The magnate pays it for his, as the pauper pays it, too,
And the saint pays just as the sinner does and the unsaved have to do.
In all that we have and hold or in all that we've thrown away
It is sure in the end to come to this that there was a price to pay.

We pay it for love and peace, for cheer and comfort and song.
We pay for sinning and going astray; we pay it for doing wrong.
In all that we are or seem, in gladness or grief or pain,
We are always paying the price for the things that we lose or gain.
—Folger McKinsey in Baltimore Sun.

DEMOCRATS DEFEND WILSON

eight-hour day with more pay, he said, and Wilson did not interfere until their demands had been rejected by the railroad managers and a strike had been agreed upon. Such a strike would have meant billions of dollars loss to the country, and untold hardships for its people. You cannot arbitrate the hours a man must work, he said. Wilson stepped in as mediator when the railroads and their employes had failed to reach an agreement and a strike seemed inevitable.

President Wilson did not insist on an eight-hour day until six railroad presidents, heads of the largest lines in this country and all personally known to Mr. Saunders, he said, had told him that they did not object to an eight-hour day. He did not enter then as an arbitrator, but as a mediator. Mr. Saunders called attention to the fact that Congress had passed laws declaring an eight-hour day to be a standard for men in the government employ. Millions of industrial workers and mechanics have an eight-hour day, he said, and society accepts it as a standard of a day's work, therefore, when the Adamson bill was presented to Congress it was but natural that it should be passed and made into a law.

"Where is there a Republican from Hughes down who will dare say that if elected he will repeal that act?" challenged Saunders.

The speaker said that Republican campaign orators were talking much about what Cleveland did in the railroad strike of 1894, and Roosevelt did in the anthracite strike of only a few years ago. Each waited until the strike had been called, until the people had suffered great loss and hunger and want stalked in the districts affected, before thy did anything, said Mr. Saunders. Then President Cleveland illegally called out the Illinois militia and President Roosevelt illegally appointed a commission to arbitrate the coal strike in his adminstration, warning the men appointed that they must concede an increase in the wages of the men and did not permit an increase in the price of coal. Wilson simply acted in advance, declared Mr. Saunders, and ne accomplished more than either of the former presidents without financial loss or suffering.

Former Congressman William E. Tuttle said that he was a candidate for Congress, asking an indorsement of his term of four years. He had tried to serve a majority of the people in his district, he said, and not a single measure had been introduced in Congress during his term but that he sought to find out how it would affect his constitutents before he voted for or against its passage. He defended the Democratic administration, especially the naval department under Secretary Daniels. Mr. Tuttle was well received by the voters.

General Dennis F. Collins, who is a member of the Democratic State Committee, announced that the State body was willing to co-operate in every way possible in the local campaign, and that it would assign speakers here whenever they were needed.

Hugh Treacy, candidate for Assembiyman from this district, was another speaker. He said in part:

"We feel, and I believe, rightly so, that as distinguished from the Republican party—the party of special privileges and class legislation—the Democratic party represents all that is highest and best in the interests of the common people of this great republic.

"The Democratic party neither aims at nor desires special privileges for any class or set of men, high or low, but desires only equal and exact justice for all men, no matter what their station.

"I think it will be conceded by all the thinking people of this country that the Republican party has done more to foster class legislation and monopolies, out of which fabulous fortunes have been made for a few plutocrats in this country, by special privileges and special class legislation, than it was ever contemplated should result—all of which has brought about the many clashes between capital and labor, arising out of the inequitable and unjust discrimination of the sheer power of wealth.

"This, most surely was not intended by the forefathers of this great Republic, who shed their blood for the rights of a common citizenship and equal and exact justice before the law.

"We, I believe, have reason to feel proud that we are members of and represent the great body of common people of this country; demanding its just proportion from capital, for labor, well and honestly along these lines to the end.

"It may be that I am expected to express my views on the question of Local Option—that is a question of wide and divergent opinion among the various communities of this country, and about which one would not be asked to give an off-hand opinion.

"Personally, speaking for myself, it would make little difference or no difference to me, although I am not a total abstainer, if all the liquor in the world was thrown into the sea, and not another drop manufactured—intoxicating liquor, in itself, may not be very harmful—if used with discretion. Unfortunately, however, there are weak men and women, who allow it to become their master and to make of them utter slaves. For these people it were better that it were never made, and that they could not obtain it. It demoralizes not only themselves, but frequently all those dependent upon them; it brings about a degree of moral degeneracy, which could not obtain from any other source. It has no doubt been the cause of more crimes and suffering than anything else in the world, and unfortunately it is playing dreadful havoc with many of the young and old women of this and other countries, reducing them, as a consequence, to a very low ebb of morality.

"It is then an evil thing and if it could be disposed of once and for all, it would be a good thing for the world in general. I believe, however, that this is a matter which lies within the province of each municipality, to settle for itself, and that is where I leave it."

Walter H. Tavener, of Westfield, who is a candidate for Assemblyman and David T. Kenney also addressed the meeting, telling of the chances for Democratic success in the campaigns which are at issue.

The club will meet again next week to hear the report of the committee named to look about for a candidate for Mayor.

Testing Woolens.

Pure woolens are adulterated even more than silk because they are in greater demand and also because they are quite easy to imitate. Many a yard of cloth sold as "pure wool" contains from 30 to 60 per cent cotton. Blankets sold as "half wool" have frequently been found to contain only 1 per cent of pure wool. There are machines today which cleverly wrap wool around cotton threads, and the finished product has every appearance of being "all wool." Another method of adulterating is by taking cotton cloth and "felting" short woolen threads upon its surface by means of heat, moisture and pressure.

A purchaser may be fully convinced from the appearance and feeling of cloth that it is all wool, but the only safe method is to take home the sample and make tests. Immerse the sample of so called wool in oil of vitriol for about two minutes. This will destroy the cotton, but the wool will not be affected. Another test is to moisten a sample with 50 per cent nitric acid. This will turn the wool yellow, but the cotton will retain its color.—Washington Post.

Snubbed the Composer.

Gustav Mahler had a queer experience in Munich one day for which his name was partly responsible. His new symphony was being rehearsed, and he took advantage of an hour's intermission to get some fresh air. "On returning to the building," say a Munich paper, "he lost his way and tried to reach the hall through a corridor in which plasterers were at work. 'You cannot pass through here,' he was told. 'But I am Mahler.' (Mahler is the German for painter.) 'You look it,' was the unsympathetic reply of the man who blocked his way. 'We are not ready for the painters yet, so run on.' And the composer, realizing that argument would be useless, plunged into the labyrinth and finally reached his destination."

WITH TROOP D ON THE BORDER

Plainfielder Writes in Interesting Manner of Camp Life There.

PICTURE OF THE CAMP

Saddle Mountain Always Just Over the Soldiers, Even at Night—Not Always Fair Weather for Work to Be Done.

The following vivid story of life with Troop D on the border, was written by a Plainfielder who has just retuined home.

All signs suggest the early return of the Watchung Troop to the shadow of the Watchung Mountains—take as chief among these the ordering home of the New Jersey Brigade Headquarters Staff, of two of the three infantry regiments, and the refusal of further applications for discharges on any ground—so the spirits of the men on the windy plains of Douglas strong enough to bear them smoothly through the long black days of ditch-digging, sickness, flies, and unbroken horses, are now very high. But as long as they are still within that wide blue oval of jagged mountains, this account of the life lived there by one who has just left may interest Plainfielders.

From certain points in Camp Pirleville a man can, by simply turning about, see all there is there to see, in a large and general sense, of the camp and its environement—these are the green piles of alfalfa bales, as high at times as the third story of a house, that stand between the lines of picketed horses. The lone watcher you would see against the sky on each of these—he is on guard—may scan the vast and vivid plain in all directions to the distant point leaked mountains that enclose it.

At his feet, if he looks south, are the horses nose to nose, with switching tails, in nine long double rows; and separated from these by a hundred yards of whitish earth, trodden as hard as concrete, almost, are the yellow tents, rank upon rank, bright in the beating sun; they stretch to the west far beyond the last of the picket lines, for of these the infantry have no need; but in their place is the bare parade ground where lines and columns of brown clad men are moving under their rifles. Among the picket lines occasional rows of gray, hooped wagons stand, and parked to one side are the gray field guns of the batteries.

Between and just beyond the rows of shifting, switching horses, many things are doing; one of the humorists of equines, a mule, got loose, swings in a long legged easy stride, head high and ears erect, just fast enough to evade pursuers of his heels. Bud Fisher, ex-cowboy, who fought ten smashing rounds by lantern light with a professional from the battery a few weeks back, sits firmly in the saddle of a "bad" horse which leaps almost straight upward in a series of parring bucks. And they have an "outlaw" on the snubbing post: Buck McGee directs the attempts to throw him; but, though roped about the fore legs and often falling to his knees, he hurls his great black body at his tormentors time and again, scattering them. Here and there along the lines troopers are saddling, unsaddling, or leading horses; and orderlies ride at trot or gallop over the plain.

Such is the camp itself as a Watchung trooper on guard would see it from his watch tower. Just behind, flat upon the plain, straggles the village of Pirtleville—a scattering of low, adobe huts, blue, green and brown, rosetted with many windmills. Just before the watcher, across the camp, near the railroad, are the squat black smelters, Copper Queen and Calumet, with their network of girders, poles and derricks, buttressed round with shining slag and cinder, and pouring up to enormous heights on still days their four pillars of white smoke.

Saddle Mountain in Silhouette.

Far to the north and west, the mountains resemble giant ash heaps; but across the vast stretch of fuzzy green desert to the north they are pellucid blue, and to the east where the men look when they stand at reveille or retreat the range is so near that you could, it some times seems, count the loose rocks upon its rough, green slopes, or the flutings of the palisades that sometimes crown its peaks; rocky peaks that converge in a wild symmetry of such a kind as to throw into sharp emphasis that giant saddle, Saddle Mountain, with its high castle and and higher pommels sometimes it is the deepest blue, sometimes bald and rocky gray, and sometimes a soft and delicate lavender; but always it is there, even by night, cut out against the sky, a tremendous saddle, deep seated, with a craggy pommel lifted in strange significance above the fuzzy green desert where men always ride.

But the mountains look small and low, the even tents, irregular at Pirtieville, and the scattered ranchos with their groves of scanty trees insignificant, in relation to the vast spread of the sky and the great clouds that hang beneath it; for though clouds in the east have in general only one dimension, so great is the desert perspective that they become papable masses of huge bulk as they float in the deep oceans of the air dropping huge blue shadows on the plain and the mountain slopes.

All this in fair weather. But it is not quite fair always. When the troop detrained on arriving from Sea Girt the smoke oozed from the smelter chimneys, to mushroom out and finally unite in a wide, grey motionless mass; and clouds came and sat upon the mountain tops, gathering force to overspread the plain. Soon it rained till the water ran in rivulets and turned the baked ground to a sticky mud; and in this mud and these torrents the men pitched their tents—its hard enough to pitch them dry—and lived for two and a half drenching days, laboring from twelve to fifteen hours, digging, unloading, carrying. Then the sun came forth and with extraordinary speed drank up the moisture; the points of the pick axes swung by perspiring, blistered troopers broke its surface into scales and chips; hard ground in which to dig the innumerable holes and ditches camp sanitation demanded. There were, around noon, short hours of rest; but to unacclimated men the tents were ovens, filled as they were with the dry heat. These were black days. Flies came and swarmed over the food as the men, pewter plates and tried to eat it, crouching in the shadow of tents and woodpile often, held it in their pewter plates and tried to eat it—not seldom, disgusted, to give up and throw it all into the fire—either that or bolt it flapping one hand over the plate the while; a curous sight, nearly a hundred men upon the ground in comparative silence, each waving one hand horizontally and rushing the other back and forth from plate to mouth.

These men had come to be troopers. But the horses, sick from the journey, could not have stood riding had there been time to ride. There was none—the camp must first be rendered sanitary. Ditches, this meant, first, last, and always. Some days of this had been expected, not weeks. But weeks of it there were and under a sun blaze such as these men had never known. Many were sick; but as the worst, when they lay in their tents—ovens perspiring at noon, their grumbling so far as there was any, took a humorous course broken by hearty laughter; hey saw something fundamentally humorous in the entire episode, to have so lightly joined the guard, commuters and mechanics, and ten one day abruptly to wake up in Arizona with a pick and shovel in your hands.

As for the horses, all the men had to do with them was to clean and water them. They were merely a nuisance; and as much as the horses regarded them. Relations between the two parties were in general the reverse of amicable. The horses were untrained, and frightened from the journey; and the men were mostly untrained and after two or three had been kicked into the hospital, and one cut upon the face by an "outlaw" that stood up and boxed, and many had but narrowly escaped, they were frightened, too; it was a bi-daily ordeal to walk between two pair of strange and restless hoofs, to clean, feed and water.

Those were black days, certainly, but somehow got through by no means without pleasure. Now the troop drills regularly; and a man cleans his own horse with affection and gets something for it in return; and all the ditches are dug—even the "Douglas Bisby Canal," as they call it, seven feet deep at one end, thre wide and hundreds of feet longfi where Corporals Ransome and Ivins and their squads worked so long and valiantly.

Now there is a screened and almost flyless mess hall, thanks to the carpentership of Jack Caulfield, Boss Andrews, Reg Rowland, Roger Mellick, Lyman Hibbard and others; and tents placed upon wooden frames are cool and airy; and the acclimated men find that dry heat infinitely preferable to the humid heat of New York, especially since night, wonderfully cool—two blankets the use now—induce a profound sleep.

To get an impression of the life take a typical day. Rosy dawn is in the sky behind the great saddle of the eastern mountains when reveille sounds out, "I can't git 'em up, I can't git 'em up, I can't git 'em up in the morning." In each of the thirteen tents of the troop the blue and brown cots move reluctantly and one mumbles, "Curse that bugle, there it goes again;" and another that is the corporal, says, trying to sound firm and brisk, "Come on, 'Everybody up,'" and manges himself to wriggle free of his blankets, as an example. Soon the sergeants, yawning, emerge upon the chilly street and begin to call "All out First Squad," "Third Squad, everybody out?" And, with trailing feet the men straggle into line tightening belts and pulling on sweathers. The first sergeant facing the line calls "Attention!" Everybody stiffens so far as he can, limbs that are still slack with sleep. Then it "Twos lift—forward—Ho!" and up they go to stables; actually sometimes now they sing—they always joke—before breakfast in the pale and chilly dawn—best evidence of robust health and spirits. A few moments with a horse and brush puts warmth into you; and after that the nose bags are pulled over the roses' ears while they dance and toss their heads impatiently and the men march down, hungry, to wash before their tents for mess. Before the last ones have splased the water from the tin basin over heads and faces a sharp whistle blows thrice. That is the mess call. The men troop into the mess hall and sit at the long board tables, big tin dishes of oatmeal and itchers of coffee before them.

CARRIED A MUMMY AND SKULL IN HIS BAGGAGE

Ring 4,600 Years Old Also Among Arab's Treasures.

While Joseph H. Zaki, an Arab who arrived in America on the Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi recently, was napping in the detention pen at Ellis Island inspectors began opening his luggage. A long wooden box the shape of a coffin attracted their attention, and they pried off the lid to find a perfectly good mummy inside. Just then another inspector opened up a box containing a mummified dog and Zaki was abruptly awakened.

He jumped up with a start upon seeing his treasures unfolded before him and begged that they be handled tenderly, which they were. He said that he lived in Baltimore for several years, and prior to his coming to this country the first time he assisted several scientists in relic searching in Egypt. His tales of discoveries so impressed his American friends that he decided to go back to Egypt, dig up a few mummies for himself and exhibit them in this country. He sailed from here six months before the war began.

The mummy he brought back he found in Akhmim, he said, in upper Egypt. It was in a gold case which he estimated as being worth $15,000 and which the Egyptian museum in Cairo took, letting him keep his mummy. He gave a value of $25 on the mummy to the customs men.

Zaki said that the hieroglyphics on the side of the case showed that the mummy had been buried 1,800 years; that the man died when he was twenty-four years old, and his father, who was named Mokha, was a nobleman in the Egyptian court. The case was set in a tomb of stone thirty yards down in the desert sand.

In one of the small boxes Zaki had a human skull and a gold ring which he found at Enien-el-Shams, near the Matarrih obelisk, and which he said was 4,600 years old. He said the inscription on the side of this tomb, which was translated by Kamel Bey, a former native director of the Egyptian museum, showed that the skull was that of a priest, the inscription reading, "Here lies the body of Washa, the deceased priest and son of Hor."

Zaki also had a mummified crocodile, several idols and some beads, all of which, he said, were more than 1,500 years old. He brought an affidavit of their genuineness signed by Ralph H. Blanchard, a well known collector of Egyptian relics, and witnessed by James M. Bowcock, American vice consul at Cairo.

BROTHERS STRANGELY MEET.

Policeman Stops Driver and Finds Relative After Twenty Years.

A strange meeting of brothers after twenty years' separation occurred at Tarrytown, N. Y., recently. Henry Steinbacher, driver for a brewery in Brooklyn, was driving his truck from the Nyack ferryboat when he was stopped by Policeman John Steinbacher, on duty at the ferry to watch for breaks in the infantile paralysis quarantine. John was about to tell Henry he could not pass through Tarrytown when he took a closer look and exclaimed: "Hello, Henry! How are you, old boy?"

Henry had been peering at the policeman and as he recognized him jumped from the seat, and the two men shook hands, reviewed old times and as they parted promised to visit each other soon.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1916.

LOOK UP THE RECORDS, SENATOR.

The Daily Press does not care to get into a debate with Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed. We recognize that in him we would have an opponent who would give us plenty of suggestions for serious thought, but we do feel that his statements printed on Saturday night in defense of Walter E. Edge, one of the candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, should not go unchallenged.

Mr. Reed states that the Daily Press intimated that Edge is not in favor of the enforcement of the excise laws. While we did not make that charge directly we respectfully refer Mr. Reed to the files of Mr. Edge's two newspapers at Atlantic City at the time when a former Governor was trying to bring some semblance of law observance into that resort some eight years ago. If Mr. Reed will get those files and carefully inspect them, he will undoubtedly find that while law enforcement may not have been opposed, there was at least a suggestion that the Atlantic City authorities were justified in encouraging the continuation of a wide-open town, not only on the liquor question but some others.

Mr. Reed might also look up an open Sunday bill which Mr. Edge has introduced within recent years. If we are not mistaken it was in 1914.

Senator Reed brings in the question of "our candidate" Colonel Colgate and says that Edge "is as temperate in regard to liquor as your candidate, Senator Colgate." That gets a little bit too close to the personal equation, and the Daily Press sees no necessity for bringing that into the campaign. If it were we fear that there would be a whole lot of unpleasant things said which people hesitate to say except in the heat of a political campaign. However, as to Mr. Colgate's sobriety, his personal life and character, his work for church and charitable causes, and his treatment of his employes, neither Senator Reed nor anyone else can point to anything but a most pleasing and satisfying reputation.

We agree with Mr. Reed that Newark is wide open, and concede that he apparently has an intimate source of information regarding affairs there, when he states that "more beer is drank in Newark on Sunday than water." But when he says "Senator Colgate controls one of Newark's prominent newspapers which is not, just now, making any fight against that evil," he is wrong. Colonel Colgate, perhaps unwisely, in view of his entry into the gubernatorial fight, bought some of the bonds of the Newark Star-Eagle, when it changed hands a few months ago. He has no more to say about the management of that publication than has Mr. Reed or the editor of the Daily Press.

We sincerely hope that the Republican voters will look carefully into the records of both Colgate and Edge, especially those who are about to test the no-license question in the Plainfield primaries. Such an investigation, we feel quite sure, will make them favor Mr. Colgate, rather than Mr. Edge.

If Mayor Calkins is preparing a statement on the possible results of prohibition in Plainfield, as is reported, voters may expect some interesting information. It is characteristic of Mr. Calkins that he does not make public utterance without deep research and thought, and as he is in a position both to observe conditions in other States and theoretically apply them here his deductions will be as near authoritative as is possible. Every possible light should be thrown on the question of local option here, as this is the one issue that will be met by voters in the primary of this month. It is peculiarly true that whenever the liquor question enters into a local political fight all other issues are ignored; even those involving the most important moves in government, and Plainfielders who are contending that the three councilmen seeking re-election will get votes as an indorsement of their public records are wasting breath. Every prohibitionist will vote for a prohibition candidate. If this is not true then Plainfield people are peculiar folk.

A Chicago judge who presides over Juvenile Court, has said that four-fifths of the bad-child cases that come before him are due directly to parental neglect or incompetence. He suggests that the father be thrashed when the boy goes wrong. Eighty per cent. of the badness of the world is a pretty big burden to put onto parental negligence, but it is an admitted fact among social workers that there should be a school for parents adjoining every one for children. The greatest responsibility in the world is that of being a parent. We require adequate bond when we employ a $15 a week clerk to handle a few dimes and permit the same man to bring children into the world and make men and women of them without a question as to his competency.

GENERAL SPENCER QUALIFIES AS EXPERT

"Grand Old Man of Rifle Shooting" Comples Fifty Years as Expert.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, Sept. 12.—Brigadier General Bird W. Spencer, inspector general of rifle practice and affectionately termed "the grand old man of rifle shooting" by thousands of riflemen from all over the United States, completed this year fifty years of rifle Shooting" Completes Fifty distance expert rifleman. The general admits that he does not know how many years he has reached that qualification, but that it goes back nearly as long as his service in the National Guard. The total number of points possible for the qualification is 350, and the general made 312 on all the ranges.

In qualifying at the targets, each bullseye counts five, the first ring counts four and the second ring three. In his scoring this year General Spencer had but two 3s at slow fire, and but two at rapid fire, and he made 36 bullseyes. The cards turned in by General Spencer, who is one of the oldest riflemen in point of years as well as service in the country, were as follows: 300 yards, 42; 500 yards, 44; 600 yards, 46; rapid fire—200 yards, 46; 300 yards, 42.

Total for expert rifleman, 220: 800 yards, 44; 1,000 yards, 48.

Total for long distance expert, 92. General total, 312.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Why?

I wonder why I never get an answer to my "ad?"
I haven't had one single one—it really is too bad.
Without a girl I can't go out, but still must stay indoors,
To cook and sweep and do besides all of the other chores.
I don't believe that servant girls read newspapers at all,
For six times I've inserted this—I yet have one to call:
"WANTED — A girl to do housework in small family. Must not be good looking. Liberal wages.—Mrs. Newbride, 210 X avenue.
And why is it Jack laughs at this and says, "I'll tell you flat,
The want work wonders, but they'll bring no girl to answer that!"

Unreliable History.

'Twas a dark and dismal day in merrie England. The fog was dense and mud was deep and the rain it drizzled dolefully, as good Queen Elizabeth, she of the Pains fireworks hair, better known to her bridge partners as Liz, started for her walk.

Now it happens that there was a fine old sport by the name of Sir Walter Raleigh, who had been making eyewinks at Queen Liz. He was tired of working for a living and the old throne looked better to a man than a feather bed looks to a man who has been shoeing mules all day. He tried to get a stand-in with Liz by making a trip to America, but said trip, while it was a good press agent stunt for Walt, didn't cop the heart and hand of Queen Liz. Oh, no! She was an old maid for fair.

Walt kept banding around and making a noodle of himself, however, and upon this certain rainy day when Liz went out for a constitutional he was lurking behind the telephones pones in the immediate vicinity. Finally Queen Liz came to a spot in the road where the asphalt had been worn baldheaded and the mud had formed. She had to cross.

"Here is my chance," hissed Sir Walt between his teeth, and he ran to the mud puddle and spread his new cravenette over it so that she could trip lightly and gaily across without accumulating any English realty upon her slippers. And she tripped across.

"That ought to knock off the persimmon," thought Walt to himself. "If she won't fall for a neat and nifty piece of chivalry like that, there will never be anything doing."

He said: "How about it, Liz? Do I get you?"

Did he get her?

Not on your zinc etching. That's no way to win 'em. What did liz go and do to him, after he had been so polite? She went and let them chop his pompadour off right close under his chin. That's what she went and done for him. Oh, them wimmen.

Signs of the Times.

Physicians have forbidden Harry Lauder to play "Hamlet." Occasionally the phyicians issue an order that is strictly worth while.

A Kansas City woman paid $50 for a husband. People should be more careful of their money.

Milk is now being recommended as a hair tonic. Sure. Look at the baldheaded babies who have grown hair.

Anyhow, the modern woman does not have to worry for fear that her petticoat drags, because she doesn't wear one.

Fashionable women in Paris have discarded rouge, according to report. That sounds like a barefaced lie.

Mr. Zazzwolzwalzsky lies in Pittsburgh. He owes a great deal to the last letter of the alphabet.

Did You Ever Hear These?

"Oh, to be sure, you had to send my pearl shirt studs to the laundry in the other shirt. How am I going to hold my shirt bosom together tonight, do you think? I will use a little glue, I suppose."

"It seems as though you want 50 cents for milk tickets about three times a day. Are we running a soda fountain lunch, or what?"

"Oh, yes, I get my face and hands all soap and water and then grope around in the bathroom for half an hour without finding a towel. Class to that always."

Plainfield Theatre.

That Manager Shannon leaves no stone unturned in giving his patrons the best there is to be gotten in the amusement line is evidenced by the unusually high calibre of the vaudeville show appearing at the Plainfield Theatre the first three days of this week. The house was filled to its capacity last night and the crowd was a most enthusiastic one—voicing its approval by prolonged applause. In connection with the vaudeville feature films are shown at each performance, including the popular Pathe Weekly, the animated pictorial of domestic and foreign current events. Taken all in all the entire performance generates enough fun to satisfy the most persistent mirth seeker.

The headliner on the bill, "The Country Girls," abounds with jollity, the ten pretty maidens composing the cast, engaging the attention of the audience for nearly half an hour. They offer an act replete with high class singing and dancing specialties, and their act is enhanced by their own scenery and costumes. "Lonesome Corners," a "rube" comedy scenic sketch, abounds with humor, two men and women taking part in the production. The bill is rounded out by "The Village Trio," high class singers of popular songs and Gilbert Ward, the comedian.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday's program will feature the return engagement of last season's sensational kid act, "The Junior Follies of 1916" a miniature musical revue of all the Broadway stars. Beside the headliner, the bill will include four other high class acts and the usual run of photoplays.

The attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, September 18, Monday matinee and night, will be Max Spigel's "Merry Rounders." This is announced as the most pretentious of the many presentations of burlesque. The featured members of the cast are Abe Reynolds and George F. Hayes, who are surrounded with a stellar cast of performers, numbering among them May Latham, Eugene MacGregor, Elizabeth Jane, Frank Ward and Ruth Wesley. There is a chorus said to be made up of girls chosen for their comeliness and vivacity as well as for their vocal abilities, besides a large representation of male voices. Eleven scenes are employed in the production, a number of which are described as singularly beautiful and there is a display of costume who prodigality and originality of design are calculated to compare favorably with these used in the most elaborate of musical comedy. For this attraction there will be no advance in prices.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

Three thousand women voters packed the Auditorium Theatre in Spokane, Wash, recently to hear Justice Charles E. Hughes, who again reiterated his previous declaration for equal suffrage. In explanation of his attitude on the question of votes for women, Mr. Hughes said, in part:

"As I contemplated American affairs, sitting aloof from actual participation in them, I reached the conclusion that suffrage for women was inevitable in this growing and developing republic of the twentieth century.

"I seemed to me that it was the part of wisdom not to make necessary a continuous agitation by a fruitless opposition. I desired that this question, which is a fundamental one with respect to the composition of the electorate, should be settled at an early date.

"Women as citizens should go into the discussion of political questions as citizens and not from a sex standpoint; and I hope the day will not be long deferred when the agitation for the right to vote in any part of this land will be unnecessary and the right will be recognized throughout the country.

"I think the question is one which should be settled for the entire country, and settled as speedily as possible; and, therefore, while I do not propose to add, and could not add, to the platform of my party, I stated my personal conviction that the amendment should be submitted and ratified."

Speaking of the future of America, the candidate went on to say: "We cannot contemplate the conditions of the twentieth century without knowing that there is to be a new spirit in the United States if our prosperity is to have a firm foundation. It must be a spirit which demands efficient, impartial government in the interest of all the people.

One would infer from a reading of the columns of the liquor press that the prohibition movement is supported and promoted by a small body of professional paid agitators, whose purpose is solely selfish and mercenary. How far this is from the truth is evidenced by a glance at the personnel of the "dry" campaign committee of any campaign, local or State. Take for instance the representative committee which led the recent victorious Duluth campaign. Its chairman was the president of the board of trade, the five vice-presidents were a Catholic bishop, a business agent of the carpenter's union, a retired mining man, a socialistic trades union engineer, and a physician. The committee also included a Protestant Episcopal bishop, another Protestant minister, bricklayers, grain men, lumber dealers, attorneys, painters, real estate men, salesmen, engineers and department heads in wholesale houses.

These citizens in every sense of the word, represent the "the people." They are the men who do the actual work and pay the taxes of the city, the individuals to whom the churches and benevolent organizations look for support, and who make the municipality a social and economic power in the nation.

To doubt that such a combination of intelligence, efficiency and conservation would be victorious is to question the foundation upon which our civilization rests. Commercialized evil, no matter how great its moneyed power, cannot hope to withstand it.

During the past two years, an interesting experiment has been made by the Philadelhia Quartz Company to prove to their employes that total abstinence pays. The company decided to make a 10 per cent. increase in the wages of those emloyes who would agree to sign a pledge. As the reason for their action, the officers of the company said they believed a man who does not drink and whose brain is normal can do better work and a greater volume of work than does one who indulges in liquor. The company desired to deal fairly with their employes and gave them what they were worth and as they felt the non-drinking men were more valuable than the drinkers they concluded to adopt the pledge system.

At the beginning the signing of the pledge was voluntary, but now every man entering the employment of the company is expected to sign one. All of the 500 employes, except a very few of the older ones took the pledge, and they were retained on the payroll and nothing said about the matter.

At the end of two years both employers and employes speak enthusiastically of the success of the system. "The benefits both to us and the men have been manifold," a representative of the company states. "For the men it has resulted in better pay, better home life and greater opportunities for their families, while for us it has meant fewer accidents and a greater output of work."

- Proctor's Theatre -

In "The Devil's Needle," the Triangle drama to be seen at Proctor's today, Norma Talmadge and Tully Marshall are co-starred, and the latter is seen in the kind of part in which he achieved his greatest fame on the speaking stage—that of a morphine fiend. It was in Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City," produced on Broadway several months after his death, that Marshall appeared as a victim of the "devil's needle," and gave such a marvelous impersonation that he scored the individual hit of the production and his work was more largely responsible for the success of "The City" than any other feature of the play. Norma Talmadge hasn't a family of Triangle kiddies in this production. While she unquestionably makes a charming mother—as, indeed, she is appealing in whatever role she undertakes—it proves a welcome variation to show her at intervals as an unclaimed treasure. Of course, she is in love in "The Devil's Needle." She has the role of an artist's model. In addition today a funny Keystone creation is shown as is also the 14th chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine."

Tomorrow by previous arrangement a double feature program will be offered consisting of the William Fox story of the race track "Sporting Blood," starring Dorothy Bernard and Glen White, and a pleasing Metro feature entitled "Dorman's Divorce," with Lionel Barrymore assuming the stellar part.

Thursday will bring to Proctor's what is considered the most realistic drama pertaining to the present European war. It is entitled "Shell 43," and stars H. B. Warner, the well-known dramatic actor, who scored such a decided success in "Alias Jimmy Valentine." "Shell 43" is a Thomas H. Ince production and as such recommends it as a splendid feature, both in story, direction, cast and lighting effects.

WILSON "PAYS HIS RENT."

President's $2,500 Check Will Go to Monmouth County Hospitals

Congressman Thomas J. Scully of the Third New Jersey district has received from President Wilson a check for $2,500. This sum will be divided between the hospitals in Monmouth county shortly. When Shadow Lawn was proffered to the president for the summer as a residence he wanted to pay for its use, but when he found he could not do this he insisted that he be allowed to contribute to the hospitals an amount equal to what he would have paid elsewhere for a summer home.

A committee of Monmouth county citizens, headed by Congressman Scully, arranged for the use of Shadow Lawn, Captain Greenhut, the owner, on learning for whom the place was wanted, declining to accept rent for it and also binding himself to see that it was kept up so far as the grounds were concerned.

Mr. Wilson, except for a day's stay when he was notified of his renomination, has had practically no use of the place.

HIS CHILLY RECEPTION.

Mark Twain's Visitor When the Humorist Was Absentminded.

Absentmindedness was characteristic of Mark Twain. He lived so much in the world within that to him the material outer world was often vague and shadowy.

Once when he was knocking the balls about in the billiard room George, the colored butler, a favorite and privileged household character, brought up a card. So many canvassers came to sell him one thing and another that Clemens promptly assumed this to be one of them. George insisted mildly, but firmly, that though a stranger the caller was certainly a gentleman, and Clemens grumblingly descended the stairs.

As he entered the parlor the caller rose and extended his hand. Clemens took it rather limply, for he had noticed some water colors and engravings leaning against the furniture as if for exhibition, and he was instantly convinced that the caller was a picture canvasser.

Inquiries by the stranger as to Mrs. Clemens and the children did not change Mark Twain's conclusion. He was polite, but unresponsive, and gradually worked the visitor toward the front door. An inquiry as to the home of Charles Dudley Warner caused the caller to be shown eagerly in that direction.

Clemens, on the way back to the billiard room, heard Mrs. Clemens call him—she was ill that day.

"Youth!"

"Yes, Livy." He went in for a word.

"George brought me Mr. B.'s card. I hope you were nice to him; the B.'s were so nice to us once in Europe while you were gone."

"The B.'s? Why, Livy!"

"Yes, of course, and I asked him to be sure to call when he came to Hartford!"—Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Merchant Lost His Two Ships.

"Why so sorrowful?"

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

WHEN sleepy time came daddy told Jack and Evelyn this story: "Once there was a merchant who had but one child, a nice little boy so small he could hardly walk. The merchant had two splendid ships. On them he had put a great cargo of rich things, all his wealth. Then he sent them on a long voyage, hoping to make a great deal of money selling his goods. But instead of gold the news came that the two ships were both lost in a great storm at sea. So from being a rich man the merchant found himself so very poor that he had nothing left but a small plot of land which his house was on.

"Of course this was a great misfortune to a man with a small boy to bring up and educate, and often at night the merchant used to walk around and around on his little plot of land, wondering how he could ease his mind from the trouble on it and build up his fortunes again.

"One day while he was roaming around taking no comfort in the thought of what he once was and what he was now, all of a sudden there stood before him a rough looking little black dwarf.

"'Prithee, my friend, why so sorrowful?' the dwarf asked the merchant.

"'If you could do me any good I would gladly tell you,' said the merchant.

"'Who knows but I may,' replied the little man. 'Tell me what ails you and perhaps you will find that I may be of some use.'

"Then the merchant told the dwarf how all his wealth had gone to the bottom of the sea; how he had nothing left but the little plot of land they stood on.

"'Oh, don't trouble yourself about that!' the dwarf encouraged him. 'Just promise to bring me here twelve years from now whatever you chance to meet on your way home and I will give you as much gold as you want.'

"The merchant thought this was not too much to ask. He thought that probably the first thing he would meet on the way home would be his cat or his dog or something like that. He forgot all about his little boy, Helmel. So he gladly agreed to the dwarf's bargain and signed and sealed a bond to give the dwarf twelve years from then the first thing he happened to meet on his way home," daddy ended the bedtime story.

"Was it really a dwarf or some prince that an old witch had turned into a dwarf?" asked Jack.

"Ah, that's the whole story, my dear!" cried daddy, with a kiss.

Training a Husband

by MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Southy Frets and Stews and Gets His Wife to the Party Early.

"Now we don't want to be late this evening, as long as these people have been kind enough to invite us to join their club." Morris Southy took out his watch. "It is now a quarter of seven." Marian did not answer. She had made all possible preparations before supper so that she might not keep her husband waiting. She began to pick up the dishes, moving quietly and effectively.

"You certainly are not going to wash the dishes, are you?" Morris' tone implied that washing dishes was a grave misdemeanor.

"I certainly must put the food away and gather up the dishes or they will draw flies," answered Marian evasively.

"You always undertake to do a day's work after it is time to get ready to go anywhere," fretted her husband. "As soon as you clear the table leave everything and do for once be on time."

By this time Marian had gathered the dishes and was removing the cloth.

"Roger," she called softly, "you come and begin washing the dishes for mother while I get the baby to bed."

"Where is your mother?" asked Morris a few minutes later, appearing in the kitchen door.

"She is putting the baby to bed," answered the sturdy little fellow, washing round and round on a plate.

"Marian, are you getting ready?" The strident voice roused the baby and he set up a yell.

"Morris, if you want me to get ready for mercy sake stop calling at the foot of the stairs." Marian's voice showed extreme annoyance.

Morris marched off grumbling that he certainly would not take so much pains to get her ready on time if it was not necessary.

Florence and Frank were hastily gotten into their night clothes and were speeded up on their prayers. Marian had combed her hair with such nervous hurry that the result was far from satisfactory, but she turned away from the mirror with a despairing gesture.

"I wonder what it would seem like to get ready to go anywhere and not be so rushed that all pleasure was taken from the outing," she reflected bitterly. She stole to the kitchen and whispered to Roger to wash and get ready for bed and she would finish up.

"It is only half-past seven and I surely can get ready in ten minutes," she thought. She poured the scalding water over the dishes and was wiping them with such nervous haste that she dropped a cup on the floor and the crash brought Morris to the scene to reprove Roger's carelessness. When he saw Marian working at the kitchen table his irritation knew no bounds.

"I thought you were getting ready," he snapped.

"I am all ready but slipping on my dress," was the apologetic answer.

"I do believe you would wash dishes if the house was afire before you could leave. Why in the name of sense can you not leave the dishes until morning?"

"For the good and sufficient reason that we have not enough dishes to set the table twice without washing them." She turned on him with fire in her eyes. "I do not care enough about going anywhere to come home and wash dishes after midnight, and I have so much to do in the morning that I can scarcely get through anyway." Marian resumed her work and Morris retreated to digest his astonishment. He began to fear that there were large tracts of undiscovered territory in his wife that he had never dreamed of.

Marian hurried into her dress and fumbled the fastenings so that she was reduced to a nervous tremor before she finally presented herself in the living room ready to go.

"I hope the baby will not disturb you, Mrs. Fisk," she said, trying to smile at the old lady who had come to stay with the children.

They were the first to arrive at Nell Morton's and as Marian was shown into the large beautifully furnished bedroom she said nervously:

"I believe, Mrs. Morton, as I am early I will try and make my hair look a little less disreputable. Mr. Southy is one of those painfully punctual men who do not allow their wives to get ready in peace," she laughed musically.

Invasions of Russia.

The first great invasion of Russia was that of the Huns, a race of fierce and warlike Asiatics, who swept over eastern Europe in the fourth century.

In the thirteenth century the golden horde of Tartars captured Russia, and from 1238 to 1462 the country was under the yoke of the Mongols. In 1395 Tamerlane invaded Russia, but retired. In 1462 the Slavs again gained the ascendency, and Ivan III. (the Great) founded the present monarchy and introduced firearms and cannon into Russia.

In 1479 there was another great invasion of Tartars, but they were driven out. In 1613 the present royal family, the Romanoffs, gained the throne. In 1700 the Swedes invaded Russia, but after several victories they were routed.

The last great invasion of Russia was that of Napoleon. His disastrous retreat from Russia, in which most of his army was destroyed, marked the beginning of the end of his power.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Invisible Clock.

A public clock which can be heard, but not seen, is one of London's curious possessions. It is in the tower of St. Mary Abbot's church, Kensington, and is the only public clock in the immediate neighborhood. It chimes the quarters and the hours, but commits itself no further. It has no dial, no hands, no outward and visible sign of any kind to show that it is a clock. This eccentricity, it is explained, is the result of two causes—one aesthetic, the other financial. When the tower was built in 1879 a clock was suggested as an afterthought, but the architect protested that it would mean the addition of fifteen feet to the tower and the ruin of its cherished proportions. A second point was that the church, having but slender funds, could not afford a clock with a dial. A compromise was arrived at by installing the works of a chiming clock in the belfry without dial or hands.—Pearson's.

Profitable Pebbles.

The flint pebble industry gives occupation to many women and children along the French coast lying between Havre and Dieppe. The pebbles collected in and near Havre are selected for their spherical shape and are used exclusively for pulverizing in certain industries, particularly in the manufacture of cement and in copper mines, being employed in the interior of large cylinders. In the cement industry the slow turning of the pebbles produces a powder which becomes an ingredient of the cement, while in the copper industry the metal is freed of all impurities by the grinding operation. The same kind of pebbles is used for crushing purposes in the manufacture of paint. Another important use of flint pebbles is in the manufacture of porcelain, the pebbles for this purpose being found between Fecamp and Calais.—Philadelphia Press.

Feminine Diplomacy.

"I spoke a few words with Mrs. Dulwaite this morning," Mrs. Gadder said.

"And what did you say?" Mr. Gadder asked.

"Oh, I raved about her gown and told her how well she was looking."

"My!"

"If I am not invited to the old frump's next reception it won't be my fault."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WITHDRAWAL OF 15,000 TROOPS MAY MEAN EARLY DEMOBILIZATION

Guardsmen From Nine States Have Been Ordered Mustered Out — Paratyphoid Holds One New York Regiment.

Father Seeks Release of "Invalid" Pennsylvania Trooper Who Won Ten Round Bout—What They Did to Hooligan.

THE 15,000 national guardsmen who are returning from the border under the recent order of the war department have been ordered mustered out of the federal service. The guardsmen remaining on the border will stay there for the present. The war department's announcement was made in the following statement:

"The secretary of war directs that all the organizations of the national guard in the federal service recently ordered from the border to their respective mobilization camps be mustered out of the federal service as soon as practicable and returned to the normal status of national guard troops, except in the case of the Fourteenth New York regiment, which is to be held in service at its mobilization camp pending the prevalence in that regiment of para-typhoid.

"As soon as it can be safely done this regiment also will be mustered out. Similar precaution should be taken with any other organization returning from the border suffering from any infection or which is under suspicion of being infected."

The troops affected are three regiments from New York, two from New Jersey, one from Maryland, two from Illinois, two from Missouri, one from California, one from Oregon, one from Washington and one from Louisiana. These units comprise in the aggregate about 15,000 national guardsmen.

The plan for the mustering out of the regiments will be executed under the various departmental commanders within whose jurisdiction these organizations are placed. In many instances where there is no reason to hold them because of disease infection the mustering out will be done immediately. It is expected that all the organizations except the Fourteenth New York will be mustered out as soon as the necessary routine is concluded.

The Yale battery mobilized at Tobyhanna, Pa., was ordered to Niantic, Conn., where it will be mustered out.

The regiments affected by the order are: Second, Fourteenth and Seventy-first New York infantry; First and Fourth New Jersey infantry, Fourth Maryland infantry, First and Second Illinois infantry, First and Third Missouri infantry, Fifth California infantry, Third Oregon infantry, Second Washington infantry and First Louisiana infantry.

Students Going Home.

General Funston, at San Antonio, is perfecting plans to send home three student organizations. These are Battery F, First Illinois artillery, to Fort Sheridan; Battery B, First Indiana artillery, to Fort Benjamin Harrison, and Battery F, First Minnesota artillery, to Fort Snelling.

The order for the entraining of these troops was preceded by an edict of the war department, in which the order permitting the discharge of national guardsmen with persons dependent on them was revoked. This order was embodied in a circular being mailed from southern division headquarters. Under the army appropriation bill provision is made for the aid of persons dependent on members of the guard.

"He Ached In the Middle."

Three good stories are making the rounds at Camp Stewart, El Paso, where Pennsylvania regiments are quartered. The stories came out of applications by Philadelphia relatives for discharges of militiamen, one of which had to be translated. It said:

"Discharge me my brother back to me. That boy I took care of like a mother. He cost me lots of money. I sent him to school. I fed him. I made him his bed. That cost money. I sent him once to business college. It was not a free school. Then into the business he was to come and work for me. It was an investment. But always he ached in the middle. To the hospital I sent him. Much money that cost me. He bettered. But he did not join the business. He joined your army. That's going to cost me all the money I spent in saving his life if you don't send him back to work in the business. He's sick. He's sick all over, feets to the head. He's bad in the head. Don't let him battle a fight and get himself killed until he comes home. There's no insurance."

Another letter, received from a Philadelphia business man, contained the following paragraph:

"I let my boy go to the border under the impression that he was of age. In fact, he told me he was. His mother has convinced me now that he is just seventeen."

"Invalid" Fought Bout.

The third letter from Philadelphia, also written by a fond father, describes his son as suffering every form of ailment from broken arches to a broken heart.

"He is in a most delicate state of health," the epistle reads, "and we would never have permitted him to enlist had we known he contemplated such a thing. His death from exposure would be upon your head."

The captain sent for the man and said:

"So you are Alberger?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you are sick?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where did you get that black eye?"

"At the fete Saturday night, sir."

"How?"

"Why, sir, I licked Kid Roth in ten rounds."

Down in the Second Pennsylvania regiment they're telling the story of the curious visitor and the three trails. He was inspecting the camp under the usual broiling sun. And he developed the usual thirst. Finally he crossed a well beaten path. He made no comment, but for several minutes later was much preoccupied. A little later he crossed another. Still he was silent. But by the time he reached the third the sun had parched his palate and he turned into it.

"Where are you going?" queried his host and guide.

He stopped at the flap of the tent, heard laughter and song inside, turned a knowing expression upon his host, winked and made a sweeping explanatory movement with his forearm.

A few minutes later the visitor emerged, and his guide asked him with a broad grin if he had found the liquid refreshment.

The reply was a sharp monosyllabic "Yes!"

"What!" The guide stood dumfounded.

"Yes, I found it—water! But I was looking for something else. Why didn't you tip me off?"

"Tip you to what?"

"To the fact that all the well beaten paths in this blamed brigade lead to chaplains' tents!"

Chaplains Busy.

Many are the little tragedies and secret griefs and worrying romances that are unfolded daily behind the canvas flaps of the tents occupied by regimental chaplains.

Chaplain Robert J. McFetridge of the Second regiment of Philadelphia and Chaplain Clifford P. Futcher of the First are usually found, with sleeves rolled up and perspiring, hatcheting at some new box of surprises just received for the boys from the east.

Y. M. C. A. huts, of which the Philadelphia boys have one all to themselves, are the temples of worship of the army, and toward these each night thousands of the militiamen wend their way.

They're telling a good yarn down here about a private they've dubbed "Hooligan." He's a member of Company C of the Second regiment of Philadelphia. Company C prides itself on being just about as godly as any organization composed of human males can be, which doesn't signify that they pass their off hours knitting.

There are about 100 men in the outfit—fine, fit, strapping fellows in the pink of condition, ready for a fight or a frolic. "Hooligan," it seems, while willing to supply the fight, was not willing to supply the frolic. Nor was he willing to keep up the sanitary traditions of the outfit.

"Hooligan," in fact, was suspected of not having had a bath for about eight weeks. That gave the boys, stanch in their tradition, the idea for the big frolic.

A baby eyed corporal, who had biceps of steel just wasting under his drab shirtsleeves, was delegated to introduce "Hooligan" to Dame Nature's most precious daughter, "Miss Aqua Pura."

"Who is this dame anyway?" queried "Hooligan" suspiciously. "I want to meet no skirts. Take Aqua and give her a knockdown to some one else."

"She's crazy to meet you," suggested the corporal.

"Is she? On the square, is she?" "Hooligan's" chest swelled.

"She's waiting down in the shower bath. Oh, you 'Hooly!'"

"Hooligan" accompanied the little corporal, stepping into the shower somewhat doubtfully. From behind the shower walls and the maze of tents came a small army of men.

"Where is she, corporal? No girl here!" yelled "Hooligan."

They then proceeded to give "Hooligan" his fight. And they took the frolic in the stripping of him. And the soiled tradition of the company they cleansed by tossing "Hooligan" bodily into the wash.

Baths For Maryland Guard.

When the Fourth Maryland infantry arrived at the Baltimore and Ohio coach yards in Chicago Dr. John Dill Robertson arranged to give them baths at the William Loeffler, Pilsen and Simon Baruch public baths. After refreshing themselves in the baths the men entrained for their camp at Laurel, Md.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. DEEP CROWED HATS VERY NOVEL.

By Mary Glynn.

A particular interesting feature of the semi-tailored hats is the noticeable amount of emboridery used on those that are developed in felt or zibeline. The deep crowns and rather narrow brims are also notable since the emphasis important of the trimming. One of the very latest imports is [illegible] blue zibeline felt and is fascinatingly trimmed with a dainty but rich design in silver thread. A saucy bow looped in back affords the only other trimming. Another instance of this type is evident in a similar model of beige colored felt, its narrow brim edged with summer ermine and the crown enhanced by a landscape scene worked in dainty outline stitch and hand colored. The effect was exceedingly novel and very attractive.

CHOIR RETURNS SUNDAY.

The chorus choir of the First Baptist church which has been enjoying a vacation for several weeks, will resume its regular service at the church on Sunday, with Howard Case, organist, in charge.

—Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

KIDDIE'S HAT.

The hats shown for wee kiddies are undoubtedly more fascinating this season than ever. There are adorable velvet poke bonnets with puffings of lace and ribbon with soft plumes. Invariably there are ribbon streamers or a chin strap. Cunning sets consisting of bonnet and scarf are also shown ornamented with chiffon flowers and foliage. The mushroom shape is also extremely smart and wearable. A clever instance of it is shown. The hat is of Joffre blue faille silk and is faced with a lace trimmed ruffle of French batiste. The crown is softened by a band of velvet ribbon and clusters of dainty flowers.

THE Y. W. C. A.

The orchestra will meet tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock for rehearsal.

The first fall meeting of the Business Women's Club will be held in the association Friday night. At this session plans for the winter season will be discussed. A social hour with refreshments will be enjoyed in conclusion.

Raking 'Em Over

GIANTS IN GREAT FORM.

The double victory of the Giants on Saturday was certainly a brilliant performance, worthy of commendation. Fans now believe that McGraw has gotten together a team that is second to none in the big leagues. In fact, McGraw believes the same thing. He says that he hated to break up the old Giant machine, but that he simply had to do something. That he was on the point of either quitting baseball or making one great final effort was made known by the newspapers some time ago. McGraw is a manager with ability, although some people judge that his ability has been over-estimated. Connie Mack has been considered the "best of all managers." No matter what course Connie pursues it is highly probable that he will still be estimated as "great." But with "Mugsy" McGraw all is different. Let Mugsy do something rash and he will be quickly spoken of as "a has-been." Perhaps McGraw's several imprudent tactics may have affected his standing in certain circles. But, still, there is no getting away from the fact that John can lead a team, when he has one to pilot. And we, in common with other fans and writers, believe that the Giants are rapidly rounding into the expected form. The style of baseball put up against the Phillies stamps the McGrawites as "comers." While it is not expected that they will win the pennant, it is expected that they will put an end to one team's chances of taking the flag. Just now "Jawn" is devoting his time to assisting Wilbert Robinson in his race for the flag.

POLL PERRITT, IRON MAN.

"Iron Man" stunts are catching. Rube Benton, of the Giants, requested McGraw to allow him to do a "McGinnity." Benton captured the first game, but fell down on the second attempt. He made a game effort, however, and is entitled to considerable commendation. When Perritt essayed his "Iron Man" stunt there were those who felt sure that he would not get away with either of the games. But "Poll" sailed right on through and came out with colors flying. His first exhibition was clever; his second still better. Perritt enters the Hall of Fame, not as a youth, but as somewhat of an "old-timer."

CRABBING THE UMPIRE.

Local fans should cease panning "his umps." It is all right to object to a decision, but we fail to see wherein the fans have any license to get insulting in so doing. There is a certain amount of "talk" that comes under the guise of rooting and there is also a certain amount or "insults" that are plainly out of place on the baseball field. Britt Martin has been doing the umpiring at Avon Oval. Britt knows the game from start to finish. He is a square fellow and favors no one. All of his decisions have been given to the best of his ability—and he is quite able. It is reported that he is considering "throwing up the sponge." He has been panned of late, and for no apparent reason. There is no better umpire in this city and the fans should get together and prevail on Britt to reconsider his action. If a substitute is obtained trouble is likely to occur. Every effort should be made to Mr. Martin to continue. He is all right.

THE ANNOUNCER'S MISTAKE.

No, gentle reader, this is not a "movie" caption. It is merely a title for a pathetic little article appertaining to the coming game between the Royal Giants and the Tabs. At the Dunellen-Tab game last Sunday announcement was made that the Royal Giants would play on Avon Oval Sunday. Several fans promptly suggested that the announcement should read "Philadelphia Colored Giants" and not "Royal Giants." All of which is true. If the Royals trim the Tabs, it cannot be said that the trick was accomplished by any "local" talent. Well might it be said that Houston's braves were the conquerors. Personally, we wonder if the manager of the Philadelphia Colored Giants intends booking any other game for Sunday.

DONOVAN MIGHT GO.

"Wild Bill" Donovan, of the Yankees, might be given the gate after this season's work is completed. At least that's the report that has reached our ears. Just why Manager Donovan is carded to go we do not know. It is said that a very prominent National League manager is to take over the management of the Yankees and that he chuckles every time the Yanks lose a game. If the Yanks continue to play the Athletics this manager will be in gloomy mood. Just suppose Donovan was manager of the Dodgers.

BOSTONIANS COUNTED OUT.

It is the prevailing opinion that the Baston Braves are "cracking under the strain." They dropped their seventh straight game the other day. Their pitchers do not seem to be going very well and three of them—Hughes, Nehf and Allen—are out of the game for the rest of the season. Dick Rudolph, the former Fordham star, is being called upon to bear the brunt of the work and Dick seems to be slipping. George Stallings, it is said, is begining to realize that his boys are about to give up all hopes of capturing the flag.

A SPORTING CITY.

"Newark has long had the reputation of being one of the heaviest patrons of sports of its size in the country. This reputation has been enhanced greatly. It probably would be conservative to estimate that 100,000 persons in Essex county witnessed sporting events of some kind Saturday and Sunday. Allowing 30,000 for the A. A. U. meet, 10,000 for the bike track Sunday, about 1,500 for the International League baseball, we have 41,500. The Ironsides, one of the leading semi-pro teams, had about 3,000 Sunday. Reports coming into the News yesterday morning indicate that there were between thirty and forty semi-pro baseball crowds scattered about the county Sunday morning and afternoon, where the attendance ranged from 1,000 to 2,000."—Newark News.

Managers of Boston, American League, teams seem to have a habit of winning. In addition to leading a band of unusually capable players, these managers have a pleasing way of running their outfits. They have been intensely popular with their charges and have been successful. Jake Stahl, it is true, was "ousted" through internal influence, but still he was very popular. And Bill Carrigan knows no peer when it comes to popularity.

BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT GIVEN DECIDED BOOST AT RALLY MEETING IN Y. M. C. A.

Twelve Thousand Dollars to Be Raised in Few Weeks—Many Prominent Citizens at Meeting—Detailed Report of the Work at Camp Ackerman Submitted.

Twelve thousand dollars must be raised in this city during the next few weeks, starting with September 19, to put the Boy Scout movement in this city on a paying and practical basis. This action was decided upon at the meeting of the Boy Scout Council at the Y. M. C. A. last evening, at which President Theodore G. Davis presided.

The city's educators, legal profession, merchants, commuting residents and parents were well represented by men who heard from Field Commissioner Butler, of National Scout Headquarters, the story of what a paid scout executive in a community can do, such as has been done at Paterson, East Orange, Montclair and similar places.

It was explained that this fund is to be used exclusively in Plainfield for Plainfield boys, in co-operation with the Y. M. C. A. activities for, in the words of President William D. Murray, of the Y. M. C. A., "the Boy Scout work is a training course for the future adult membership of the larger organization. It gives to the greater work trained material for effective Y. M. C. A. work in later years."

The money to be raised will carry on the Boy Scout work here for three years. The plan is to establish a modest scout headquarters, a school for scoutmasters and a scouting bureau for civic service, advanced scoutcraft and similar features for the development of the boy of scout age in Plainfield and vicinity.

Edward Harding, who was chairman of the finance and camp committees, reported on the work of Camp Ackerman. The activities of this camp are a revelation to many persons who little realize the scope of scout work in this city, especially in the fact that a scout school had been established and was operating encouragingly when the activities of the camp had to be abandoned solely on account of the epidemic.

Commissioner Searing reported that M. A. Korff had tentatively accepted the scoutmastership of Champion 5 Troop at the First Presbyterian church and that plans were being considered for the establishment of a Boy Scout Band in this city. Applications for enrollment in such a musical organization may be sent to Commissioner Searing.

Runyon's Pickups just naturally defeated McMahon's All Stars at Dunellen yesterday, the score of the contest being 9 to 6. Although the "Pickups" were outhit by their rivals, they managed to make this smaller amount of hits to count. F. Schneiderwin played with both teams.

RUFUS LAREW MADE BASKETBALL MANAGER

Will Have Complete Charge Of Tab Team and is Peculiarly Capable.

At the regular monthly meeting of the T. A. B. Society last evening Rufus Larew was chosen manager of this year's basketball team. Mr. Larew has been an active member of the Tabs for sometime and has been an ardent supporter of the athletic activities of the society. His knowledge of sports in general and of basketball in particular peculiarly fits him for the position of manager.

That some stellar talent will be unearthed this year is the firm belief of those interested in the movement to place one of the best basketball teams that ever represented the Tabs on the courts. It is highly probable that Eugene Lidgate will be again secured as coach. A schedule will be arranged in a few days and managers of basketball teams are advised to get in touch with Mr. Larew at once.

League Limelight

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

FRANK BRENNAN.

We all have our "nicknames" and nom de plumes, therefore it is not surprising that Frank Brennan has his. Come forward, "Kid."

This youthful outfielder of the Tabs has been playing baseball ever since he attended school. His ability to hit all kinds of pitching has pushed him to the top. His fielding prowess has kept him on the top rung of the Ladder of Success. Of all the younger players in the Tab cohorts Brennan is the most promising and most popular. Last year, while performing in a City League attraction, Brennan broke his leg, a fatal slide to second being responsible for the injury. Fortunately, "Kid's" accident did not prove serious and did not deprive him of his love and instinct for baseball. On the other hand, it seemed to make him more eager to play. And, believe us, he can play. Watch him on Sunday.

As to his popularity we can say this much: He is one of the best liked fellows in the city. The word "character" is written all over him. Keep up the good work, Francis.

In the Sport Topics tomorrow we will discuss the merits of Joe Morley.

IMPORTANT MATCH ON.

Residents of Rahway and vicinity will be given an opportunity to see four tennis champions inaction at the Ilderan Outing Club on Wednesday evening of this week. On the night tennis courts of the club, Walter Merrill Hall and Frederick B. Alexander will meet Harold A. Throckmorton, and Lindsay Dunham.

GAMES CARDED.

The Dunellen A. C. will play at Hyde Field on Saturday, according to reports that come via our Dunellen scribe." Also, the Scotch Plains team will entertain the Dunellen A. C. aggregation on Sunday.

ADAM BLAIR MAY DRIVE REUBEN HAL

It is Reported That Match Race Will Be Run at Waverly.

The defeat of A. C. Hensler's Reuben Hal by Dr. George C. Becket's Justabelle a week ago at the Waverly track has revived talk of a match race between these pacers before the local racing season is concluded.

When Reuben Hal made his sensational entry at the beginning of the season by taking the measure of Justabelle and other classy steppers a special match between the pair was a topic of discussion among horsemen. Both owners, it is said, stand ready to back their respective horses in a match. If so, the race would without doubt provoke far more interesting that the memorable clash between Nettie Patch and Justabelle last year.

Justabelle is 6 years old and was foaled at Stoney Ford Farm in Goshen. Reuben Hal is 4 years old and came here as a greener from Goshen last spring.

Reuben Hal has been driven by Adam Blair, of this city, for some time and, if the match race is run, considerable local interest will be attached to the event.

SOUTHERN LEAGUER TO PERFORM HERE

Manager Tommy Apgar, of the Dunellen baseball team, has announced his lineup for Saturday, when his outfit is scheduled to permit Pete Simmons' Royal Giants to redeem themselves.

The lineup is an exceptionally good one and includes among others, a Southern League star. This gentleman's name is Willerington, a third baseman who has played with the Mobile team of the Southern League. Willerginton is a friend of George Trust, the keet centre-fielder of the Dunellen team. He is said to be clever and the fans of this vicinity are anxiously awaiting developments.

Johnny Dixon is going to get another chance at the Royals. Johnny was forced to seek shelter when he last faced the colored players, but Tommy Apgar believes that Johnny can withstand the heavy fire of the Philadelphia Colored Giant artillery. Jack Garretson will play first base.

WHO IS THE "MACK" OF THE CITY LEAGUE?

Our little plan of picking an all star City League team evidently met with popular approval. Several fans submitted all star selections and, at least three of these were published.

We now believe that the fans should be given an opportunity to submit the name of their choice for the most capable manager. There are six leaders in the city circuit and every one of these gentlemen knows the game from start to finish. Of course, there is always one who is just a little better than the others. Now, who is this "one"? All answers must be accompanied by well outlined "reasons."

Yale.

Yale coaches are patting each other on the back right now and hoping that the old Eli bugaboo, quarterback, is banished at last. With Robinson, the former Pittsburg University quarterback, eligible and showing up in great style already this problem seems solved at least for this year. Robinson undoubtedly will get the first call on the varsity, he having already been selected to drill the first team in signal formation. With most of the ineligibles of last year eligible and a large squad eagerly following the instructions of Capt. Black, Yale's football horizon takes a decidedly rosy hue.

Harvard.

After two weeks conditioning in Maine the Harvard varsity squad, under Capt. Dadmun and Coach Leary, returned to Cambridge and are firmly intrenched on the home field. Harvard faces a difficult task this year, as of twenty-two men who earned a letter last season only seven remain on the team. They are Capt. Dadmun, Harte, Coolidge, Harris, Taylor, Horween and Robinson, most of whom are practising daily.

Penn State.

Word has come to Penn State's football training quarters that Joe Gill, regarded favorably for a varsity berth this season, will be unable to continue the gridiron sport because of parental objections. For two years Head Coach Harlow has groomed Gill for the right guard position to succeed McDowell, who was graduated in June. With the arrival of O'Donell, Thorpe, Painter, Conover and a batch of freshmen the training table squad now numbers more than sixty candidates.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE INCLUDES NINE GAMES

First Game Carded for September 30 May Not Be Played.

When the curtain is lowered on the Plainfield High School football season this year the Red and Blue eleven should rank well up among the squads of the State. At least, that is the prevailing opinion at the present time.

Just now the schedule includes nine games, four of which will be played out of this city. The first game is carded for September 30, when the East Orange team is down to appear here. Owing to the fact that school does not open until the second of October, it is not probable that the game will be played until later in the season. The schedule as it now stands, is as follows:

September 30—Orange at Plainfield (pending).

October 6—South Side at Plainfield.

October 12—Westfield at Westfield.

October 21—Morris (New York) at Plainfield.

October 28—New Brunswick at New Brunswick.

November 3—Westfield at Plainfield.

November 11—Pennington at Pennington.

November 17—Open.

November 21—St. Benedict's Prep at Plainfield.

November 30—Rahway at Rahway.

A "Friday" Ship.

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who way back in the early years of the republic determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and, thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill fated craft have been received.

Salt in the Spectrum.

The extreme delicacy of the spectrum test is illustrated by the fact stated by Lommel that the three-millionth part of a milligram of a salt of sodium, an imperceptible particle of dust to the naked eye, is yet capable of coloring the flame of a candle yellow and of giving the yellow lines of sodium in the spectroscope. Indeed, sodium in the form of a common salt (sodium chloride) is so universally present as an impalpable dust floating in the air that it is next to impossible to get a spectrum which does not show the sodium lines.

Knew the Brand.

"Is that a Landseer, Mr. Croesus?" asked the visitor, pausing before the painting.

"No," replied the host; "reckon it is a Durham. See how broad it is between the horns, and see the color and curl on its forehead. That's a genuine Durham sure."—Exchange.

Balky Machine.

"Do you want me to watch your automobile?" asked the boy.

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "And if it tries to start up and run away don't stop it. Holler for me, and I'll take a chance on overtaking it and getting the first ride I've had for three or four hours."—Washington Star.

SUGGEST WAYS TO PREVENT FLOODS

East End Civic Association Want Dams Removed and Culverts Enlarged.

MORE LIGHTS WANTED

Reported Attitude of City Council Regarding East End Resented—Proper Stopping Places for Trolleys Are Also Urged.

The question of the prevention of floods was thoroughly discussed at an interesting meeting of the East End Civic Association held in the Netherwood Reformed church last night, at which time several new members were elected. It was shown that the surface water on North avenue was the drainage of one-tenth of the city and a part of Fanwood, and that the cost of carrying it off should therefore not be assessed upon adjacent property-owners.

In this connection it was stated that at a City Council session it had been said that those who suffered from the floods could not complain, that they might remove somewhere else, and had bought property with their eyes open. It was the opinion that if this is the sentiment of the authorities and they wish to depreciate values and depopulate the East End of the city, the citizens of that section will answer this in a way that will not be forgotten.

It was also shown that the dams on Green brook should be removed and the culverts on Cedar brook enlarged. Flood conditions may arise at any time and should this occur in the winter the results would be disastrous. For this reason it was the opinion that the matter should be taken up at once and remedies found. No one seemed to think that the problem is a great one, from either an engineering or legal standpoint, that if the authorities really wish to remedy conditions and realize the importance to a large part of the city of caring for these stream beds, which traverse the entire city, they can soon find a way to do the work.

The members considered the question of unlighted portions of Terrill road and a resolution was adopted, addressed to the City Council, asking that body to confer with the Fanwood Council regarding the proper lighting of the street. Another resolution was adopted asking the Council to provide proper landing places on East Second street, for people getting on and off the trolley cars. During wet weather these places are almost impassable with mud.

JERSEY CENTRAL WILL NOT SHIP MUNITIONS

President Besler Directs Freight Agents to Refuse all Such Business.

President William G. Besler, of the New Jersey Central, today directed all of its freight agents to discontinue handling shipments of explosives to Jersey City. This action follows the protest of the Jersey City authorities against the importation of munitions which might cause another Black Tom disaster.

Immediately following the terrible explosion at Jersey City several weeks ago, the authorities of that place took steps to prevent the shipment of munitions to that point, and officials were employed to hold up any such trains. It was then reported that the railroad companies would test the legality of Jersey City's action.

SECURE GOOD SPEAKERS FOR FEDERATION MEETING

Several very good speakers are promised for the luncheon to be given by the Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary societies at the Park Club on October 19. Mrs J. M. Whiton has charge of the affair which promises to be successful in bringing together the women interested in missions in the various churches in Plainfield.

SOCIAL SEASON OPENS.

The social season at the T. A. B. Club house will be opened on Friday evening, when the first dance of the year will be conducted. Al Squires' orchestra will furnish music for the occasion. About nine hundred invitations have been sent out for this occasion, and it is believed that an unusually large attendance will be the result.

REPORTS OF CONVENTION.

A large attendance for the first meeting since spring marked the session of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., held last night. A letter was read from Captain H. C. Smith, delegate from the local post to the national convention at Kansas City. The captain wrote a glowing account of the old veterans parading the streets of the city, and said that the convention was a great success. The monthly routine business was transacted.

TWO MEETINGS FOR SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Men and Women to Hear Seperate Addresses on Temperance.

The Church Co-operative Association will hold two meetings in the interest of the Temperance movement Sunday afternoon next, at 4 p. m.

One at the Plainfield Theatre, will be for men only. The speakers will be A. M. Harris, Rev. B. S. Hudson, and Rev. W. L. Imes. The men of the Biederwolf choir will sing.

The women's meeting will be held in the First Baptist church, and will be in charge of Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, President of the W. C. T. U., and addressed by Rec. Dr. C. E. Herring and Rev. C. S. Gillespie. The leader of the Biederwolf choir will sing.

Clifford A. Braider has the music in charge.

RAILWAY COMPANIES REFUSE ARBITRATION

Submit Statements on Strike to Public Service Commission.

New York, Sept. 13.—The Interborough Rapid Transit Company represented its attitude toward the street car strike to the Public Service Commission as follows:

"The company cannot arbitrate its right to enter into agreements with 10,306 of its employes out of a total of 11,800, when the employes who have signed are content with those agreements and are endeavoring to carry them out in good faith. The position of the railway company was stated as follows: "The New York Railways Company cannot arbitrate the causeless desertion of its service by its striking employes when their difference with the company were in process of orderly adjustment, under the terms of agreement of August 6, underwritten by the Mayor and the chairman of this commission."

HELD FOR BRUTALLY BEATING AGED MAN

Edward Mitchel, Colored, is Charged as Assailant of Arthur Tompkins.

Charged with brutally beating Arthur Thompkins, a seventy-year-old negro, on West Third street, last Saturday night, Edward Mitchell, also colored, was held in $500 bail when arraigned begore Judge De Meza in city court today, until a week from Friday to await the result of the aged negro's injuries. Up to this afternoon Mitchell had found no bondsman and was still being held at police headquarters. Thompkins' condition became so serious since Saturday that Dr. Currie, the city physician, examined him this morning and had him taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Thompkins appeared in court this morning, but had to be helped by several patrolmen and came near collapsing several times. Several ribs are fractured and he has severe injuries about the head.

After Patrolman Nolan was told by residents of West Third street early Saturday night of an assault on that thoroughfare he went to Thompkin's home, where he lives as a recluse, and found him lying on a cot barely conscious. When Mitchell was brought to his bedside the old man identified him as his assailant. From the stories of those supposed to have seen the affair, it is said Mitchell stepped from the shadow of a house as Tompkins was on his way home and after striking him with a blackjack began kicking him. Upon the cries of bystanders he walked off, leaving the man on the ground.

This is not the first time that Mitchell has been in trouble. About a year ago he was fined by Judge De Meza for knocking a woman down and a few months ago was in court for striking a man.

TROOP D AWAY ON SHORT HIKE

Men Expect to Engage in a Sham Battle While Out in Desert.

SEEING REAL SCENERY

Rainy Season Has a Relapse—One-Horse Circus Comes to Town, But Finds All the Soldiers Broke—Gossip of Camp.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 8.—Carrying rations sufficient for a forty-eight hour outing Troop D left Camp Pirtleville at 7:45 this morning bound for "somewhere in Arizona." The men carried full field equipment including "pup" tents, blankets, field mess kits, sweaters, rifles, ammunition and other smaller necessities. The fact that all but two members of the troop were eligible to participate in the first hike of the encampment speaks well for the physical condition of the men in Troop D. Those barred because of physical defects were John Calder, who is fast recovering from a recent operation, and Private John Dawson, who was kicked in the face by a horse late yesterday afternoon.

A four mule team hitched to an army wagon was used to convey the rations, horse shoer's equipment, tools, etc., and this pulled up in the rear of the caravan. Captain Borden and his official staff, including Lieutenants Charles and Runkle, headed the procession.

Throughout the morning the horses kept up a steady gait through the rough border territory and a stop was made for noon mess about eight miles from Pirtleville. In the afternoon the troop proceeded to its destination, a point near Bisbee and about sixteen miles distant from Douglas. Tonight the guardsmen will sleep in their "pup" tents and it is expected that a sham battle will be fought either early in the morning or on the way home with Troop B, a unit which is also out on a hike. Plenty of blank ammunition is being carried by the Plainfielders and they have been instructed to assume the offensive. Tonight the men are sleeping on their guns ready for action at any time. Guards have been posted at probable points of attack and although tired out by the long and hard ride every soldier is sleeping with one eye open eager to engage in a fray.

Many of the troopers got their first glimpse of real Arizona landscape today. It was a welcome change from the cacti infested rocklands of Mexico which stare us in the face no matter which way we turn at the Douglas camp. The tramp was made through a deserted wilderness but an unobstructed view of the country for miles around was afforded and the men found plenty to interest them in their new surroundings. This hike is but a "toughener" for the fifteen day outing which will probably start the latter part of next week.

The rainy season has either had a relapse in these parts or else a new one has set in. For the past week it has rained every day and when the rain is not falling the temperature is far above the mark in which humans of the east find comfort.

The weekly train out of Mexico landed an unusually large number of refugees at the local Custom House, a man by the name of William Heath, who came here from Plainfield, N. J., ten years ago, having charge of the immigrants upon their arrival. With the refugees came a circus, or at least part of one, consisting of four monkeys, five dogs, a "wild west" horse that looked as though he wouldn't be tempted to run for a peck of oats, and a couple of male and one female performers. After gaining admission the outfit pitched its tents on a desert opposite the Custom House and will make a bid for soldier money during the next week. If the promoter of the scheme had been familiar with conditions in the border camps he would probably have chosen some place else besides Douglas to show in for the boys here have not had a cent in their jeans for days past and are fearful of risking two cents on a postage stamp, let alone squandering a dime for admission to a "one horse" side show, the features of which do not "hold a candle" to some of the horse riding stunts staged by the "rooks" in our own camp.

HE FORCED GREECE IN WAR.

Premier Venizelos is the one man who is responsible for the entry of Greece into the bloody European war. It was he who first gave the Allies permission to land troops at Saloniki. His efforts to throw Greece on the side of the Allies caused the neutrels to force his retirement from office, and his escape from the country, but he is back and in power now, and even King Constantine, to whom he is talking in the picture, is forced to do his bidding and order out the able-bodied men of Greece to make "cannon food" for the Germans.

MAKING HOUSE TO HOUSE REGISTRATION

Law Provides This Must Be Done in Places of Less Than 10,000 Population.

The fact that the polls in North Plainfield were not opened yesterday for registration purposes has resulted in a misunderstanding regarding registration for the coming primary election on Tuesday, September 26. According to the 1916 election laws, boards of registry and election in all municipalities of the State having a population under 10,000, must make a personal canvass from house to house. This was started in the borough yesterday and will be continued for several days until completed.

Any voter in the borough in doubt as to being registered can assure himself of that fact by communicating with the election officers. In municipalities of the State having a population over 10,000 registration must be made at the various polling places. This applies to Plainfield. Yesterday was the first registration day. The other registration days are: September 26, from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., and October 24, from 1 to 9 p. m. This registration is for the general election on November 7.

FIRST REGISTRY DAY BRINGS OUT VOTERS

Liquor Issue Causes Big Increase in Every District in City.

Although the exact figures are not yet available because all the districts had not yet filed their returns with the city clerk, reports from the various voting districts of the city seem to indicate that the first registry day was the largest Plainfield has had since the Geran law went into effect in 1910. The coming Presidential election, together with the liquor license issue that directly affects Plainfield, are given as the chief reasons for the big increase over the registration days of previous years.

Every district reported a large number of registrations, but in several there was an increase of fifty per cent. When the city clerk hears from all the districts in the city it is expected that an increase of between twenty-five and thirty per cent. will be found for the total registration of the city.

The fact that there is opposition for councilmanic honors in all of the wards but the Third is partly responsible for the unusual interest. With the license question the main issue at the coming election it has caused practically every voter to turn to register and with a primary day and the third registration day yet to come before the election a still larger increase can be expected.

"Free and Equal."

The author of the phrase "All men are born free and equal" was John Lowell, a Massachusetts jurist and statesman, who was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1743.

John Lowell was the first descendant of Percival Lowell, the English founder of the famous New England family, to gain wide fame. He was the son of the first minister of Newburyport and after studying law settled in Boston. He was elected to the convention which framed the constitution of Massachusetts in 1780 and was a member of the committee which formulated that document. He insisted upon the insertion in the bill of rights of the phrase "All men are born free and equal" for the purpose, as he avowed at the time, of abolishing slavery in Massachusetts. It was largely through his efforts that Massachusetts put an end to negro slavery in 1783.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Roll Call of Friends.

Have you ever sat alone in the evening looking over the pictures and the books associated with the friends of yore? In the busy whirl of life is there not a joy in calling the roll of old friends and wondering where this one and that one may be? Then comes that moment of retrospective and introspective eulogy to absent friends, and wells of gratitude are opened as we think how greatly various friends have influenced our pathway on life's journey; how this one or that one may have unconsciously determined the crisis of a career.

We become mellowed when we think of those passed beyond. The memory of them comes to us gently and softly as the sparkle of the eye and the outlines of the individuality are recalled from the haze of past years.—National Magazine.
